Plane Wreck Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wreckage of a California plane that disappeared Tuesday night on a flight from Princeton to Vancouver was found Saturday 6,200 feet up the side of a mountain west of Princeton.

With it were the bodies of George Menary, 48, his wife Joan, 45, and David Willamont, 23, a family friend. All were from Reseda, a suburb of Los Angeles.

TORONTO FAMILY

The Menarys had lived in Toronto.

The RCAF here said a spotter aboard an auxiliary squadron plane first saw the wreckage on the side of Mount Tulameen, 17 miles west of Princeton.

CHECKED BY COPTER

A helicopter flew to the spot and confirmed the plane was the missing craft and that all aboard were dead — possibly killed in the crash.

Officials said the pilot apparently hit Tulameen as he climbed through heavy rain or cloud. It has been wet all week in the area, about 175 miles east of here, the rain and low cloud hampering search efforts.

TAKEN TO HOPE

The RCAF said the bodies would be brought out one at a time and taken to Hope.

There was an earlier suggestion Saturday the plane had gone down in the Harrison Lake area, 75 miles east of here.

HEARD WHINE

Mrs. Fred Miller told the RCAF she had heard a loud clear whine of an aircraft engine over her house for 15 minutes early Wednesday morning, then the sound stopped.

Negroes To Defy Ban on Marches

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP)—Negro leaders, defying the national guard's ban on demonstrations, served notice Saturday night they will resume street marches Monday in an effort to break down racial barriers.

"Our people are restless. They want their freedom and they are determined to acquire those legitimate rights which have been too long denied them," said a statement issued by the Cambridge Nonviolent Action Committee.

The committee is headed by Mrs. Gloria Richardson, militant integrationist leader.

What will happen when the national guard confronts the demonstrators remains to be seen. Friday night about 250 marchers dispersed when Brig. Gen. George M. Gelson quietly notified them they would be violating militia law.

Monday's demonstration might be a repeat performance of this, but that the integrationists would later press their drive in such a way that the guard officers might feel impelled to arrest them.

RESERVED PRAISE

Their statement Saturday night praised the guard for its "impartial" handling of the tense situation, but accused Gov. Mollard Tawes of "inaction and lack of positive leadership."

"We strongly urge," the statement said, "that he call a special session of the general assembly or issue an executive order to ban racial discrimination in places of public accommodation or come himself to Cambridge to re-establish negotiations."

Two Fugitives Elude Police Dragnet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two armed fugitives from the provincial jail in Brandon still were eluding police dragnets at mid - afternoon Saturday as Manitoba's most intensive manhunt in recent years continued after more than 40 hours.

RCMP and city police in Winnipeg, where the search was concentrated, appeared to be virtually without clues in their search for Bruce Kaiser, 17, and Robert McKenny, 23, who have been loose from Brandon jail since 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

TO APARTMENT BLOCK

Teams of detectives converged on the mid-town bridge area before daylight Saturday when a taxi driver reported he had taken the men to a plush apartment block near the river bank.

A police launch began skirting the banks of the river at 2 a.m., while city detectives and RCMP were carrying shotguns and .38 calibre revolvers in a futile effort to locate the men in the river area.

POSSE GROWS

The posse grew to 75 RCMP officers and some 30 Winnipeg detectives after it was learned the fugitives fled to Winnipeg early Friday, taking with them in different laps three persons as hostages.

All three—first a mother and her eight-year-old son, and then a 15-year-old youth—later were released unharmed.

The pair climbed over a 13-foot fence to make good their escape from the Brandon jail. Later, in their getaway car abandoned in Winnipeg, police found firearms and ammunition and said the fugitives still may have pistols.

Breaking into the Brandon home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Solomon near the jail, the pair took Mrs. Solomon, 35, and her son Darryl with them in the Solomon's car and drove off.

Reaching Firdale, a tin ycommunity 35 miles east of Brandon, the fugitives abandoned the stolen car and their captives.

Garbage Under Scrutiny Of Electronic Computer

VANCOUVER (CP)—This may be distasteful, but electronic computers are to be employed here to streamline the city's garbage collection system.

Engineers will tell city council Tuesday that it isn't enough to count cans and divide by the number of man-hours. It requires a half-year study by the B.C. Research Council at a cost of $6,000.

Included in the electronic brain's answers will be data on how often garbage trucks show up in what lanes.

Vital Talks in Moscow

WILL RUSSIA TURN WEST?

China Berated

Soviet Party Stops Short Of Big Break

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party, declaring that Russian and Chinese views on war and peace remain diametrically opposed, Saturday accused Chinese representatives of aggravating Soviet-Chinese differences at current talks in Moscow.

In a sweeping indictment of Red China's policies in Communist and world affairs, the Soviet party also accused Peking of trying to worsen U.S.-Soviet relations and heat up the cold war.

The Russians stopped short, however, of an open break with the Chinese, indicating the Kremlin would wait for Red China to make any such move.

"The immediate future," the Soviet statement declared, "will show if the Chinese comrades agree to build our relations on the basis of what unites and not disunites us."

DON'T WANT BREAK

Red China declared Saturday it did not want a break with Moscow, and held open the door for a resumption of talks if the present ones fail.

The Soviet party central committee berated the Communist Chinese leadership in a 35,000-word open letter addressed to "all the Communist parties" of the world. It was published in Sunday's issue of Pravda.

MIKOYAN PRESENT

The statement was issued a few hours after deputy premier Anastas I. Mikoyan, often the Kremlin's chief troubleshooter, took a hand in the faltering talks.

Mikoyan's role in Saturday's session was not known, but there was speculation he might have been seeking a face-saving way to break off the talks with the Chinese before the Russians sit down Monday with U.S. and British representatives to discuss a nuclear test-ban treaty.

U.S. ACCUSED

Red China meanwhile accused the United States of making every effort to disrupt the Soviet-Chinese talks and said Washington is counting on a Moscow-Peking split.

The Soviet party statement laid bare its power struggle with Communist China, revealing for the first time the extent of its cutback in aid to Peking, and accused the Chinese of trying to split the Soviet bloc and subvert the world Communist movement.

NAMED OPENLY

Also for the first time, the Russians openly named the Chinese in the ideological dispute and directly rebutted their arguments.

The Soviet letter vigorously rejected Chinese criticisms of Premier Khrushchev's major policies -peaceful co - existence, disarmament, and destalinization.

MIKOYAN

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

The situation now developing is potentially one of the most important to arise in the cold war in several years. It could lead into a complete and final split between Moscow and Peking. And it could begin a new period of easier relations between Russia and the West.

NOT BETTING

Western experts are not yet betting firmly on this outcome. Russia might break with Red China without becoming particularly friendly with the United States. The present Moscow-Peking quarrel could conceivably be patched up, although the best informed Westerners think it has already passed the point of no return.

MAY CHANGE

But the possibilities of change are considered great. (See also Page 5.)

At the same time, the United States and Britain were holding preliminary strategy talks in London in preparation for the conference, officially on a nuclear test ban treaty.

The London talks were conducted by Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman, and by Lord Hailsham, Britain's science minister.

CO-ORDINATE APPROACH

Harriman flew to London early in order to co-ordinate the U.S.-British approach to the negotiations. The three-power meeting is expected to last 10 days or two weeks. Harriman and Hailsham are due here today.

Moscow insisted that the talks be secret and the United States and Britain bowed to the pressure. How long the secrecy cloak will hold is a guess.

Heavy Vote Likely

VANCOUVER (CP)—The advance poll indicates there is going to be a heavy turnout in the Columbia by-election Monday. (See Capital Report, Page 5.)

Thirty votes have been cast in the first two days of the advance poll, 26 in Golden and four in Invermere. No figures were available for Saturday's advance polling.

Returning Officer Thomas Purdie said past advance poll statistics weren't readily available but they are "away up" this time.

"This indicates a heavy turnout," he said.

Planes Seek Climbers

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Search efforts were stepped up Saturday for seven members of the Harvard University Mountaineering Club last seen Tuesday making their way up Mount McKinley's Wickersham Wall.

Four members of the Alaska Rescue group flew to Talkeetna to join bush pilot Don Sheldon in an aerial search of the northern face of the 20,320-foot mountain.

Three Boys Located 2,000 Feet in Mine

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three teen-aged boys, crawling some 2,000 feet to safety, were rescued from an old abandoned coal mine Saturday. They hadn't been seen since Thursday.

The boys were rushed to St. Clair memorial hospital where the father of one said:

"They all looked bad—drawn, worn out and dirty. But they're in good shape."

Robert Abbott, 15; Danny O'Kan, 13, and Billy Burke, 13, were led out of the mine within 2 ½ hours after they were discovered.

UNDER OBSERVATION

A hospital spokesman said Abbott and O'Kan were in good condition while Burke was satisfactory. All were admitted for observation. The spokesman said Burke's chest would be X rayed to determine if he was sick or injured.

CHANCE FIND

Inspector Everett Turner of the U.S. bureau of mines credited the discovery of a firecracker with leading rescuers to the boys in the mine containing lethal black damp gas.

"About two hours before we found them," Turner told a reporter "we had indications they were in the mine. Jennings Breedon and Jim Hutchens found a firecracker. They reported to me and I went on in."

BREATHING APPARATUS

The inspectors crawled and dragged themselves some 2,000 feet to the boys, then had breathing apparatus brought to the trio.

Asked what had happened, Abbott said:

"We made the wrong turn. We got lost."

Turner and Hutchens reached the boys after three days of exhaustive searching in the mine in suburban Castle Shannon.

Russia Avoids Open Break

firmed avowed Soviet policy that Russia will never use nuclear weapons unless attacked.

The statement steered clear of any sharp indication that the talks might be broken off although it seemed highly improbable the two sides will carry them to a peaceful conclusion at this time.

It was possible Mikoyan went to the meeting at the request of Khrushchev for a fresh look at the bogged down negotiations on whether Khrushchev's policy of peaceful coexistence or Peking's stand for violent revolutions is communism's best route for world domination.

TO ANSWER CHARGE

But it was also possible that Mikoyan went there to answer in a new manner the charge published in the Peoples Daily in Peking accusing the Soviet negotiators of raising new obstacles to agreement.

The paper charged that the Russians are "inflaming feeling against China.

"Seeing this, people are fully justified in worrying whether the Central Committee of the Communist party of the Soviet Union wants to push Chinese-Soviet relations to the brink of rupture," it added.

NO COMMENT

As usual, there was no official comment from either side here. After a morning recess, the Russian and Chinese delegates drove into the big reception hall on the hill above the city where the meetings have been held irregularly since July 5. They met for about three hours then broke up.

Reliable sources said that on the Russian side there was the gloomiest sort of atmosphere as the conversations entered their second week.

The apparent growing crisis in the talks took on especially new significance this weekend for on Monday the Soviet Union begins critical new talks here with Britain and the United States on the problems of a nuclear test ban.

Failure in talks with Red China would be a shattering shock to the Communist camp.

Turkey Says No

ANKARA (AP) — Turkey has politely but firmly rejected a Russian proposal that the Mediterranean Sea be declared a nuclear-free zone.

Meat Union Plans Injunction Appeal

Strikers at the Alberta Meat Market at least want to be able to picket the market's trucks when they are picking up meat and making deliveries, a union official said last night.

Local 212 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America will appeal an injunction against the union Friday before Justice R. A. Wootton.

OPINION GIVEN

George Johnston of Vancouver, secretary of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, said the union wants the whole injunction set aside, but thinks it should at least be allowed to picket trucks of the meat market.

He said the market has accused the union of picketing firms supplied by the market, and its suppliers.

ARE PART

But Mr. Johnston said in certain instances the union was not doing this, but picketing the market's trucks which the union contends are part of the market's operation.

E. E. Pearlman, lawyer for the market, will oppose the application to set aside the injunction.

MARKET CLAIM

It does not prohibit regular picketing of the meat market but only certain activities which the market alleges the union has been carrying on illegally.

Donald McTaggart of Vancouver is lawyer for the union. The strike began May 7.

How Far Should Doctors Go Into Patient's Affairs?

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

How far should a doctor probe into a patient's personal affairs? Farther, perhaps, than is always easy or comfortable.

The thought is brought to mind by some remarks in Medical Times by Dr. Leonard T. Maholick, supported by Dr. David S. Shapiro, chief clinical psychologist at Bradley Medical Centre.

Emotional problems can have all sorts of bearing on physical ailments. That's hardly a secret. But embarrassment, or sometimes feelings of guilt, can lead many patients to keep their emotional turmoil to themselves.

GREAT PROBLEM

Dr. Maholick cites the case of a woman who had chronic headaches for 15 years without telling her physician that one of the great problems in her life was an intensely frustrating sex relationship.

Job frustration is a common situation. A person may not like his job; may feel his advancement is too slow. He may have been overlooked in favor of a younger man.

With the facts, it is possible to do something. Without them, there isn't any way of getting at the problem effectively.

Some patients, the article points out correctly, are "surprisingly frank." Others feel they have no right to say anything that involves anyone else. This is not a correct attitude. We all have to live with other people, and some problems are pretty much bound to arise at times.

REMAIN SECRET

If you are bedevilled by some personal or family matter, tell your doctor with the assurance that it will remain a secret. Just getting it off your chest may be of some help. Or in some cases he may be able to suggest counsel by a specialist of one kind or another, perhaps not a medical specialist, but someone skilled in handling family problems.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had ptosis of my left eyelid all my life and I am now 29. I was told if I did not outgrow it by 16, I could have it corrected by surgery but my parents did not consider it important. Now I am married and have four children (whose eyes are all perfectly normal) and would like to have the operation if it isn't too costly. Can you tell me how much it would cost?—R. G.

Ptosis (dropping) of the eyelid often can be corrected by either a plastic surgeon or by an ophthalmologist. It will require hospitalization, and the cost will vary depending on locality, so check directly with a surgeon in your vicinity.

Dear Dr. Molner: My skin turns a dark brown, especially in winter, around the area where my bra strap fits. My breast is very heavy. I have been told this is a sign of liver trouble.—MRS. W. V.

No, it's not "a sign of liver trouble," but some people, especially brunettes, will have changes in skin color from prolonged irritation or pressure. Try for a bra which eases the pressure at that area. Perhaps losing a bit of weight might be sufficient.

Brains Buzzing At Fleet School

Brains are buzzing at HMCS Naden's fleet school, nerve centre of Pacific Command's training program, where more than 750 naval and reserve trainees, including Wrens, will do their summer stint of seamanship and study.

"Our courses are fairly intense," said Lt.-Cmdr. L. J. Parry, reserve staff officer. "They come here to learn and they learn."

July and August are the busiest months at the school because that is when reserve officers and seamen and Regular Officer Training Plan, University Naval Training Division and Sea Cadets spend their holidays in training.

ON-JOB TRAINING

New additions to the curriculum this year are the courses for Wrens, the commander said.

Nearly 30 will take instruction varying from on-the-job training in the supply school to medical assistant and operational plot courses.

The courses vary in length according to groups and breadth according to skills required.

BASIC COURSE

About 30 ordinary seamen from western reserve divisions are enrolled every two weeks in July and August for a basic training course.

The two-week training is concentrated on seamanship and communications, both theoretical and practical.

A nine-hour day of study is the basis of the course. Compulsory swimming, boat-pulling and softball are added for after-hours.

SPARE TIME

The seamen are encouraged to spend their spare time at the Maritime Museum or wandering aboard ships of the fleet.

"We try to give them the feeling of the navy," Lt.-Cmdr. Parry said, "and how to get used to being with people."

Some are already aboard HMCS Mackenzie, Skeena and Oriole.

"They do as the ship's company does," the commander said. "They take all duties, lookout, the wheel. They actually become members of the ship's company while they are aboard."

DAMAGE CONTROL

Reserve officers studying at the school might be on courses of fire-fighting, damage control, communications, engineering or administration, he said.

UNTD cadets, living at Royal Roads, take courses varying from two to six weeks and including naval engineering, communications and general knowledge.

SEA CADETS

This summer 55 will work for their acting sub-lieutenant commissions.

More than 100 sea cadets from B.C. and Alberta are studying practical seamanship at the school.

After spending their first summer at HMCS Quadra, the sea cadet camp at Comox, they come to Esquimalt for their second-year course of six weeks.

RECORD NUMBER

A record number of ROTP cadets, 240, are at Royal Roads. Taking pilotage training are 146 in frigates of the Pacific Command.

Eighteen senior cadets from HMCS Venture, now on summer leave, will return in August to continue professional training before graduation as sub-lieutenants in December.

Lasting Education Centre UBC Centennial Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $2,115,000 centre for continuing education has been approved as the University of British Columbia's national centennial project.

The university announced Saturday that plans for the project to mark Canada's 100th birthday include a conference centre comprising resident accomodation for 76 persons, four lecture and six seminar rooms capable of accommodating groups of varying sizes, a 350-seat auditorium and a physical training centre.

The conference centre would provide facilities for the teaching of professional technical and cultural subjects while the physical training centre would have facilities for research on fitness and the training of specialists in amateur sport and leisure activities.

The university has submitted a brief outlining the project to the National Centennial Administration in Ottawa for consider tion. The brief, signed by UBC chancellor Phyllis Ross and President John B. Macdonald, said a rapidly changing society has given new importance and urgency to continuing education.

The brief said: "Educational institutions are challenged to meet this growing need to help equip adults for their changing role in citizenship, for self-improvement and for continuing professional education."

Nanaimo and Back

Valiant Sets Date For Record Bid

Colonist Walkathon winner Alan Valiant will make an attempt on an 80-year-old non-stop long distance walking record Aug. 1.

He plans to leave Victoria at 8 a.m. that day and walk non-stop to Nanaimo and back, over the Malahat, returning to Victoria by 4 p.m. Aug. 2, a distance of about 138 miles.

"I'm working for the department of national defence at HMCS Naden and I'll train by walking to work and home again each day," Valiant said last night.

FIRMS AGREE

"The distance is about 10 miles each way."

Several Victoria firms have agreed to back his attempt and members of the Torque Mates Car Club will escort him in relays during the long walk.

Valiant is attempting to beat a record set April 6 and 7, 1883, by C. A. Harriman at Truckee, Calif. Harriman walked 121 miles, 385 yards, non-stop.

ASK RITHETS!

You are invited to submit questions on insurance and similar matters for inclusion in this column. The origin of such queries is kept entirely confidential.

Q. I am planning a trip to Europe, is there an insurance policy that will give me protection for my effects while travelling?

A. Yes. There is a "Travellers Baggage Policy" usually taken out in conjunction with a "Travellers Accident Policy." These are in force for the duration of your journey. For approximately $10.00 per month you carry protection to the amount of $500 on the personal effects of you and your dependents. $5,000 Travellers Accident insurance and $500 medical expenses. You are covered anywhere in the world.

Soviet Master Spy Named

Espionage 'Goof' Miffs U.S.

LONDON (AP)—British newspapers Saturday reported a tiff between U.S. and British security officials over disclosure of the name of Soviet master spy Anatoli Dolnytsin, who defected to the West.

The Americans were reported claiming the British goofed in one of the West's big cloak and dagger coups and laid Dolnytsin open to greater danger of being kidnapped or killed by Soviet agents believed on the prowl for him in Britain.

ANOTHER BLACKOUT

British security chiefs clamped another news blackout on the circumstances of the case. The defection had been kept a secret since Dolnytsin came over to the West 18 months ago.

Dolnytsin is said to have arranged his defection through a U.S. Embassy in an Allied country and spent a year in the United States being quizzed by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

JUSTICE NORRIS

. . . may not work

After a British newspaper inquired at the defence ministry about a report that a high-level Soviet spy had defected, an official account was released on Thursday giving Dolnytsin's name and implying the defection was recent. Later, the Defence Ministry distributed a note asking newspaper to withhold the story.

A later notice, however, told editors they could publish some of the information, but must withhold Dolnytsin's name.

BY TELEGRAPH

The Daily Telegraph, nevertheless, published the name in its Saturday morning edition.

The fact that Dolnytsin's name became public was expected to raise a storm in Parliament. Labor party opposition members were preparing a series of questions for the government.

TO CHANGE FACE

It was believed the Soviet spy would undergo plastic surgery to make him unrecognizable even to those who knew him during the eight months or so that he was on a tour of duty in London.

British security agents are said to be sure that Soviet agents are trying to trace Dolnytsin to his carefully guarded hideout.

SEVERE BLOW

The Daily Express said an attempt already may have been made on Dolnytsin's life. His defection dealt a severe blow to Soviet intelligence and the Russians will want him eliminated—for revenge and as a warning to others, informants said.

The defector was reported to have given Russian military secrets and details of spy networks and undercover agents working for the Soviet Union to both the United States and British governments.

People Betrayed —Douglas

GOLDEN (CP)—New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas charged Saturday the B.C.-Ottawa agreement on Columbia River development is a betrayal of the Canadian people.

Mr. Douglas said his party is doing everything possible in the House of Commons to hold up settlement of a treaty with the U.S. until there has been a reappraisal of the whole question of Columbia development.

He said Canada should launch a new study of alternatives to the present Columbia development plan. The plan should enable Canada to retain all the power from the project and authority for its disposal.

British Medicare Better

By ANTHONY WHITE

OXFORD, England (AP) — Britain's health service — Compulsory, publicly-financed system of medical care for all, rich and poor—is 15 years old this month.

A prominent British physician has pronounced the service fit and flourishing, though "it is abused by some people."

Said Dr. Alfred B. Davies in a weekend interview:

HAS ITS FAULTS

"The national health service is the most comprehensive medical care system in the world. It will probably be with us forever. It has its faults. But it is evolving all the time. Gradually it is getting better."

The system was introduced by the post-war Labor government July 5, 1948. It has since become an essential part of almost every Briton's way of life and of every political party's election planning.

CROWDED OFFICES

There are about 50,000 doctors in Britain. About half are family doctors. These are the men on call day and night. They do most of their work in crowded offices where medical aid—a splint for a broken leg, a wonder drug or a simple sleeping pill — are available for the asking.

The cost of the system comes out of the people's pay-cheques. But a man who is unable to pay can qualify for the most expensive treatment in the most modern clinics.

THESE SLIGHT

There are extra charges in some cases, but these are slight.

The system currently costs the nation about £900,000,000 ($2,700,000,000) a year.

Davies is a sworn supporter of state medical care.

"The vast majority of British doctors are," he said.

RATHER RARE

One of the debit items is a certain restriction on a doctor's freedom to practice where he wishes. And, while anyone paying professional prices can receive private care, private rooms in hospitals are rather rare.

"On the credit side is the principle of the thing—the idea that no one need want for medical care," the doctor said.

The government has announced a 10-year plan to build new hospitals and modernize old ones. It will cost about £70,000,000 ($210,000,000).

A committee of the British Medical Association is studying the future development of the role of the hard-working general practitioner.

World Censorship Tried Twice By Angry de Gaulle

By DON SHANNON

PARIS—Two incidents in the past 10 days have brought to the surface incredible attempts by President de Gaulle to censor news not only for French citizens but on an international scale as well.

Government power over the state-owned radio and television monopoly is traditional here, along with arrests, seizures and penalities against over-critical journalists.

In the latest of such cases, Mme. Jeanne Marechal, publisher of the satirical weekly F. Canard Enchaine, has been stripped of her voting rights for five years because of an article judged to be an affront to the de Gaulle regime.

The first of the two new ventures by the de Gaulle government occurred at Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Powers, Europe. A French general spotted a news item posted on a bulletin board and demanded an explanation from a U.S. officer on the public information staff.

The item was a news service article which reported in effect France would not make any immediate move against two French-based RCAF wings in the wake of Canada's acceptance of nuclear warheads.

Thumbtack Over Not

By accident, a clerk had put a thumbtack over the word "not," leading a hasty reader to the conclusion the de Gaulle government was seeking to exile its Canadian allies on the same grounds that it banned U.S. nuclear bombers in 1959.

Once the president's blood pressure returned to normal, he insisted further such articles about France be submitted for prior review to the French delegation to the allied headquarters.

Earlier, the government refused to permit the Columbia Broadcasting System to use the Pleumeur-Bobou satellite receiving station for the Telstar transmission to Europe of a trans-Atlantic discussion.

A Frank View

PREMIER MANNING of Alberta is honest if not diplomatic in expressing his doubts about the federal government plan to set up a royal commission on biculturalism in Canada. He says that if the object is to give some form of official recognition to a dual French and English culture—presumably meaning throughout the country—"we suggest that this is unrealistic and impracticable and we doubt that it would meet with any widespread public acceptance."

The Social Credit premier of course can speak with less political inhibition in this respect than could for instance a Liberal or Conservative or even a New Democrat. He has widened the split between Quebec and western Social Credit adherents, but this will be of little consequence in a party which now has so little hope of ever forming a national government. It is to Mr. Manning's credit nevertheless that he has spoken his mind frankly, for his doubts must be the misgivings of a large part of the English-speaking populace of Canada about the practical value of a royal commission study if it is to be oriented toward an extension of French Canadian influence in the life of the country.

That influence already is disproportionate, in fact, and has long been so. Witness the current example of Quebec holding up and perhaps in the end completely frustrating the widely-welcomed federal plan to establish a development loan fund for municipalities. This Quebec opposes to the disadvantage of the majority of Canadians because it doesn't want its municipal children to take candies from Uncle Ottawa, a selfish attitude which nevertheless a government less hasty than Mr. Pearson's might have foreseen and tried to deal with in advance.

But in any case, how could the role of the French culture and language be made greater in Canada to the definite advantage of the country as a whole? Would it be beneficial to bar from the higher ranks of central administration those whose other qualifications were of surpassing quality, but who lacked French? Would it make for economy and efficiency to have the federal civil service concentrate on improving its bilingual capacity? Would it serve any useful purpose to have French recognized and used in documents as another official language in the English-speaking provinces, or would it be only an expensive complication?

At the core of the matter is the fact that this is mainly an English-speaking continent in a world where English is the dominant language of international understanding. The Canadian who speaks only French is thus limited in his advancement; he cannot go far without feeling the need for English. The English-speaking Canadian in most cases is under no such compulsion; he can rise to the top in almost any field without need of French. Nor is anything a royal commission might suggest, nor anything a government might do, likely to alter greatly this situation.

The desirability of more Canadians knowing both languages—and other tongues too—is indisputable. Mr. Manning's view however must be taken as a realistic one, and a royal commission on biculturalism even if directed toward giving the French heritage a larger place in Canadian life could hardly for long obscure that fact. Indeed it would seem the outcome of such a commission must be either disappointing for French Canada or more divisive of the national interest than is the present discontent of Quebec.

For Local Use

HAVING RUN through his complete range of invective against his enemies during the past year, Cuban Premier Castro is not only seeking new targets for his abuse but new words and phrases as well.

The mundane curses of "imperialist dogs," "fascist beasts," "power hungry pigs," and even "insignificant worms" have long since been retired in an exhausted state by him and his ministers.

This week the bearded leader not only found a new whipping boy but also what appears to be the beginning of a fine new line of billingsgate.

Turning his mouth closer to home, Dr. Castro held forth against the evils of his own followers in Havana. The capital city of his domain, he held, was full of "government parasites" and "chow hounds." Just who his ire will splash on next is anybody's guess, but it appears obvious that his new vocabulary is designed for home consumption rather than for export.

Unwise Taunt

PREMIER BENNETT has a number of attributes which he puts to good use in managing provincial affairs; but grace does not seem to be one of them.

There should be some degree of courtesy in the reference of party leaders to each other. To call Mr. Davie Fulton a "political coward," as he has done, is inconsistent with the kind of dignity that goes either with his position or his assurance. It reminds one also of the "dares" of juvenile behaviour.

Mr. Bennett was careful to point out he did not mean that the new Conservative provincial leader was a "physical coward," diplomatically implying perhaps that he would prefer not to meet him in a dark lane on a dark night; Mr. Fulton is 16 years younger and looks much more fit.

But Mr. Fulton's choice of the Kamloops riding in which to do battle with the doughty Mr. Gaglardi at the next provincial general election, rather than enter the lists in tomorrow's Columbia byelection, makes Mr. Bennett's accusation rather foolish. There is no lack of political hardihood here.

Mr. Fulton's own long record in the House of Commons, moreover, exemplifies the political courage which possibly Mr. Bennett considers to be his own prerogative.

The premier should be more careful of the words he uses, however. It is only a matter of time until Mr. Fulton enters the James Bay assembly, and thoughts of that alone could be enough to make Mr. Bennett tremble politically.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax . . ."

By TOM TAYLOR

AS WE took pains to note in passing the other day, a certain man is so averse to the color green that he won't cut his own lawn, albeit he could cure his complex by casting it in cement of a different hue. My own concern about lawns is not that these are green, 'twould seem peculiar if they were pink, for instance, but that one must play valet to them so frequently. As with my hair, cutting the grass seems only to invite endless repetition.

I got a new perspective on grass, nevertheless, via a phrase in a film commentary I heard last week, and which if you attend the current festival at the Beacon Hill bandshell on July 24 you may absorb with equal pleasure, during the depiction of cattle ranching in the Kamloops area of British Columbia.

Incidentally there was food for thought as well as human sustenance in this interesting and beautifully photographed essay on cattlemen and their charges, so that one may when next consuming a nice juicy steak recall the intriguing nature of the processes that lead to one's culinary enjoyment.

The commentator spoke of "grass molding the contours of the land," and the scenic splendour of this documentary film, a production of our own prize-winning National Film Board, well bore out his remark, as well as reminding us that all the green pastures are not far far away but instead within our own confines.

It would be more correct perhaps to say that grass reveals the contours rather than molds them; the outline of hill or valley is always there but hidden often by the highrise growth of tree and scrub. Grass clings closely to the form and displays the latter in its infinite variety of shape. Ladies in particular know how well a close-fitting garment may disclose enticing configuration.

So it is with nature, and the beneficence of the green herbage we call grass. If there is a demerit in the uplands that provide the vistas which arrest our eyes on Vancouver Island it is that so often these are covered with trees that conceal the contours. The beauty of shape and form, while there, is hidden from our eyes. Our hills of home we see only in obscuring mass.

Time and the logger tends to correct this assemblage and bare the hillside to the encroaching and paternal blessing of grass. Then it is it spreads its fair covering, subduing the ugly scars and glossing them with the green patina without which this world would be an arid place indeed. It is not for nothing that we say of a fine man that where he has trod there the earth is the more green.

Grass is a healing influence. It soothes the eye as well as charming it by unveiling the contours. In this sense the film commentator was correct, for the grass he spoke of and showed us served also to mold the mind to the mood and theme of the picturesque human activity he was describing. And if there were no grass, remember, we wouldn't be able to savor a sirloin steak.

I confess with due humility that not before have I thought of grass in quite such philosophic vein, my perspective having been foreshortened by the great plebeian compulsion merely to trim its inches. When next I employ the lawn mower I shall do so with the reverence worthy of the subject matter of this morning's causerie.

Dateline: Europe

The Invisible Presence

By OTTO VON HABSBURG

PRESIDENT Kennedy's visit to Europe was a great popular success. The masses spontaneously showed the representatives of the United States Europe's solidarity with the New World. On this point Mr. Kennedy can have no more doubts. If he had visited other Western countries than those on his agenda the results would not have been different. What a contrast to the groups of slaves compelled by the police to stand on the streets and places of East Berlin during Khrushchev's visit!

In striking contradiction with the warmth of the greeting was the sad political picture. In Germany the American president was wedged between a government which has only three more months to live and the man of tomorrow whose team and policies are still in the making. In Great Britain he talked with a courageous old man, who fights desperately in the face of almost inevitable defeat. Having run out of luck, Macmillan's government is only a shadow and everybody knows that, despite legal fictions, it can no longer speak for the country. Whatever will follow will be radically different from the present. In Italy finally the Leone cabinet was at best a caretaker administration unable to take any major decision.

Mr. Kennedy's diplomatic negotiations could hence not go very far. The assurances he got had no definite nature. The main problems, the future of NATO and nuclear armaments, could not be solved.

But even if the political picture had not been so dismal the conversations would have been inconclusive without the presence of General de Gaulle. In all the discussions, though absent, he was the principal figure which literally obsessed the minds. Everybody was looking toward Paris and consulting the Elyseeologues. Unfortunately no one found the formula to include France into the talks concerning problems which can not be resolved without her.

In the nuclear field it is a grotesque fiction to pretend that there are only three atomic powers in the world. There are already four and there will be five tomorrow when China graduates. Nothing is more dangerous in international affairs than the policy of the ostrich.

The same thing holds true for NATO. A Western alliance is simply inconceivable without France's participation. To ignore this fact is to commit a political error very similar to the economic blunder which was made in organizing EFTA. A working Atlantic system can not leave a gaping hole between the Channel and the Pyrenees. It would be absurd to pretend that General de Gaulle's justified demands for an adaptation of the pacts to the realities of 1963 show that he is turning his back on the community of free nations. Exactly the opposite is true.

Mr. Kennedy's trip was useful from two points of view. It proved that America can safely count on Europe. But it has also shown that in these decisive hours when the great diplomatic discussions with the U.S.S.R. approach, it is vital to reopen talks between Paris and Washington.

The American president will certainly have understood by the invisible presence at each one of his meetings that there is no Europe without France. Paris on the other hand must know that the time has come to play an active role in the reorganization of the Western community by unifying Europe politically and thus securing its presence at the coming conferences. Now that Mr. Kennedy has returned to his country, far-reaching initiatives are called for before the end of the summer. They are absolutely feasible since the real attitudes on both sides are much more realistic and constructive than the sombre predictions of our professional defeatists.

VICTORIANS like everyone else were following with excitement the last, North American stages of the flight of Howard Hughes around the world, 25 years ago.

The multi-millionaire sportsman and four companies cut the round-the-world record in half, flying a 14,824-mile circuit in three days, 19 hours and 14 minutes. Wiley Post in a solo dash had flown over virtually the same route in 1933 in seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes.

Edmonton and Winnipeg airports were ready to refuel Hughes' two-engine plane should it land there, but he interrupted the flight from Fairbanks to New York at Minneapolis instead.

Second anniversary of the installation of the Christ Church Cathedral bells was celebrated a quarter-century ago by the ringing of a "touch" of 1,008 changes of grandsire triples, with then-Bishop H. E. Sexton among the interested visitors in the bell-tower.

A big windjammer, the full-rigged British ship Bay of Biscay, came in to Royal Roads "with all sail bulging ahead of a 30-mile gale of wind."

Sixty-two days out of Callao, Peru—a comparatively slow time for such ships, the Colonist noted—the Bay of Biscay was to discharge ballast and then to be towed to Vancouver to pick up a full cargo of lumber from the Hastings Mill for the United Kingdom.

British Columbia was claimed to consume more beer and wine than any other province of Canada, 75 years ago.

"The diagrams placed on the bulletin board at Frank Campbell's corner yesterday, and which illustrates the amount of beer, spirits and wine consumed by the different provinces since Confederation, have attracted considerable attention inasmuch as British Columbia heads the list with 72,000 gallons of beer, leaving all competitors far behind.

"In wine this province also heads the list, but we can only claim second place in spirits. Quebec holds first place in the latter beverage."

An election campaign for the Vancouver Island's Assembly was getting under way 100 years ago—and as was the fashion, expression of opinion knew little restraint.

The Colonist for instance had this to say about Mr. W. A. G. Young as a candidate:

"We have the address of Mr. Young before the public at last. The address is like what Mr. Cary said of this man—'there is nothing in him.' There is nothing in it—verily nothing.

"If it only had the Royal Arms of the Austrian or Russian Ambassador at its head, it might pass as a rude emanation of either of those benighted governments . . .

"We had really believed that Mr. Cary had spoken disparagingly of Mr. Young. But we confess that he was right for once in his life; and when Dr. Helmcken wished him out of the Colony, we confess that the doctor had good reason to express such a desire . . ."

A Gordon for Me?

Lochinvar

(With apologies to another Walter)

O, YOUNG Walter Gordon is come out of the east,
Of all the world's budgets his was the least;
And save his own leader he backers had none,
His high horse is gone and he rides all alone.
So faithful of yore but so easy to falter,
There ne'er was budgeteer like young Gordon the Walter.

So boldly he entered fair Parliament's hall,
Among Tory men and Socreds and brothers and all;
Then whispered his leader, his voice all atrembly—
While the Opposition said naught before the Assembly—
"Oh! Come ye prepared, or come ye undone,
Or to dance to our victory, my young Lord Gordon?"

"I long wooed the voter, as you have espied;
With promises and expertise you've never denied—
And now I am come with this one love of mine,
To cure all our problems—all will be fine.
There are men down in Bay Street who know what I know,
Who are ready for me to make my first throw."

His leader crossed fingers as Gordon stood up,
And quaffed off some water and threw down the cup.
Mike looked up to blush and he looked up to sigh,
With a smile on his lips and a tear in his eye.
The Gordon opened his briefcase as though 'twere a psalter,
"Now go we for broke!" cried the impetuous young Walter.

So straight was his form and so solemn his face,
That never a hall such galliard did grace;
While his leader did fret and the Tories did fume,
And the Speaker sat dangling his tricorn and plume;
And the back-benchers whispered, "Oh what an imbroglio,
Why didn't Mike give him some other portfolio?"

With the shouts of dismay and a bug in his ear,
Young Walter made tracks for the door at the rear;
So easy, he thought, his budget to swing,
He'd not expected the ire it would bring!
"It is done! We are done!" quoth the young Walter,
"But hold everything—the budget we'll alter!"

There was mounting 'mong Kierans of the Bay Street clan;
Diefenbakers, citizens and Nowlans, they rode and they ran:
There was racing and chasing all day and all night,
But the lost budget of Gordon's ne'er did they sight.
So daring in opposition but so feckless today
Have ye e'er heard the like of young Gordon, pray?

The Packsack

In the Suburbs

By GREGORY CLARK

THE basic differences in social life between the city and suburbia is manifest in the back yards, says an embittered young friend of mine.

"In the city," he says, "you don't know the people next door on either side, or across the road, except in the most casual way. You are on friendly speaking terms. You will even chum up a little with them for brief occasions. But you both know that this is no precedent. It is not to continue.

"As for people three doors away, you hardly know what they look like. You certainly don't know what they do for a living. They are remote. You can go out in your back yard for a nice rest in the garden, and nobody calls out to you. You don't call out to anybody. There is privacy.

"But in the suburbs! Holy mackerel! They will not only holler at you, six back yards away. They will even come and sit with you!"

Weed Spray Danger

YOUR article, "Hormones Not Poison Used in Weed Spray," should arouse some of your readers to action.

I believe that our wiser municipal and provincial authorities have ceased spraying our roadsides. Aside from the ugly mess it makes of the trees and shrubs, there is the danger which still exists in the use of 2-4-D, despite the manufacturer's statement to the contrary.

Rachel Carson devotes several pages of her book Silent Spring to the use of this herbicide and the dangers inherent in its use, and her facts have not been seriously disputed.

Cut It Short

The Colonist reports protests by some Saanich residents to the spraying of roadsides with 2-4-D amine. The local authorities maintain they have been assured that this material is entirely non-toxic to people, and some members of my association have asked me to immediately counter this opinion.

This amine is extremely persistent and kills many weeds and plants by absorption into their system. To maintain that berries sprayed with this material remain fit to eat is asking a little too much, even of the most credulous taxpayer.

There is no safe shortcut in destroying roadside vegetation except to cut it short.

Unused Abilities

It seems that many prominent Victorians feel that the city's welfare abides in the hands of the tourists. This misconception is absolutely appalling. I feel that we (the younger generation) are not able to use our abilities to the fullest capacity.

Between academic semesters most students are engaged in some paltry tourist gimmick. Many individuals wonder why it is that numerous professionally educated Canadians emigrate elsewhere. The fact is that Canada, one of the richest countries in the world, has not much to offer. Canadians are satisfied to deposit or invest their capital outside Canadian developments.

Our neighbors the Americans must be given praise for at least taking an interest in our industry and development. Canadians must take a stronger interest in the development or we are going to find ourselves one of the American states without any choice.

All Culpable

Premier Bennett's recent statement concerning the status of Mr. Real Caouette in Quebec will have evoked the approbation of all Canadians. He spoke instantly without preamble in loyal support of Mr. Caouette's place as an executive in the Social credit movement, and his words were well taken since both east and west in Canada are in the process of exchange of culture as never before, each opening doors toward a new unity wherein at long last we shall tread through and past the language barrier.

All of us recall our culpability in our total inability (and often unwillingness) to translate into precise and true words French pronouncements made during our federal election, and be it said to our shame as Canadians, mistranslation made headlines toward ignoble purposes.

Same Creature?

Not long ago, Peter Scott, the well-known naturalist, one or two other people and myself, set up a trust to investigate the long-standing mystery surrounding the so-called "Loch Ness Monster" and we are beginning to amass an amount of information which suggests that there certainly is a large, unidentified species stranded in the loch.

I know, of course, that you have had very similar sightings off the west coast of Canada of a creature called the Cadborosaurus, and I am wondering whether you have any information on your files which you could let me have or any you could refer me to which would give me a complete picture, since I am inclined to think that the creature so often seen in sea lakes on the west coast of Canada and the United Kingdom and similar creatures seen in inland lakes in Canada and Scotland may well, indeed, all be the same creature, except that those inhabiting inland waterways were cut off from the sea relatively recently at the end of the last Ice Age.

Any information you could give me would be more than welcome.

Mad World

When I read of the colossal sums we are spending on armaments I cannot but wonder how all this comports with our professed Christianity. As we seek thus for means to kill our fellow beings, I cannot but think of a certain Teacher who said: "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you and pray for those who despitefully use you and persecute you," or, "If one asks you to go with him for one mile go with him twain," etc.

When I think how these wasted millions if spent on roads, bridges, houses, colleges, university and parks could transform our rugged land into some semblance of a terrestrial paradise, I am inclined to use the Shakespearean line and say "Lord, what fools we mortals be."

Yes, it is a mad world, and it drives me to agree with Ambrose Bierce that:

Methinks but lamely the conception runs
Of a brass-buttoned Jesus firing guns.

Electronic Brain Not Enough

Blanshard Extension Workable

Real Solution Is There to Roundabout Mess

By IAN STREET

CITY HALL COMMENT

Take one traffic officer.

Put him in a helicopter that hovers 24 hours a day, seven days a week over what is now the roundabout at Fountain Circle

Give him the superhuman ability to count every vehicle approaching from six directions, make the necessary arithmetical calculations in the time it takes to bat an eye and the dexterity to manipulate constantly the sequence of traffic signal lights that are to be installed there.

Impossible, you say, for any human. But all this will be accomplished by a traffic density volume control device which city council decided last Thursday to purchase, with the necessary signal lights, for $13,500.

Recorders placed in the roadway about 200 feet from intersection on all approaches feed traffic flow information into what for want of a better phrase is described as an electronic brain.

The device, using the computer principle, stores and collates the information, changing the sequence of the traffic lights to give the maximum traffic movement under given circumstances.

It is this that sets apart the latest in the long line of so-called "roundabout solutions" out of city hall in recent years.

There appears to be little doubt, from the information at hand, that the new control system will do the job required of it here. The provincial government has installed a similar one, though less complex, on the Upper Levels highway and is reported satisfied. Others are in use in Calgary and Edmonton.

But the real problem posed by the roundabout remains one of capacity. For several years, city hall traffic planners have resisted political pressure to replace the roundabout with a signalized intersection. They knew the ordinary fixed time signals might introduce a measure of order to the confusion, but would do nothing to speed the flow of traffic.

The electronic brain undoubtedly will help. But it remains a fact that the streets converging onto it can carry a lot more traffic than the redesigned intersection, even with the computer control system, can handle.

The only way to solve the problem of capacity is to provide a second main traffic artery leading into the city.

That doesn't mean a two-lane link between Tolmie Avenue and Blanshard Street such as council has already ordered in the Rose Street extension scheme. To take any appreciable load off Douglas and therefore materially assist the roundabout problem this would have to be widened to six lanes and linked with the main highways near Town and Country.

There's no doubt the impending opening of the $6,000,000 Mayfair shopping centre on north Douglas in October has thrown a real scare into city council.

In ordering construction of Rose Street extension and now the reconstruction, in a few months time, of the roundabout council is making the best of a bad situation.

It's ironic that for many months past it has had a workable solution in its hands. The traffic planners proposed a Blanshard Street extension that could have cost up to $1,000,000.

The provincial government, which would be responsible for completing the Saanich section of the highway link, seemed to be ready to go ahead.

It almost seemed as if the city's shilly-shallying attitude convinced government planners they should take a second look. The result was the over-all traffic study for the whole area covering the period until 1981. This is one of the good things to come out of the whole mess.

Perhaps, though it doesn't seem likely, a better second arterial entrance to the city will come out of the study.

Meanwhile council has taken what steps it can to try and avert what still promises to be a monumental traffic jam when the shopping centre opens with its 1,700 car parking spaces.

German Picture Brighter

By STERLING SLAPPEY
From Bonn

Both Washington and London have sent in fresh diplomatic teams to deal with the new German government expected to take over in October.

With new men at the two most important embassies in Bonn and Ludwig Erhard installed as successor to Chancellor Adenauer, most observers look for substantial changes, among them:

- Stronger Bonn-London relations.
- A more vocal German advocacy of German interests on the continent.
- A Germany more firmly committed to NATO.
- Further improvement in the already good relationship between Bonn and Washington.

The new U.S. ambassador is George McGhee, a wealthy Texas oilman turned diplomat who was for a time undersecretary of state.

Britain's Sir Frank Roberts is a German expert and a foreign office veteran with service in many posts, including two tours in Moscow.

Conflicting Pulls

Nikita Can't Decide

Dr. Alexander Dallin, a noted authority on the Communist world, is director of the Russian Institute at Columbia University.

By ALEXANDER DALLIN

Soviet foreign policy, like other arenas of Soviet conduct, has been caught between conflicting pulls, between mutually contradictory tendencies.

I am not suggesting the answer lies in the equidistance of Moscow from Washington and Peking, but rather in the Soviet inability to decide, thus far, in which league to play.

Khrushchev has, after all, been unable to square the circle, to find a formula which would combine struggle with non-violence, unity with diversity, discipline with independence.

Khrushchev's conflicting pulls are best exemplified by his desire to be both leader of the Communist universe, China included, and a major statesman meeting on the basis of equality with his opposite numbers in the West.

Perhaps in theory such a dualism is conceivable; in practice, suspicion of the Soviet in both Peking and Washington renders such an effort extremely hazardous.

Even more dramatic, the third world (as the French like to call it) has not chosen to inch toward the Soviet bloc.

If, contrary to all expectations, an effective accommodation between the Sino-Soviet powers takes place, it will involve some division into spheres, which implies the retreat of Soviet purview from a global to partial one.

If, more likely, conflict continues, Moscow is sure to be denied control of Communist movements in countries where the voice of Peking prevails, notably in Southeast Asia.

In the long run, the Sino-Soviet split is likely to propel Moscow, in its whole outlook, toward the West.

But we must not confuse such a process—welcome as it is bound to be—with a convergence of outlook and objectives with the West.

Columbia Contest Claims

Don't Believe a Word of It!

By TERRY HAMMOND

When the Columbia byelection votes are counted Monday night the leader of at least one party is going to hail the results as a great triumph for his side and complete repudiation for the opposition.

Don't believe a word of it!

The tiny Columbia riding (only 4,400 names are on the voters' list) is not the scene for either a great victory or a massive repudiation.

It can produce no seedlings of a new provincial political trend except by coincidence.

What significance the by-election holds is attached to the fate of the government candidate.

The Columbia contest is intriguing only because it is devoid of a single major issue.

Efforts by the Socreds to interest the electorate in the fate of Columbia River development have met with little success.

Although the Columbia flows through the middle of the constituency the project will have only fringe effects locally.

Against this neutral background the most important thing the electorate will do is paint a contemporary picture of the Social Credit image.

Interested students of the B.C. political scene will relate this picture to the state-of-mind of the non-metropolitan voter and might deduce from it the fate of the government if an election was to be held now.

But no election is going to be held now, so the subject becomes academic.

Contrary to what the leaders of opposition parties will tell you, a comfortable margin of victory for the government will have more long-range significance than a stinging defeat.

Premier Bennett has said quite plainly there will be no election this year, and perhaps none next year either.

It is reasonable to assume from this Bennett considers himself still in the mid-term stage of government—a stage when administrations traditionally are not at a peak of popularity.

If, in spite of this, a government victory is secured it might be reasonable to suspect the inevitable fence-mending tactics which come near the end of a term of office are almost bound to keep the Socreds in power.

But the opposite side of this coin of logic does not necessarily ring true.

Bennett can lose Columbia on the basis of diminishing popularity and still come up with enough goodies before the next election to alter the picture completely.

Nevertheless, a Socred loss is going to be a bitter pill for the party faithful.

Columbia has become a Social Credit talisman. It came through for the party in the fateful general election of 1952, delivered the goods again a short time later to seat Attorney-General Bonner, repeated for Orr Newton in the 1953 election and stayed in the government camp ever since.

And the betting from this corner is there will be no change.

Weapons Details Written

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) The United States and Canada have worked out most of the details of a nuclear weapons deal which was a key item in talks here last May between President Kennedy and Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The bilateral agreement, it was learned Saturday, will be announced—probably within a month—in an exchange of notes between the two governments.

It was understood that one question remains to be answered before the formal exchange of notes. This involved a decision on whether the nuclear warheads for Bomarc missiles and possibly other weapons will be cared for by Canadian personnel working under American supervision or whether American troops on Canadian soil will have full responsibility.

Universal Mystery Increases With Knowledge

By ERNEST MARSHALL HOWSE

Earlier in this century the then president of Harvard University told of receiving from a student a manuscript, accompanied by a letter, saying that the student intended to write a series of articles of which this was only the first. Said the student, in one short, sufficient sentence, "I have explained the universe."

We may smile at the youth to whom all knowledge was open, all mysteries known, and from whom no secrets were hidden. But, after all, he was perhaps a natural product of his day. A century earlier, when Napoleon asked Laplace how he came to leave God out of his thinking, the great astronomer replied "Sire! I have no need of Him in my hypothesis."

Laplace was right. He had no need of God in his hypothesis. He was wrong only in thinking that his hypothesis encompassed the universe.

No scientist of a century ago realized that he was as ignorant as all first-rate scientists now know themselves to be. If Laplace was characteristic of the 19th century, perhaps Edison was prophetic at least of the mind of the 20th.

We Don't Know Much

He said, "We don't know the millionth part of one per cent about anything. We don't know what water is. We don't know what light is. We don't know what gravitation is. We don't know what enables us to keep up on our feet when we stand up. We don't know what electricity is. We don't know what heat is. We have a lot of hypotheses about these things. But that is all."

The commonplace man, it is true, still thinks that he does know. The student who has one course in physics may be able to tell you with great finality what electricity is. But the top-notch scientists of today speak in different terms.

They have found themselves like people in the midst of enormously complicated machinery, who, by close observance, have found out how some parts work. But why they should work like that, how they came to be there at all, and what they are for—that is something about which the nuclear scientist knows no more than the shepherd on the hills—and knows that he knows no more.

As Alfred Noyes puts it, "Science and religion stand together in each other's presence with a new humility before an unfathomable and eternal mystery."

The More Mysterious

People have tended to believe that increase of knowledge meant a decrease of mystery. Now they have discovered the opposite. The more we know about the universe the more mysterious it becomes.

We are like people in the darkness at night who light a tiny match to make a little circle of light surrounded by darkness. As the flame increases the area of light increases, but it only increases the area of darkness engulfing it.

Whenever a great mystery is cleared up by a surge of man's genius, we are left with a greater mystery than before, in a world more marvellous than before.

We may take it as an axiom that an increase of knowledge is always an increase in mystery. We are not likely to be impressed today by anyone who says, "I have explained the universe." Perhaps we can only smile at anyone who says that he has rejected religion because he knows too much.

Indeed Bruce Atcheson of the New York Times said in a recent article, "Not to be religious today, is to be either very ignorant, or very arrogant."

Arabian Politics Worry Austria

And Then There's the Mystery Man

Is the Prince Insane or the King a Captor?

VIENNA—Austrian politicians are worried about young Prince Abdullah Ben Jalawi of Saudi Arabia, and wonder if it would not be best to send him home.

He has been a patient in Vienna University psychiatric clinic since June 5, and the head of the clinic, Professor Hans Hoff, a psychiatrist of international repute, believes he is mad.

The young man's grandfather is a prince in the oil-rich eastern province of Saudi Arabia and an uncle of King Saud. His father was murdered in a Paris hotel in April and the patient now is his grandfather's heir. It is this fact and the circumstances in which he became a patient that causes concern in Vienna.

King Saud himself is in Austria on a prolonged visit. He arrived May 12, and took a suite of rooms in an expensive hotel. He was reported to be ill.

Then the king's harem arrived in the capital. King Saud made some recovery, but showed no intention of returning to his kingdom.

Vienna's luxury trade began to profit. The king's court has bought whole fleets of expensive cars. The women of the harem make regular shopping expeditions to Vienna's Bond Street, the Karntnerstrasse.

Prince Abdullah had no part in this. He did not arrive in the retinue of his sovereign, but a few days later, and put up at a modest hotel. After 10 days of sightseeing he consulted a Viennese doctor he had known before who insists the young man is quite sane.

But June 5, two of the prince's companions—one of them named Faez Ajaz, a lawyer who said he was also the prince's guardian, took him to the clinic asserting he was in need of psychiatric treatment.

Professor Hoff examined the prince and diagnosed insanity. What happened then is in dispute, but it seems certain Abdullah came to the clinic under the impression he was to receive treatment to an ear.

When he found himself behind the closed doors of the psychiatric ward he had a fit—either of madness or of rage.

A natural inclination of the Vienna authorities to please their royal guest can be assumed, and when King Saud was informed he gave orders his relative should be treated "like my own son," and Abdullah should stay in the clinic.

But a Viennese lawyer who knows Abdullah wrote to Dr. Adolf Scharf, president of Austria, and the minister of the interior ordered an investigation.

Some formalities were found to have been inadequately observed. There were doubts, in particular, about whether the prince was a voluntary patient. In the documents concerning his entry in the clinic the word "voluntary" had been added later.

The prince gave conflicting answers as to whether he wished to stay or not. Faez Ajaz had disappeared. He seems to have left Austria as soon as the prince was lodged in the clinic.

A judicial commission sent to the clinic said the prince was insane and he should remain for two months. Two other psychiatrists made an investigation at Professor Hoff's request, and have also said the prince is mad.

It is the possible political implications that disquiet the Austrians. It has been suggested—and strongly denied—King Saud might have an interest in keeping his young relative confined.

It has been pointed out even a false suggestion that Abdullah might be kept as a hostage for his grandfather's loyalty in eastern Saudi Arabia could create embarrassment. His death—not to be excluded in cases of severe mental illness—would give rise to much worse.

ART BUCHWALD Digs Culture

Non-Profit Thieves Solve Crisis in Art Underworld

There has been a falling off in art thefts lately and nobody can explain it. One theory is that the underworld has flooded the market with stolen paintings, and most of the collectors of stolen art have completed their collections.

Also people who collect stolen art are getting a little annoyed at the inflated prices that art thieves are demanding for their loot.

But the art thieves claim they are not to blame for the prices.

An art thief told us the other day, "When we steal a painting we have no idea of what the value of it is until we read the figure in the newspapers.

"Unfortunately some unscrupulous collectors and museum directors tend to exaggerate the value of their property for insurance and prestige purposes. So the prices we put on our stolen paintings have been way out of line with their market values and a majority of us have had to take a loss on them.

"Many of the fellows that went into art looting have become very discouraged with the business.

"The truth is that there is an unemployment crisis in the art underworld. Last year at this time we had full employment and we were working from California to Monte Carlo. Second-storey art jobs were going begging because we didn't have the manpower to fill them.

"But this year things are really bad. Some of our best men have gone back to jewels and furs. A few have even been forced into stick-up work. The great cultural resurgence in the underworld is dying out and I think it's a pity."

"What can you do about it?" we asked him.

"A group of us have formed a committee known as the Cultural Foundation to Encourage the Theft of Works of Art. It's non-profit and we hope to get support from museums and galleries throughout the world."

"Why do you think they will help you?"

"Because we've helped them," he replied. "Every time we've pulled a job in a museum or a gallery, they've benefited by the publicity. Art thefts create interest in art. If paintings are worth stealing, people figure they must be worth seeing, and ever since the spate of thefts, museum attendance everywhere has doubled."

"That's probably so. But what do you think your foundation can do?"

"We have a program to help young artists."

"How's that?"

"Suppose there is a young talented artist by the name of William Miller. No one has heard of William Miller, no one believes in William Miller, and no one will buy a William Miller.

"If we think he has talent, we will arrange to steal William Miller's paintings. Newspapers around the world will report the theft, and pretty soon everyone will be clamoring to buy Millers. His career will be launched, the prices on his paintings will go sky high, and we'll make a modest profit on the Millers we stole.

"The scheme is foolproof because, before we commit the theft, we'll have a written agreement from Miller he won't press charges if we get caught."

"It sounds good."

"Our foundation is also set up to help museums. If the Toledo, Ohio, museum is not doing any business, we'll steal one of their two Van Dykes. Then when the story breaks in the newspapers, people will come from all over to see the other one."

"It's true," we said.

"We also can help gallery-owners who sell fake paintings. Suppose a gallery-owner is stuck with a fake El Greco. We'll steal it from him for a fee. The very fact that we stole it proves its authenticity. Then we'll return it to the owner and he'll be able to sell it anywhere.

"When it comes to culture," he said modestly, "we believe everyone should do his share."

Perfect

This girl is an ecto-mesomorph (translation: perfectly proportioned body) according to Lloyd Percival, director of Canadian Fitness Institute. Clara Sarkozi, 20-year-old Toronto beauty, is five feet, six inches, weighs 126 pounds and is 37-26-37½. Perfectionist Percival had one reservation: Clara's legs are 8 per cent from being perfect.

Pair of Pianists Off and Running

By BOB BUDLER

Just like horse racing, the only thing predictable about the recording industry is its unpredictability.

A decade ago it was Liberace, his sequined evening jacket glowing in the light of his candelabra, whose records sold like the proverbial hot cakes.

Several years late, the avuncular figure of Mitch Miller became the talk of Tin Pan Alley, then Elvis Presley built up such a following that even today he sells million records every time he goes to the post.

Now it's Ferrante and Teicher whose record is impressive. In a little over two-and-a-half years, the piano duo has sold over 10,000,000 records for United Artists.

CURRENT ENTRY

Rate them successful via waxings of the music from the films, Exodus, West Side Story and The Apartment. Films have proved to be their forte and their current entry, Love Themes from Cleopatra, would be a winner anywhere.

Lush is the word for this set. Instrumentation consists of 24 strings, four French horns, three woodwinds, one harp, one bass, three drums and two guitars, in addition to a vocal backdrop of six voices.

Smash Hits of '63 (Capitol)—Swingin' trumpeter Ray Anthony sets the pace in this fine instrumental outing. The lineup is confined to singles like Walk Right In, End of the World, Days of Wine and Roses and I Wanna Be Around.

All-Time Movie Hits (Mercury)—The Platters tailor a dozen gems to their silky style. As Time Goes By, But Beautiful, Pennies from Heavens, Singin' in the Rain and more.

Sheep Shearer Goes to Russia

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—Sheep-shearing instructor Godfrew Bowen has left for Russia to set up a training school for shearers. Bowen, who shears sheep at the rate of about one a minute, has revolutionized shearing techniques in New Zealand.

Viking Find

OSLO, Norway (UPI)—Archeologists have found the remains of a large Viking fortress in Nesna, Northern Norway, and have discovered traces of giant Viking ships. Some of the eight ships were more than 80 feet long and 18 feet wide.

Famed Names Ward Defence

LONDON (UPI) — Friends of Dr. Stephen Ward, the society osteopath and artist, expect him to offer a "no names barred" defence when he goes on trial July 22 on vice charges growing out of the Profumo scandal.

The 50-year-old playboy, who introduced War Minister John Profumo and Soviet naval attache Eugene Ivanov to Christine Keeler, is accused of living off immoral earnings and allegedly procuring illegal operations.

WILL CALL SOME

He has pleaded not guilty and is free on bail.

"Stephen had many famous patients and sitters and friends," said one of his intimates. "I know he would like to spare them the publicity of appearing in this case but I think he will call at least some of them to testify they saw nothing wrong in his office or home."

If this is actually Ward's intention then there must be uneasiness in more than one stately home in the land.

For as a former film star discovered even the most innocent involvement in the affair can be acutely embarrassing. In his case Mandy Rice-Davies, 18-year-old friend of Miss Keeler, simply mentioned him as a man to whom she had once been introduced.

This was enough to start the rumormongers chattering delightedly although there was no indication the meeting was anything but casual.

TAPE TALK

HUDSON BLAKE

How much do you enjoy home entertainment?

Today it comes in many forms. One of the rapidly growing sources of family enjoyment is the Tape Recorder. A quality tape recorder can provide you with many satisfying hours—as a basis for a proposed home stereophonic, high-fidelity music system, or as a natural companion to your present system — particularly if you have or are contemplating FM radio reception.

No doubt you are already aware of the superlative quality and lasting performance of taped music.

We would be pleased to discuss further with you the many facets of this exciting medium of sound entertainment—or perhaps arrange an actual home demonstration for you and your family, with one of the tape units most suited to your needs.

Or if you already own a Tape Recorder, we can also supply you with blank or recorded tape or any other taping accessories you may require.

This week we are having a window display of free tape recording literature which you may find of interest. Please call in.

Arabian Politics Worry Austria

And Then There's the Mystery Man

Is the Prince Insane or the King a Captor?

VIENNA—Austrian politicians are worried about young Prince Abdullah Ben Jalawi of Saudi Arabia, and wonder if it would not be best to send him home.

He has been a patient in Vienna University psychiatric clinic since June 5, and the head of the clinic, Professor Hans Hoff, a psychiatrist of international repute, believes he is mad.

The young man's grandfather is a prince in the oil-rich eastern province of Saudi Arabia and an uncle of King Saud. His father was murdered in a Paris hotel in April and the patient now is his grandfather's heir. It is this fact and the circumstances in which he became a patient that causes concern in Vienna.

King Saud himself is in Austria on a prolonged visit. He arrived May 12, and took a suite of rooms in an expensive hotel. He was reported to be ill.

Then the king's harem arrived in the capital. King Saud made some recovery, but showed no intention of returning to his kingdom.

Vienna's luxury trade began to profit. The king's court has bought whole fleets of expensive cars. The women of the harem make regular shopping expeditions to Vienna's Bond Street, the Karntnerstrasse.

Prince Abdullah had no part in this. He did not arrive in the retinue of his sovereign, but a few days later, and put up at a modest hotel. After 10 days of sightseeing he consulted a Viennese doctor he had known before who insists the young man is quite sane.

But June 5, two of the prince's companions—one of them named Faez Ajaz, a lawyer who said he was also the prince's guardian, took him to the clinic asserting he was in need of psychiatric treatment.

Professor Hoff examined the prince and diagnosed insanity. What happened then is in dispute, but it seems certain Abdullah came to the clinic under the impression he was to receive treatment to an ear.

When he found himself behind the closed doors of the psychiatric ward he had a fit—either of madness or of rage.

A natural inclination of the Vienna authorities to please their royal guest can be assumed, and when King Saud was informed he gave orders his relative should be treated "like my own son," and Abdullah should stay in the clinic.

But a Viennese lawyer who knows Abdullah wrote to Dr. Adolf Scharf, president of Austria, and the minister of the interior ordered an investigation.

Some formalities were found to have been inadequately observed. There were doubts, in particular, about whether the prince was a voluntary patient. In the documents concerning his entry to the clinic the word "voluntary" had been added later.

The prince gave conflicting answers as to whether he wished to stay or not. Faez Ajaz had disappeared. He seems to have left Austria as soon as the prince was lodged in the clinic.

A judicial commission sent to the clinic said the prince was insane and he should remain for two months. Two other psychiatrists made an investigation at Professor Hoff's request, and have also said the prince is mad.

It is the possible political implications that disquiet the Austrians. It has been suggested—and strongly denied—King Saud might have an interest in keeping his young relative confined.

It has been pointed out even a false suggestion that Abdullah might be kept as a hostage for his grandfather's loyalty in eastern Saudi Arabia could create embarrassment. His death—not to be excluded in cases of severe mental illness—would give rise to much worse.

ART BUCHWALD Digs Culture

Non-Profit Thieves Solve Crisis in Art Underworld

There has been a falling off in art thefts lately and nobody can explain it. One theory is that the underworld has flooded the market with stolen paintings, and most of the collectors of stolen art have completed their collections.

Also people who collect stolen art are getting a little annoyed at the inflated prices that art thieves are demanding for their loot.

But the art thieves claim they are not to blame for the prices.

An art thief told us the other day, "When we steal a painting we have no idea of what the value of it is until we read the figure in the newspapers.

"Unfortunately some unscrupulous collectors and museum directors tend to exaggerate the value of their property for insurance and prestige purposes. So the prices we put on our stolen paintings have been way out of line with their market values and a majority of us have had to take a loss on them.

"Many of the fellows that went into art looting have become very discouraged with the business.

"The truth is that there is an unemployment crisis in the art underworld. Last year at this time we had full employment and we were working from California to Monte Carlo. Second-storey art jobs were going begging because we didn't have the manpower to fill them.

"But this year things are really bad. Some of our best men have gone back to jewels and furs. A few have even been forced into stick-up work. The great cultural resurgence in the underworld is dying out and I think it's a pity."

"What can you do about it?" we asked him.

"A group of us have formed a committee known as the Cultural Foundation to Encourage the Theft of Works of Art. It's non-profit and we hope to get support from museums and galleries throughout the world."

"Why do you think they will help you?"

"Because we've helped them," he replied. "Every time we've pulled a job in a museum or a gallery, they've benefited by the publicity. Art thefts create interest in art. If paintings are worth stealing, people figure they must be worth seeing, and ever since the spate of thefts, museum attendance everywhere has doubled."

"That's probably so. But what do you think your foundation can do?"

"We have a program to help young artists."

"How's that?"

"Suppose there is a young talented artist by the name of William Miller. No one has heard of William Miller, no one believes in William Miller, and no one will buy a William Miller.

"If we think he has talent, we will arrange to steal William Miller's paintings. Newspapers around the world will report the theft, and pretty soon everyone will be clamoring to buy Millers. His career will be launched, the prices on his paintings will go sky high, and we'll make a modest profit on the Millers we stole.

"The scheme is foolproof because, before we commit the theft, we'll have a written agreement from Miller he won't press charges if we get caught."

"Our foundation is also set up to help museums. If the Toledo, Ohio, museum is not doing any business, we'll steal one of their two Van Dykes. Then when the story breaks in the newspapers, people will come from all over to see the other one."

"It's true," we said.

"We also can help gallery-owners who sell fake paintings. Suppose a gallery-owner is stuck with a fake El Greco. We'll steal it from him for a fee. The very fact that we stole it proves its authenticity. Then we'll return it to the owner and he'll be able to sell it anywhere.

"When it comes to culture," he said modestly, "we believe everyone should do his share."

War Epic

LONDON (CP) — The BBC is scouring the earth for material to mount an epic television documentary series on the First World War.

The 26-part series will cost about £140,000 and is scheduled for showing on the BBC's new second channel next May. It will be similar in format to the American Victory at Sea documentary of the 1950s.

The project is being made in collaboration with the CBC, the Australian Broadcasting Commission and an American film company.

RUSSIA HELPING

Research has already started in Montreal, New York, Washington, Paris and the Balkans. Russia and Yugoslavia have agreed to co-operate.

In addition, to make the series as authentic as possible, the BBC has asked British viewers to send in memories or anecdotes that may help to construct the over-all picture.

STRANGE ASPECTS

"Photographs still existing in people's cellars are staggering," says co-producer Tony Essex. "Strange aspects of the war we never considered are already coming to light."

The project's working title is The Great War. Actor Sir Michael Redgrave has been asked to do the linking commentary.

Tough Break

This scene cracked one rib for Doris Day, grabbed by the waist too realistically and too hard by actor James Garner in film Move Over, Darling, after fight with Polly Bergen. Plastic support will allow Miss Day to continue in film, which was to have starred Marilyn Monroe under title Something's Got to Give.—(AP Photofax.)

Burton Buys Beer

Hamlet the Beautiful Finishes TV Invasion

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — A few yards down the road from where stood Shakespeare's theatre, such a Hamlet as the Bard never envisaged quoted his famous advice to actors:

"Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounce it to you trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as Lief the town-crier spoke my lines."

Elizabeth Taylor let the words die away on the historic air of the Bankside district of London and smiled into the camera recording the last scene of her first venture into television — an hour-long "mosaic" of the city of her birth 31 years ago.

ONE AUTHORITY

Whatever Shakespeare may have thought of a beautiful brunette quoting Hamlet in the street, the performance won the applause of at least one eminent authority on the subject — Richard Burton.

Burton, whose own Hamlet at the Old Vic Theatre was praised by critics as one of the best of the century, spent a day off from making a new movie to observe Liz at work.

BECOME SAINT

And this is only fair because Miss Taylor spends all her spare time at the studio watching him become a saint — Thomas-A-Becket.

"Marvellous," said Burton ushering Miss Taylor toward an ancient tavern, the Anchor, and ordered flagons of beer all around for the crew of the TV spectacular which will be seen in the U.S. this autumn.

Face of Dr. Lao

Usually when movie actor's hair is shorn off, it's because he must appear baldheaded before cameras, like Yul Brynner—but not so Tony Randall. This dramatic-comic star is about to begin work in movie Seven Faces of Dr. Lao, in which he wears seven different wigs for seven different characters. He and head makeup man William Tuttle decided headshave would make job easier.—(AP Photofax)

Nuclear Peril Fills Screen

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ready to be scared? Three major movies about nuclear perils will be in the theatres within a year.

They are: Fail-Safe, Seven Days in May and Dr. Strangelove: Or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb.

All are based on novels. All are getting stellar casting and realistic filming.

Fail-Safe and Dr. Strangelove have seemingly identical themes: Frantic efforts to head off a nuclear war.

AND OTHERS

Fail-Safe, from the best-seller by Eugene Burdick and Harvey Wheeler, was shot in New York with Sidney Lumet directing Henry Fonda, Dan O'Herlihy, Walther Matthau and others.

Fail-Safe is straight drama, based on an accidental triggering of nuclear war. The president (Fonda) then works feverishly from his bomb shelter to prevent devastation of the earth.

In Strangelove the war is started by a psychotic air force general. But the film is apparently played for laughs.

A NIGHTMARE COMEDY

"It is a nightmare comedy," says director Stanley Kubrick (Lolita).

Laughmakers include Peter Sellers, George C. Scott, Sterling Hayden and Keenan Wynn. The film is nearing completion in England.

Fredric March is president in Seven Days in May, a Paramount production.

BY MILITARISTS

Based on the Fletcher Knebel-Charles Bailey best seller, it portrays an attempted takeover of the U.S. presidency by militarists in the 1970s.

Burt Lancaster is the power-hungry general, Kirk Douglas the marine colonel who sniffs out the plot and Edmond O'Brien the Georgia senator who helps the president lick it. John Frankenheimer (Manchurian Candidate) is directing.

True Fenwick Son Builds New Mouse

HOLLYWOOD (CNS) — The Grand Duchy of Fenwick is in a second movie and there's liable to be more.

The Grand Duchy sent over its bowmen to invade the U.S., thus becoming eligible to receive nice American dollars as a defeated foe.

This ploy was recorded in The Mouse That Roared. And Fenwick won so many friends a sequel became inevitable.

Leonard Wibberly, the author, complied with an adventure titled The Mouse on the Moon, wherein Fenwick joins the space race.

Peter Sellers was too busy to take part. (He played triple roles in The Mouse That Roared.) But Margaret Rutherford and gap-toothed Terry-Thomas are on hand.

Another Fenwick film seems sure. They're making money and Wibberly is an inventive chap.

Not long ago, his $50,000 boat sank near here and insurance men wrote it off. Wibberly bought the salvage rights for peanuts and salvaged the rich craft through an ingenuous use of inner tubes—typical for a true son of Fenwick.

Ustinov Asks JOHN CROSBY

Must the Show Go On?

PARIS—"I'm rather fed up with show business," said Peter Ustinov crisply. "I've got to the point where I don't really understand why the show has to go on."

A heretical thought for an actor. Ustinov is a heretic because he thinks, in the first place, which is unusual among actors and then he tells you what he thinks, which is almost unknown among anyone. He had a number of complaints—all sound.

"The American theatre is in terrible shape. The quality of the New York audiences is depressing."

New York audiences, he made it quite clear, are frightfully bad. I said that for laughter the New York benefit audience was particularly deadly, but Ustinov disputed that.

"It's a good audience for laughs, but you must cheapen the laughs. Make it broader than it should be. It's an audience for garbage."

He sighed: "I really don't enjoy acting in the large metropolitan centres any more. I'd much rather confine myself to a forward-looking progressive town, forward-looking enough to put its play in a new building."

His new play, "The Life in My Hands, will open in Nottingham whose theatre is so new the roof isn't on yet.

He said the audiences outside New York were not only livelier but readier to attend.

"If I didn't have a family," he added. "I'd spend all my time on the road."

Ustinov's new play—"I don't like to sound too square about this"—is about the death sentence. "It's a serious play, but there are spots where people will be induced to laugh. Comedy has always been a difficult way to be serious.

"Feydau could have written a great comedy about the Profumo case. I think the Profumo case is an absolute natural for French farce. Two detectives on the trail of a Russian spy and, trailing him, they find themselves at the door of the Minister of War, whom they are responsible to."

For an actor, Ustinov has been politically very sharp. At the door of the Lancaster, under the bright blue Paris sky, he remarked: "The extraordinary thing about America is how they tell you the moment you get there that you're finally in a free country. Yet the breadth of opinion in America is terribly narrow.

"Goldwater, on the Jack Paar show, had to talk about liberals and conservatives because there are no appreciable differences between Republicans and Democrats anymore."

I said there were no great differences between liberals and conservatives in America anymore either. There are just degrees of conservatism. If the New Frontier has ever had a liberal thought, they've kept it miraculously well-hidden.

Vancouver Festival Made $2,821 'Profit'

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Vancouver International Festival made a "profit" of $2,821 this year but still has debts from previous years of $65,454.

The festival's income was $396,875 and expenditures totalled $394,054 this season.

The directors have decided to plan for a festival next year and a theme, possibly French, will be announced within six weeks.

Secrecy Shrouds Victoria Visit Of Tokyo Theatre

By BERT BINNY

One of the most interesting entertainment events for the coming week will be the visit Saturday to the University auditorium of the Kyogen Theatre Company from Tokyo.

But inquiry as to the nature of the company or its program have so far drawn a dismaying blank—just a reiterated statement: "We have the tickets."

These come at a dollar a throw and are obtainable at Room 22 in the Ewing Building.

Everything about the performance seems to be shrouded in secrecy; possibly appropriate in view of the popular idea of oriental inscrutability.

The Victoria Summer School of Music gives the first of its concerts Friday at 8:15 p.m. in the Victoria High School.

Both faculty and students will contribute to the program. Dr. Clayton Hare, accompanied by Dorothy Swetnam, will be heard in a Brahms sonata, and the Portland University String Quartet, which includes Victoria musicians Michael Adamson and James Ross, will offer a Mozart composition.

Tom Kerr, formerly of Victoria and a successful director in amateur theatre, has received his fellowship in speech from Trinity College in London, England.

ATCL diplomas also have been won by Agnes Ferguson of Ladysmith and Margaret Davidson of Nanaimo, both in speech. The same degree in musical knowledge has been won by Bertha Roberts of Nanaimo and in piano by Linda Musgrove of Nanaimo.

Higher examinations in speech were passed by Jane Radcliffe and Leonard Timmins.

Organist at next Saturday's 12:15 p.m. recital in Christ Church Cathedral will be Geoffrey Thornburn.

Guest artist at Crazy Capers this week is harpist Lorna Langley of the Victoria Symphony. Crazy Capers goes on every night at 8:15 at the Langham Court Theatre.

Symphony flutist Maurice Crawford, oboeist Woodford Garrigus and pianist Charles Palmer play a concert of chamber music Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. in the University auditorium.

'Just Like Play Park Without Your Clothes'

Youngster is stopped from snitching cookie as two women help prepare smorgasbord dinner at convention of Western Canadian Sunbathing Association at Sol Sante Club near Shawnigan Lake. Several women donned aprons to work in kitchen.—(Bud Kinsman)

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

"People seem to think either we're a sex cult," said a vivacious Vancouver woman wearing nothing but a sun hat "or nature-worshippers who come out of our tents every morning and pray to the sun.

"Actually, it's just like a recreational park without your clothes."

She was one of 150 delegates who went Saturday to the Sol Sante nudism club near Shawnigan Lake for the weekend annual convention of the Western Canadia Subathing Association.

BABES IN ARMS

Delegates from widely varying walks of life, and ranging in age from babes in arms to almost 80, are attending the convention from as far east as Regina, with a large number of visitors from U.S. sunbathing groups.

Sunbathers I chatted with Saturday during a visit to the 178-acre Sol Sante campsite cited a feeling a freedom, a lack of worry and a love of nature as among the attractions of the nudist life.

FORGET ALL THIS

"I remember once we were living on workmen's compensation," said a Victoria wife and mother of six—all of them along with her.

"Sometimes, when the cheques wouldn't come on time and we'd all be sitting around worrying, I'd say, 'Oh, let's go up to camp and forget all this.'"

IT WORKED

They also mentioned a feeling of friendliness and equality.

"I remember when I was selling," said a young man with an apron on backwards to protect a sunburned bottom. "I sometimes used to have difficulty talking to big or influential people. A friend told me to imagine them sitting there in a suit of red flannel underwear. It worked."

Publicity and friends, delegates said, are two of the main ways people are attracted to nudist groups. Doctors sometimes recommended sunbathing for skin conditions.

WITH HUSBAND

One enthusiastic Sol Sante member mentioned a member who had joined with her husband.

"Once she wouldn't go nude from the bedroom to the bathroom. Now, there she is."

The convention seemed to be much a family affair. One sunbather explained the American Sunbathing Association, of which the Western Canadian association is one of six regional groups, strictly forbids a family member fom joining without the whole family.

She also said single men are carefully screened.

Sunbathers are lounging in the sun, swimming, pitching horseshoes — and playing volleyball.

ALMOST DEAD

"Volleyball in the nudist movement is comparable to football or baseball outside in popularity," the president of the Western Canadian association told me.

"Would you believe my husband and I were once almost dead, before we took up sunbathing?" said a Victoria woman in her late 70s. "I had asthma once, and no doctor could do anything for it.

"Would you believe I'm almost 80? I feel 20."

A comely Vancouver matron, veteran of many years as a nudist, put it simply: "I never think of this as a fad. I think of it as a way to have a happy holiday."

Shareholders Lose Look

TORONTO (CP) — Shareholders of Racan Photo-Copy Corp. Ltd. saw a demonstration Friday of the company's new photo-copying machine, but not to the satisfaction of all of them.

Friday of the cimpany's new photo-copying machine, but not to the satisfaction of all of them.

Showing of the machine, as yet in prototype form and whose varying fortunes have been chiefly responsible for Racan shares going from $2 to $25 and then back to around $7 on the over-the-counter market, was at a special meeting called for the demonstration and to elect two directors.

During the demonstration, a shareholder asked whether he could see the machine reproducing a document which he would supply.

E. Y. Rabbiah, Racan president who controls the company, said this could be dealt with in the question-and-answer period.

However, during the showing of a film which followed the demonstration, the machine was removed from the room.

Asked by several shareholders to explain the removal, Mr. Rabbiah said a cartage company had called for it according to appointment to take it back to the Racan office.

A number of shareholders asked that another demonstration be held at the Racan plant after the meeting.

Mr. Rabbiah said immediate appointments and his planned departure from Toronto, together with heavy commitments this week, prevented any further demonstration until Wednesday.

He said the machine had been amply demonstrated previously.

Joseph Heindl, executive vice-president of Racan, and Henry Evering, president of Racan Office Supplies, a subsidiary, were elected to the board of directors to succeed two directors who had resigned.

The other member of the three-man board is Mr. Rabbiah.

Mr. Rabbiah said the company's net profit in the nine months ended March 31 was $131,569 compared with $92,543 last year.

in the corresponding period

The company was formed in 1960.

Production of the new machine is scheduled to start in October on models for field testing.

Crash Victims Killed Instantly

FORT SIMPSON, N.W.T (CP)—The RCMP here reported Wednesday all four persons aboard a Cessna 185 aircraft which crashed in the Nahanni Valley, Northwest Territories, last Sept. 29 were killed on impact.

The wreckage was discovered Monday by a topographical survey crew working over the area in a helicopter.

Public Schools Ordered Open

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Birmingham, the scene of recent racial disorder, faces the prospect of public school integration this fall.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ordered the school board to submit a plan Aug. 19 for starting desegregation in September.

About $220,000,000 has been invested in Liberia to work vast iron ore deposits in the Nimba mountains.

Cost of Bilingualism Could Hurt Business

Political pressures have caused quite a number of leading Canadian companies, particularly those headquartered in eastern Canada, to make reports and announcements in both English and French.

In all cases this has greatly increased the costs of the companies concerned and there must be many shareholders who will question whether this is sound economies.

Dominion Tar and Chemical, one of the companies now in the "bilingual" category, has found only about 1,000 of its 40,000 shareholders have asked to receive company information in French, and only 25 of these are not resident in Quebec.

In these days when business is highly competitive and the export market probably hangs on the ability to cut the corners on expenses, bilingualism could be a serious handicap.

Is CPR About to Get Out?

Harry Young's Business Topics

The CPR has a wholly-owned subsidiary which in the course of time—and perhaps not too far in the future—may become bigger and stronger than the parent.

Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., formed in July, 1962, is one of the lustiest one-year-olds imaginable.

It owns many of the non-transportation assets of the famous railway and its holdings are so enormous it is almost impossible to assess their true worth.

Island Grip

The investment company owns Pacific Logging, which owns 350,000 acres of mature timber on Vancouver Island, said to be worth over $100,000,000, as well as having an increasingly powerful grip on the logging and processing industries on the Island.

Another CPR subsidiary, CP Oil and Gas, is also reputed to have oil and gas holdings worth more than $100,000,000.

Stock market opinion is that rail transportation is certain to become less and less a factor in CPR's profit-making capacity and its other assets will continue to grow and prosper.

500 Acres

Among the other important non-transportation assets of CPR are its 51 per cent control of Consolidated Mining and Smelting, worth $270,000,000 at current market prices, 800,000 acres of prairie farmland and 500 acres in downtown Vancouver.

With the emphasis shifting more and more to diversification the market has been interested in the performance of CPR shares in the past three months. These have risen from about $28 to $33—an unusually large gain in such a period.

Also the number of shares traded on all world exchanges in the famous railway has been high.

More Stock

Market experts say foreign money is buying more and more of the stock.

Others do not think the upward movement in CPR is entirely due to foreign buying, but like to stir up the pot of rumors that are attaching themselves to practically everything the railway does.

One of the most staggering is that the CPR would like to get out of the rail business altogether and see it taken over by the government—at a price, of course—and incorporated in the CNR.

The theme of one major railway for Canada has in recent years become less repellent to those who fear monopolies because, even if there were only one, it would still have as much competition as anyone could wish from air, road and other forms of transportation.

One local freight-user, commenting recently on the duplicating of services by the CPR and CNR, decided quite definitely it was wasteful and unnecessary.

Offices Face

"Here in Victoria alone," he said, "we have the two railways with expensive offices facing one another on Government Street.

"Each also has freight offices, railway yards and docking facilities of its own, and this means also two sets of staff all along the line."

His opinion was that the Canadian railways were not doing enough business in the district to justify this overlapping.

"This must be the same in thousands of places right across the country," he added.

"Under these circumstances I see nothing silly about a merger of the two lines."

Pulled Out

The movement of CPR out of the passenger transportation field has perhaps been nowhere more noticeable than in B.C. It has more or less given up its passenger ferry service between Vancouver and coastal points and only in the past few weeks has pulled out of its joint ownership with the CNR of the Vancouver Hotel.

CPR shareholders apparently regard takeover rumors as bullish to their holdings, for the shares of the famous old railway have not acted so well for many years.

Old Montreal Trust Office Investment Firm's New Home

Moving this week into the former downtown office of Montreal Trust at 1111 Government Street, is the old-established real estate, insurance and brokerage firm of Boorman Investment Co. Ltd.

John and William Boorman, the two surviving sons of the founder of the company, say the move was necessary to give more office space to its fast-growing business.

"Our real estate business so far this year is double what it was a year ago, and we are very happy to move to a modern office that will have ample accommodation for further growth," said John Boorman, managing director of the company.

Founded by Harry E. Boorman in 1913, Boorman Investments in 1930 acquired the insurance, brokerage business of Mara, Bate and Co., which had originated in 1884 as A. W. Jones & Co.

Another brother, Ken, died in 1959.

Among other directors is Andrew Wright who is the Victoria representative of Uplands Ltd.; insurance manager is Harald Siemann, and the firm's notary public is David D. Carmichael, whose father's real estate firm was taken over recently by Boormans.

John Boorman is an executive of the Victoria Insurance Agents Association and immediate past president of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, while Bill is a director of the Victoria Real Estate Board and chairman of its civic affairs committee.

WE HAVE MOVED TO SPACIOUS NEW OFFICES AT 1111 GOVERNMENT ST.

King Fisherman

Three Stand Even In Compleat Race

Three anglers are off the starting line in the race to win the World's Championship Compleat Angler trophy in The Daily Colonist King Fisherman Contest.

Sid Upton, 825 Colville Road, won two Prince Buttons in May with a 29-pound spring and a 5:6-pound coho.

Mark Perry, 2290 Florence, won a Prince Button in May for a 29:12 spring and another in June for an 11-pound coho.

WEIGHTS GIVEN

C. G. Dunn won two Prince Buttons in June, for a 41-pound spring and a 9:8 coho.

For June fish it took to win Prince Buttons a 29:6-pound spring salmon, a 6:12 coho, a 4:8-pound lake trout, a 2:8-pound river trout and a 2:9-pound bass. No tyee were weighed into the contest in June.

The Compleat Angler trophy is awarded to the first person to win all six Prince Buttons in one year. Oak Bay Marina manager Bob Wright won the trophy two and three years ago. There was no winner last year.

THE SAME DAY

Prince Buttons for coho have arrived at the Colonist office, but delivery is still awaited on buttons in the other five categories. They are expected this week and will be mailed to winners the same day they are received.

Gold-plated buttons are awarded each month for the heaviest fish in each category.

They're Both 14

Smallest cadet attending two-week junior leaders' course at Army's Clear Lake Cadet Camp near Brandon, Man., is 14-year-old Paul Smith of Victoria, dwarfed by Pat Kiernan of Windsor, Ont., also 14 but who stands six feet, two inches and tips the scales at 273 pounds during weigh-in by medical officer. Cadet Smith checked in at four feet, one inch, with a weight of 60 pounds.

Scouts Stock Up on Souvenirs For Trip to Greek Jamboree

"G" day is drawing near for a Victoria Scoutmaster and three Queen's Scouts.

They are the ones chosen from Victoria that will leave July 23 for Greece to attend the 11th World Jamboree being held by the Scouts.

Attending from Victoria are Scoutmaster David Barker, 3932 Telegraph Bay Road, and Queen Scouts, David Allen, 1060 Craigflower, Wayne Litster, 340 Stannard, and Leonard Duval, 1815 San Pedro.

During a recent weekend, the Victoria group travelled to Parksville where they met with three boys from Island points who are also attending the Jamboree and had a camp-out to get to know each other.

During the camp-out the boys were busy trying out new cameras to ensure they were working at peak performance to record their chance of a lifetime trip.

Cameras are not the only thing on the boys' minds these days. They are getting their "shots" for the trip and have been very busy gathering lightweight souvenirs to take with them for trading purposes in Greece.

The objects must be light for purposes of air travel, but also must be the type of thing that typifies B.C.

The boys are trying to learn enough Greek to help them on their tour.

Leaving Victoria July 23, the boys will attend a reception in Vancouver at 5 p.m. and board the train for Montreal at 6:30 p.m. They will travel direct route to Greece by air from there, arriving in Athens Aug. 1. Jamboree continues until Aug. 11.

From Aug. 11 to 18 they will tour Southern Greece and return to Victoria Aug. 25.

Attending the Jamboree will be 12,000 Scouts from 75 different countries, including 432 Scouts from Canada.

Coincidence Frees Greek Reds

ATHENS (Reuters) — Two Communists serving prison terms of 20 and 15 years for wartime offences were freed on parole on Crete Saturday after completing two-thirds of their sentences, the justice ministry announced.

The ministry said the releases had no connection with pressure applied on Premier Pipinelis when he accompanied King Paul and Queen Frederika to London on a royal visit last week.

STRABISMUS

Strabismus or squint is the condition where the eyes are turned from their normal position either inwards or outwards. When the eyes are not in their normal position two greatly different images are presented . . . one from each eye. This is very confusing to the brain and the person will see double for a time and then one image will be ignored, and only one eye is used in seeing.

The result is a lowering of vision in the unused eye. This condition is particularly serious in childhood because if one eye goes unused for even a short time, then there will be little or no vision in that eye later in life.

Squint can very often be overcome with glasses or visual training or both but sometimes an operation is required to straighten the eyes.

It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least every two years.

Wynn Wins 300th But Just Barely

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Old Gus finally got No. 300.

Early Wynn became the 14th pitcher in major league history to reach 300 victories Saturday when the Cleveland Indians overcame the Kansas City Athletics 7-4 in the second game of their doubleheader at Kansas City.

The 43-year-old right-hander, who had made seven previous attempts for the coveted 300th, barely gained it in his eighth try. He went only five innings, the minimum number necessary for a starter to qualify as a winner, and left after a shaky fifth with Cleveland ahead 5-4.

Cleveland knocked over the As with a four-run fifth inning, started by Wynn's leadoff single against loser Moe Drabowsky. He was tagged for three Kansas City runs in the last of the inning, then gave way to Jerry Walker.

The As had won the opener 6-5, with Norm Siebern singling in the winning run in the eighth after Jerry Lumpe's homer tied it.

DODGERS KEEP IT UP

The blazing Los Angeles Dodgers opened up a six-game lead over the San Francisco Giants in the National League and the New York Yankees clung to their 5 ½-game edge in the American league despite a 3-1 defeat at Los Angeles.

The Dodgers rode a 15-hit attack and six-hit pitching by Bob Miller to their sixth straight victory, dealing the last-place New York Mets their 14th loss in a row, 11-2.

Both managers Gene Mauch of Philadelphia and Alvin Dark of the Giants were thrown out of the game as the Phillies whipped the Giants 4-3. Roy Sievers drove in all four Phillie runs with two homers.

Dark was chased for protesting tight pitching by Ryne Duren. Mauch got the thumb when umpire Augie Donatelli cautioned Duren about wetting his fingers. Willie Mays knocked in all the Giant runs, two with his 17th homer.

The idle Chicago Cubs, rained out at Cincinnati, edge into third place when Milwaukee knocked off St. Louis 7-5. A tremendous three-run homer by Hank Aaron—his 26th—in the first inning powered the Braves to victory. The Cards now have lost 10 of their last 13 games.

Most of the first division clubs in the American League were moving in reverse gear. In addition to the first-place Yankees the second-place Boston Red Sox and fourth-place Baltimore Orioles lost. Chicago, rained out of its game with Detroit, remained in third place.

Lee Thomas' two-run triple helped the Angels break out of a 10-game losing streak with a victory over the Yankees. The Angels got only four hits off loser Jim Bouton and Marshall Bridges. Dean Chance was the winner with brilliant relief help from Art Fowler.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

It's taken a long time but B.C. Lions are at last ready to take their place as a fully-recognized, even feared, member of the Canadian Football League.

A club which lost three of its last four games last year to miss the Western Conference playdowns for the eighth time in nine seasons is back with comparatively few personnel changes and for the first time since it came into being in 1954, commands the respectful attention of its rivals from the start. That the Lions are being taken so seriously by their opposition is only proof that they have never been too far away in talent, only in organization.

There were no surprises when head-coach Dave Skrien picked his top offensive and defensive players for today's intra-squad game at Empire Stadium, and it is notable that there were only four newcomers in the first-string of 24 players. And that there were four instead of only two was only because of the injuries which have temporarily sidelined halfbacks Tom Larscheid and Mack Burton.

Probably no other club in the CFL will have fewer major changes yet the Lions, only 7-9 and fourth last year, are rated across Canada as starting with a real chance of a Grey Cup appearance. One could ask why.

One of the big reasons is that there are so few changes in first-line personnel. Last season a club which produced the top offence in Canada, the Lions were unable to project their potential with any consistency. They were brilliant from time to time, for a full game or part of one, then gave away points with monumental mental and physical lapses.

This was to be expected from a young club playing its first season under a new coach with a brand-new system. Eight years of frustration and ridicule had left its mark. Club spirit and pride had to be developed and it had to grow on the Lions that they finally belonged.

"The big difference this season," says head-coach Dave Skrien, "should be in the approach of the individual to the club picture. The players now realize from the start that they belong, a feeling we had to develop last season. They didn't know how to handle a win properly but now that part should be over."

Skrien also pointed out that a new system was installed last year.

"It was," he said, "by and large a learning season. We feel we will be much better this time around because we start knowing our system and we were able to recruit to strengthen the positions which cost us games last year."

Obviously, the positions Skrien went out to strengthen were on the defensive team. The Lions were too often hurt last year by passing and have moved to remedy this by using two imports in the defensive backfield.

Because of the injury to Burton, the positions will be manned by two rookies at the start. Only the test of for-keeps competition will prove whether or not Steve Shafer and Bill Munsey will do but there is almost certain assurance that Munsey, Shafer and holdovers By Bailey and Neal Beaumont will be considerable improvement over what the Lions had in the defensive backfield in 1962.

That the veteran Bailey is now scheduled for action in the defensive backfield is another big plus. Bailey tried it as a corner-linebacker last year with only fair results. Now the Lions have in Paul Seale, a big, mobile Vancouver youngster fresh from being a star at Oregon State University, their long-sought partner for Norm Fieldgate at an exacting position at which they have never been strong.

There is a big development, too, in the fact that the Lions last year activated Gary Schwertfeger and Bill Frank during the season. Both will start this season almost rookies but both have had some game action and both have been at two training camps. Both are outstanding prospects, Frank as an offence tackle and Schwertfeger as a middle linebacker. Here are two more positions at which big improvement can be expected.

Another big factor has to be the youthfulness of the club and the development of a bench behind acknowledged first-line performers.

There are at least 20 Lions, including the 24-year-old Joe Kapp and Willie Fleming, 25 years of age or younger. Most of them have yet to reach their full potential. The promise of new Canadian youngsters such as Seale, Greg Findlay, former University of Washington quarterback Pete Ohler, place-kicker Pete Kempf and guard Harvey Scott and the training camp play of lineman Emery Barnes and end Jerry Janes, veteran Canadianized Americans is giving the club a depth it has never had.

The Lions have an improved offence line featuring in Lonnie Dennis and Frank as good a pair of tackles as there is on any club. Guard Tom Hinton will be a Canadian for the last nine games and the Canadians, ends Jim Carphin and Pat Claridge, guard Steve Cotter and centre Ian Hagemoen are barely at the young veteran stage.

Behind a solid front the Lions have a mature Kapp, perhaps the finest open-field runner in the game in Fleming, the all-star fullback in Nub Beamer, a promising replacement for Larscheid in Norris Stevenson and in Sonny Homer, a flanker who has proven a Canadian back can make it big on offence.

On defence, Barney Therrien and Mike Cacic are solid as Canadian tackles and they are surrounded with standout import material—the former Eastern all-star, Dick Fouts, and tough sophomore Mike Martin at defensive ends and Tom Brown and Schwertfeger at the interior linebacking positions. Fieldgate and Seale may be the best two cornermen that the Lions have ever had and backing them all up is that promising new defensive-backfield alignment.

There are worries, too. Will Stevenson compensate adequately for Larscheid? Is Carphin fully recovered from his serious bout with hepatitis? Will rookie Kempf do as a place-kicker and Beaumont as a punter? Will rookies Seale, Munsey and Shafer look as good in league play as in training camp and will Hagemoen hold up as a full-time centre?

But there are problems on all clubs, and probably few have fewer and more chance of getting many a "yes." Barring further injuries, which also happen to other clubs, the Lions are, at the least, almost there. Calgary Stampeders rate with most as the Western favorites, the defending-champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers can certainly not be excused lightly and it is quite possible Saskatchewan Roughriders are going to be hard to beat. But, first or fourth or second or third, we do now have a football club.

Now for No. 301

Thoughtful winner of 300th major league baseball game is veteran Cleveland pitcher Early Wynn. Although sent to showers after five innings, Wynn said he's looking forward to victory No. 301.—(AP Photofax)

Last night's score: Vancouver 11 at Nanaimo 8.

Next game: Tuesday—New Westminster at Vancouver.

NANAIMO (Special) — Vancouver increased its Inter-City Lacrosse League lead to three points here Saturday night, defeating the last-place Nanaimo club, 11-9, for a hard-earned two points before a crowd of 1,050 fans.

Facing elimination from the three-club playdowns, the Nanaimo club put up a stern battle. The score was tied four times, the last time at 6-6 in the third minute of the fourth quarter, before Vancouver pulled away with four successive goals.

Ron Hemmerling got the first, then veteran Gordie Gimple probably settled matters with his second and third goals of the game, the first with his club playing short-handed. Tom English made it 10-6 before losers got to 10-8 with about two and a half minutes left. A goal by Sid Warick at 13:43 settled it for certain.

Consolation for Nanaimo came in the performance of John Ferguson, who took the indivdual scoring lead by getting two goals and an assist. Ferguson now has 69 points, two more than Gimple and New Westminster's Cliff Sepka and three more than New Westminster's Jack Bionda.

Wakeham Retains B.C. Golf Crown

By HARRY YOUNG

VANCOUVER — Bill Wakeham Saturday became the No. 1 amateur golfer in British Columbia for the second year in a row when he closed out a fine week of play at the tough, 6,615-yard Richmond Country Club with a 4 and 3 victory over Blake Cramb in the final of the B.C. amateur championship.

. . . repeat win

The 22-year-old Victoria star was clearly the steadier in the match between the two Vancouver Island zone champions—Wakeham of Zone 1, which embraces the area south of the Malahat, and Cramb of Zone 6, which takes in the rest of the Island and Powell River.

In proving the best for the second straight year, Wakeham was only behind once in five matches embracing six rounds. In an earlier match, he was one down to Vancouver's Bob Plommer at the eighth hole, immediately set that right by winning three of the next four holes. Wakeham started by losing medal honors, to Terry Campbell, in a playoff.

In yesterday's final, Wakeham grabbed the lead right at the start by winning the first hole with a par four.

SHARP PUTTING

The Victorian was deadly with his chipping and putting. Although he missed one putt of less than a yard on each of yesterday's rounds, he sank at least six putts of more than 10 feet while Cramb could only manage one of any length. Wakeham also chipped in for an eagle three, to go five up, on the fifth hole of the afternoon round.

Wakeham's steadiness in the morning built up a four-hole margin for the second 18 holes. The defending champion parred the first 11 holes, winning the fourth and the tenth as well as the first for a three-hole lead.

ONE BACK

He lost the 12th with his first bogey but went four up when pars were good enough on 13 and 14. Cramb got one back when Wakeham bogeyed the 15th and after halving the 16th in par, missed what may have been his best chance when he failed to negotiate a five-foot birdie putt on 17.

Wakeham took full advantage of the life, smashing two long shots to the edge of the green on the par five 18th, chipping close and getting the putt for a birdie four and a four-hole edge. Wakeham was one over the par 72 figure for the first round, Cramb shooting a 77.

Not so consistent in the afternoon, Wakeham was only one over par for the holes he needed on the second round despite six bogeys on the 15 holes played.

Cramb lost all reasonable chance when Wakeham won the 19th with a par and the 20th with a birdie to go six up. Two successive bogeys by the Victoria player cut it to four holes after the 22nd, but Cramb could get no closer.

Wakeham got a hole back with his eagle on the 23rd, lost with a bogey on the 24th, won with a birdie on the 25th and again on the 26th to again go six up. He lost with bogeys on the 27th and 32nd, where Cramb was already dormie, closed it out by halving 33 in par fours.

Two Surprises On Cup Squad

VANCOUVER (Special)—Victoria's Bill Wakeham, B.C. amateur champion for the past two years, and Vancouver veteran Bert Ticehurst made it as expected, but there were two surprises when directors of the B.C. Golf Association made the selections for the provincial Willingdon Cup team last night.

Joining the 22-year-old Wakeham and Ticehurst, who has often been a member, on the four-man B.C. team were Don Gardner, former Manitoba Willingdon Cup player now a member at Vancouver's Capilano club, and Doug Reid, 20-year-old Vancouver player who was a member of the B.C. junior team last year.

Blake Cramb of Powel River, defeated finalist in this year's B.C. amateur championship, and Vancouver-veteran John Russell were named as alternates in that order.

Cramb and youthful Terry Campbell, who earlier this week had won medal honors in the B.C. amateur, had been considered as most likely to join Wakeham and Ticehurst on the team.

BEST SCORES

However, the four players selected, BCGA directors said, had produced the best medal scores in tournament play this year.

Directors also issued a statement which read that "in selecting the team the BCGA wishes to give honorable mention to Terry Campbell. The fact that he has played in only one tournament this year hampered his selection."

A BCGA director will be named as non-playing captain of the B.C. team within the next few days.

Ten Golfers From City In School

Ten Victoria junior golfers are to attend the B.C. Professional Golf Association's five-day golf school at Chilliwack next week.

They are Gary Smith and Len Holyoak (Uplands), Ricky Kent and Don McKay (Colwood), Noel Pumfrey and Cec Ferguson (Gorge Vale), Jay Wilson and Graham Sommer (Victoria) and Mike Graas and Gregg Barnes (Cedar Hill).

Each boy will receive $25 towards the $75-cost of the five-day course. The financial aid will be taken from the proceeds received from the recent challenge match between Bill Wakeham and Lyle Crawford at Uplands.

The Chilliwack school is under the supervision of Stan Leonard who is assisted by several mainland professionals. Lessons on the Meadowlands course will be given mornings and afternoons, and discussion groups with films are scheduled for each evening.

An exhibition match is slated for Wednesday between Stan Leonard and Fred Wood against Lyle Crawford and Brian Copp.

The Victoria boys, most of whom will be playing in the Victoria-Vancouver inter-city match at Point Grey, Vancouver, today, will meet at that club for transportation to Chilliwack.

Battle Royal To Haystack

Haystack Calhoun won the 12-man battle royal on last night's wrestling card at the Memorial Arena.

In other events Dan Miller defeated Jack Terry, Calhoun defeated Bob Morse, and Luis Mayo licked Fritz von Goering. Seymour Koenig and Sandor Kovacs and Ron Echison and Gene Kiniski wrestled to draws.

Yesterday's scores: Builders 10, Athletics 4; Athletics 3, Builders 5.

Next game: Tuesday—Athletics vs. Transport Workers, 6:15 p.m., Royal Athletic Park.

Lowly Builders, cellar dwellers of the Senior Amateur Baseball League, rose up and took a doubleheader from second-place Athletics yesterday at Royal Athletic Park. Builders won the error-studded first game, 10-4, and the second contest, 5-3.

Five runs in the third inning, four of them off errors, were all pitcher Barry Scott needed as he spun a five-hitter in the opener. Herb Weatherall provided a two-run homer in the fourth as Builders bombed three Athletic pitchers.

Neil Worboys' two-run fifth-inning double proved to be the margin of victory in the second game.

The double loss could be fatal to Athletics' first-place hopes as it dropped them four games behind Transport Workers and the Workers hold two games in hand.

Three Tennis Titles For Ray Aldeguer

Ray Aldeguer had a highly successful afternoon yesterday in the finals of the Victoria City Hard Courts Tennis championships.

Aldeguer won the men's singles by defeating Ted Smythe, 6-2, 6-4. He then combined with Jack Cosar to take the men's doubles, 10-8, 6-8, 6-1, from George MacMinn and Smythe. He finished off the day be teaming up with Lavinia Greenwood to win the mixed doubles, 6-2, 6-2, over Margaret Lyons and Vince Clarkson.

Yesterday's results:

Women's singles—Margaret Lyons defeated Sally Woods 7-5, 6-1.

Women's doubles—Margaret Lyons and Sally Woods defeated Wendy Cuppage and Joan Woolison.

Men's singles—Ray Aldeguer defeated Ted Smythe, 6-2, 6-4.

Men's doubles—Ray Aldeguer and Jack Cosar defeated George MacMinn and Ted Smythe, 10-8, 6-8, 6-1.

Mixed doubles—Lavinia Greenwood and Ray Aldeguer defeated Margaret Lyons and Vince Clarkson, 6-2, 6-2.

Ramos Retains Crown

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Sugar Ramos retained his world featherweight championship Saturday night by outpointing Nigerian challenger Rafiu King in a 15-round title fight at the El Toreo Bullring.

It was 21-year-old Ramos' first defence of the championship he won March 21 in a 10th-round knockout of American Davey Moore in Los Angeles. Moore died of injuries suffered in the fight.

Ramos, a former Cuban, now living in the U.S., had King close to a knockout in the sixth round, but the challenger rallied and had the champion in trouble in the 12th.

In Stock Car Final

Spills Eliminate Rivals

Bob Browne won the 25-lap main event at the Western Speedway last night after three mishaps disposed of some of his toughest competition.

Dave Brown, first in the second heat, and Brian Willson, trophy dash winner, both spun out and were involved in collisions. Doug Bowell's car rolled over forcing him out of the race.

Gordie Allburg, a rookie driver, pulled an upset victory in the first heat.

Players Hail Emancipation In Soccer

LONDON (Special)—An English high court ruling freeing the "paid slaves" of football from a century-old system described as "inhuman and incongruous" has brought joy to England's 2,700 professional players and fear to clubs facing possible disaster.

Club directors throughout the nation are meeting to consider their position following the historic decision by Justice Wilberforce that the retain and transfer system they operate for their players is an "unreasonable restraint on trade." In short it's illegal.

It means that clubs will NO longer be able to hold a player against his will once his contract expires. They will NO longer be able to demand a transfer fee when a player leaves one club to join another.

Striking the blow for freedom was a shy, fair-haired English international named George Eastman who challenged the validity of the system governing the working conditions of all English professionals. He was backed in the test case by the small but progressive and increasingly powerful players' union.

The 26-year-old inside forward who starred in England's three-game European tour earlier this summer, went on "strike" for five months in 1960 because Newcastle refused to put him on the transfer list following differences with club officials.

He refused to sign a new contract and sued the Tyneside club for damages, claiming Newcastle was holding him illegally. Justice Wilberforce dismissed the claim but declared the contract system illegal.

Past Efforts Destroyed?

Few observers are willing to predict the immediate effect of the ruling, considered one of the most important in the history of British sport.

But many officials fear efforts to build a championship team by spending thousands on talented players will be destroyed by the players themselves walking out to join other clubs for more money. Everton won the league championship last year with some £300,000 worth of talent and Tottenham, the European Cup Winners' Cup champions, are close behind in value. Both could possibly be wrecked by player walkouts.

Manchester United chairman Harold Hardman, whose club paid a record £115,000 for Scottish international Denis Law, received a "terrific shock" from the judgment.

"The whole of the football world will have to get together to see how they can modify the effects of the judgment," he said. "We can only wait and see what loyalty they (the players) will show the various clubs they have served."

Newcastle director William McKeag warned that the ruling may turn out to be a "pyrrhic victory" for the players and said: "Twenty per cent of footballers may benefit from hawking their talents but 80 per cent will probably feel a chilly draught."

Then he echoed the thoughts of most club directors and league officials themselves by declaring: "You cannot destroy a system of rules and regulations built up for over a century without putting the game into an absolutely chaotic state."

One immediate result is a likely attempt by both players and club officials to hammer out agreement on ways of drawing up long-term contracts that would be binding by law on both sides. Most footballers now sign annual contracts and many clubs refuse to consider contracts for a longer period.

Mass Walkouts Rejected

But Cliff Lloyd, secretary of the players' union, rejected suggestions of mass walkouts by players leading to "chaos and anarchy."

"I certainly don't think that the end of the retain and transfer system will cause the great upheaval in football so many people are predicting."

Eastman himself, now happily playing for Arsenal, limited his comments to: "I have always wanted professional footballers to have the same conditions of employment that people enjoy outside the game."

In his 20,000-word judgment, Justice Wilberforce made it clear that he considered the system a medieval one which flourished through the dictatorial methods of club directors and offered the players little protection.

The system has been "stigmatized" by Eastman's lawyer as a "relic from the middle ages, involving the buying and selling of human beings as chattels," he said.

Anyone NOT hardened to accept this practice would view it as "inhuman and incongruous to the spirit of a national sport," he added. While awaiting transfer, a player's feelings may NOT be unlike those of a "slave in a slave market wondering who his new master is to be."

The judge rejected arguments that the transfer fee system was necessary to prevent big city clubs getting all the best players, saying rich clubs now seemed to corner the talent market.

"The system," he added, "is an employers' system set up in an industry where the employers have succeeded in establishing a monolithic united front."

Vault Record Higher

Cowichan Lakers Beat Old Champs

By ROBIN JEFFREY

Duncan Babe Ruth League All-Stars, Island and B.C. champions in 1962, have a long row to hoe if they are to successfully defend their titles.

Duncan lost, 5-2, to Lake Cowichan in the first day of play yesterday in this year's double-elimination Island finals. In the other games yesterday Victoria Cosmopolitans dumped Sidney - Brentwood Cosmos, 8-0.

Jim Jubenville, sharp Lake Cowichan southpaw, was given little trouble by the Duncan boys until the last inning. With two out and one on, Jubenville struck out Dave Stotts. But catcher Randy Miles dropped the ball and Stotts reached first.

BIG THREAT

Ted Evans, the next batter, grounded to first but was safe on an error and a run scored. That brought Larry Romould to the plate with the tying run. Romould had tripled his first time up and scored Duncan's first run.

Jubenville, however, refused to panic and while duelling with Roumould spotted Stotts with too big a lead off second and picked him off for the last out.

Play continues today with Evening Optimists meeting Victoria Cosmos at 12:30 and Sidney - Brentwood Cosmos tangling with Duncan at 3:15. Both games are at Reynolds Road Park.

'Banksie' Dies

TORONTO (UPI)—E. Harold Banks, a well known golf official known affectionately to hundreds of golfers as "Banksie," died in hospital here Friday following a brief illness. He was 82.

Big Experiment

Derby Day Here Monday

The Big Experiment takes place at Memorial Arena Monday night, when the Roller Derby hits town with a game between Seattle-Portland Westerners and Mexico City Cardenales.

It's strictly a one-shot deal for arena manager Jack Morgan, who wants to see how Victoria fans react to a sport that is unknown in this district except through a few television matches. If the crowd makes it look profitable, Victoria will join the league with one match a week, using Westerners as their "home" team along with Portland, Spokane Seattle, Tacoma and other Pacific Northwest cities.

What exactly is a Roller Derby? No one here seems to know. But some interesting facts have sifted through from other league cities:

Roller Derby is enjoying the greatest season in its 27-year history with 82,000 fans turning out in the opening month of March. In April it played to 62,000 fans in San Jose and 10,227 in San Francisco's Cow Palace. In Fresno, Calif., teams drew over 3,000 fans for three straight nights.

Officials claim that San Francisco Bombers, who have won the league championship for the past three years, played before home crowds totalling 475,000 in 1962 — outdrawing the city's football 49ers, hockey Seals and basketball Warriors.

The league sprawls over the United States, with teams in San Francisco, Hawaii, New York, Los Angeles, Mexico City, Chicago, St. Louis, and the "home" cities of the travelling Westerners.

Figures like those make Morgan believe the sport can catch hold here. Still to be answered is that big question: What in the heck is the sport in the first place?

Briefly (because we don't know enough to discuss it at length), teams try to spring certain players loose from the pack, with a point awarded for each time said player laps the field. Meanwhile the rest of the team is trying to clear the way and the opposition is trying to block the route.

Game time is 8:30.

Over Current Ties Vancouver Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Locheed's Over Current Saturday equalled the Exhibition Park track record for a mile and 70 yards in winning the second division of the $2,000 Flamingo Handicap in 1:41 3-5.

Ridden by Charlie Ulrich, Over Current won the race by three lengths. Blue Hawk was second and Fusser's Idle third. The first division went to Puritan Stable's Prince Scorpion. Heavily favored Ky. Miracle was second, Consider Me third.

Over Current's time equalled the record set by Miracle Escort in 1957.

Charles Wallops Rodgers

Lefty Captures British Open

Associated Press Sports Writer

LYTHAM AND ST. ANNES, England (AP) —Bob Charles, a willowy New Zealander with the sensitive putting touch of a safe-cracker, smashed Phil Rodgers of La Jolla, Calif., by eight strokes Saturday in their 36-hole playoff for the British Open title and became the first left-hander ever to win a major golf championship.

Charles, 27, called the "lefty Hogan" by Scottish admirers, fired sub-par rounds of 69-71—140 over the 6,757-yard, par 72 Royal Lytham and St. Annes course and routed Rodgers, the uninhibited, wise - cracking ex-Marine, who struggled home in 62-76—148. They had tied at 277 at the end of the regulation 72 holes Friday.

NEVER HEADED

Charles, a good-looking, six-foot two stylist who plays with no emotion, applied the pressure to his American foe by knocking in a 45-foot putt at the third hole and taking a lead he never relinquished.

Putting brilliantly — sinking 20, 30 and 40 footers as if they were kick-ins — Charles went three strokes ahead at the end of the morning round and shot into a five-stroke lead through the 20th hole.

It was at this point that Rodgers, 25, wearing a jaunty baseball cap and swapping jokes with the gallery all around the course made his only serious surge. Over the next four holes—the 21st through the 24th—he picked up four shots to cut the New Zealander's advantage to a single stroke.

ROOF FELL IN

Then the roof fell on the California jester.

On the 25th hole, Rodgers took a double bogey six and on the 26th, he holed a shot from 50 feet—the back edge of the green—for a birdie three only to have Charles, a man of ice, sink a 25-foot putt right behind it.

They halved the hole in birdie three's, but the American was never the same after that. He became grim. His shots lost some of their zing, and, before he knew it, he was eight down. He lost strokes on six holes in a row.

The match became a runaway and the crowd, numbering about 2,000 in sunny, breezy weather, deserted in large clusters and trudged back to the club house.

Coho, Too

Humpies Hit At Sooke

A big run of pink (humpback) and coho salmon hit Sooke to William Head waters yesterday morning.

Limit catches were the order of the day and fishermen in just about every boat wore ear-to-ear grins.

"I've been weighing fish for the King Fisherman contest all morning," said Vi Doswell of the Sea Shanty at Gordon Beach.

Perry Brown of Becher Bay Marina sent in a rush call for more King Fisherman entry forms. "We just can't keep up with it," he said.

"Most of our fishermen are getting limits," said Mrs. J. Smith from Pedder Bay Marina.

"It's terrific. I have never seen anything like it," said Bill Langas of the Sand, Sea and Surf Resort at Weir's Beach.

Most of the fish were humpies which may be weighed into the King Fisherman Contest as spring salmon, but there was a good smattering of coho and the odd heavyweight spring salmon.

They seemed to be taking anything . . . minnows, strip, spoons, light lines, heavy lines, with flashers and without flashers.

The big run of pinks seemed to end at William Head, but there was some fair spring salmon fishing at Oak Bay.

Act Now For Bonus

Football fans who intend to get in on the bonus offer for B.C. Lion's closed-circuit broadcasts have only a week left to act. The bonus offer, nine games for the price of eight, closes July 22, not Aug. 1 as stated in yesterday's Colonist. Tickets for the Royal Theatre showings are on sale at Eaton's ticket office.

Close Finish

Eighth Crown for Marlene

OTTAWA (CP) — Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonthill, Ont., grinned broadly as she calmly sank a six-foot birdie putt on the 18th green Saturday to win the Canadian Women's Close Championship for the eighth time.

The sprightly little golfer, wearing canary-yellow shorts, white blouse and a narrow-brimmed straw hat, shot a three-over-par 77 on the last round of the 54-hole competition to finish with a medal score of 231.

Cathy Galusha of Red Deer, Alta., finishing much later, won the Canadian Junior Championship with a total of 246. Marilyn Palmer of Kamloops was second with 247 and Jocelyn Bourassa of Trois-Rivieres, Que., third with 248.

Marlene's putt meant the difference between an assured championship and a sudden-death playoff for the title.

Two threesomes behind her came Gail Harvey of Toronto, aiming for her first senior title. She needed a birdie at the 18th to tie for the lead, but her approach shot was just off the green to the right. She gamely went for the birdie but had to settle for a par four.

She finished her final round with 76 for a 232 total, one stroke behind the champion.

Sue Hilton of London, Ont., defending titlist, still in contention early in the round, came in late with 77 for 235.

Betty Stanhope Cole of Edmonton, one stroke behind Mrs. Streit starting the final round, was in trouble most of the way. Her 82 gave her fourth place with 237.

Mrs. Streit, brimming over with delight, will take a shot at the Canadian Women's Open championship at the Royal Ottawa Club next week. A qualifying round will be played Tuesday and the low 32 go into match play starting Wednesday.

Mrs. Robert Lyle of Montreal finished in fifth place with 238

Gayle Hitchens, Vancouver, finished with a 77 and a 241 total.

Vamps Win In Nanaimo

Victoria Vampires track club did well at the Caledonia Games in Nanaimo yesterday.

John Edwards won the juvenile 100, 220 and the open 440 as well as running anchor on the victorious Island relay team.

Bob McLaren took the open 100 and 220 while Vicki Sargent placed first in the girls' 100.

Dave Rasmussen of the Victoria YMCA club lost the half-mile event when he misjudged the finish line.

Manning Attitude 'Destructive'

QUEBEC (CP)—Rene Levesque, Quebec natural resources minister, says Alberta Premier Manning's reaction to the planned royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism "represents an attitude that must be changed before it destroys the country."

Mr. Manning said the federal government should be more explicit as to the objectives of the commission.

If the objective "is to give some form of official recognition to a dual English and French culture, we suggest that this is unrealistic and impracticable and we doubt that it would meet with any widespread public acceptance," he said.

Mr. Levesque said: "The attitude of Mr. Manning truly reflects, with the merit of being brutally frank, an attitude that it is absolutely necessary to try to rectify before it destroys the country."

He described the attitude as "a deep Anglo-Saxon unity not conscious of French-speaking Canadians."

Mr. Levesque said the royal commission should attack the real roots of the problem, binationalism.

India Shuts Door To South Africa

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — India Saturday banned all South African ships and aircraft from Indian sea and air ports as a protest against South Africa's apartheid policy. An announcement by the Indian external affairs ministry listed a series of new measures taken by the government to cut all ties with South Africa in line with a resolution adopted by the UN Assembly last year.

Garden Notes

Good Choice by Sea

By M. V. CHESTNUT, FRHS

ESCALLONIA HEDGE—(J. N. F., Victoria). Escallonia is a very good choice as a hedge for a seaside garden. The shrub is best propagated by using cuttings made from this year's shoots taken about the third week in August, four to five inches long with the tips intact. Trim each slip with a razor blade through a leaf joint at the base and remove the lower leaves. Moisten the cut end, dip in a hormone rooting powder, shake off any excess and insert firmly in a shaded bed of sandy soil or in a coldframe.

Next spring, transfer your rooted slips to a sunny, open nursery bed, a foot apart in the row and with rows 2½ feet apart. Grow on, feeding and watering generously, until the autumn of 1964, then plant out in the hedge position where the ground should be enriched beforehand with old rotted manure.

Space your plants two feet apart in a single row or, if you want a thicker hedge, in two staggered rows two feet apart each way. In the spring of 1965, about March, reduce the height of your new hedge by one-third to cause it to branch out and thicken at the base.

HARDY GLOXINIA—(F.S., Ganges). The plants you bought under the name of hardy gloxinia are not true gloxinias at all, nor even related, but are so called because the flower has a superficial resemblance to that of the gloxinia.

The true name is Incarvillea delavayi, named for Father Incarville, a Jesuit missionary in China where the plant grows wild. It has large and beautiful trumpet-shaped flowers in a clear rose shade and prefers a well-drained, somewhat sandy soil in full sun. In spite of its nickname it is not fully hardy and should be covered in winter after the tops have died down with a mound of dried bracken or straw. Propagation is by seeds or by root cuttings.

BARTLETT PEAR—(A. W., Sidney). The Bartlett pear is partly self-fertile and can produce a fair crop of fruit witout a mate, but you get a much heavier set when a compatible tree such as the Conference pear is grown nearby. It works the other way round too—Bartlett is an excellent pollenizer for Conference, so both trees carry heavy crops when grown together.

The Anjou pear is self-sterile and can set no fruit at all without a mate. Conference makes a good "husband" for Anjou and vice versa, but Bartlett pollen is useless for Anjou.

CHEMICAL FERTILIZERS—(E. P. K., Victoria). Chemical fertilizers do not "spoil" or "poison" the soil except when wrongly or excessively used—it is when chemicals are relied upon to the exclusion of organic matter that trouble may start. And you can kill plants just as effectively with an overdose of manure as you can with too much fertilizer.

Organic matter in the soil, whether it be manure, compost, peat or decaying leaves, acts as a buffer to the applications of chemical fertilizer so the damage is nothing like as critical as when chemicals are used on humus-deficient soil. Actually, your plants do much better when manure and fertilizer are used in combination than either is used alone.

TONY BILL Blows His Horn

Two Names to Remember

By HAROLD HEFFERNAN

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Here's an actor to confound the professional name changers.

He's 22-year-old Tony Bill, a fellow with two first names—both of them his own—and that's all.

Tony has scored a smashing debut as Frank Sinatra's brother in Come Blow Your Horn and appears next with Jackie Gleason in Soldier in the Rain.

Tony Bill, Tony points out firmly, is not a moniker contrived by a Hollwood agent like Henry Willson who specializes in marquee sparklers culled from the phone book or off cigar boxes. Tony Bill even offered to show his birth certificate, as he has done on other such occasions.

Belabored as he has been since childhood by that provocative pair of first names, Tony Bill has not the slightest intention of changing either or both for professional accommodations.

Paramount Studio suggested it, but the proud Tony Bill wouldn't listen.

The son of a prominent San Diego realtor, Gerard Bill, the pixie-faced acting recruit was raised in the Southern California seaport.

Tony Bill arrived in the entertainment capital armed with a letter of introduction from the dean of Notre Dame University to movie director Leo McCarey.

"The dean is a personal friend of Mr. McCarey's and something of a mentor to me," explained the gangling six-foot, 160-pounder. "Since Mr. McCarey wasn't active at the time, he sent me to a talent agency in Beverly Hills.

"I had barely entered the office when two Paramount producers, Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear, called in. They were looking for a young fellow to play Sinatra's young brother.

"The agent gave me a quick study and said into the phone, 'I'll rend him right over.' I found out that in trying to crash Hollywood it sure helps to know somebody who knows somebody. And it doesn't hurt to be in the right place at the right time."

All this career-crashing happened less than a month after his graduation from university, where he majored in English.

But it was his extra-curricular activities in the college drama clubs that paved his way to a quick trial. He is, in fact, the only actor of record who got his dramatic training at an all-girl college.

While attending Notre Dame, he played the male leads in all the plays staged at the institution's girls' auxiliary, St. Mary's College across the street.

He turns in such an exciting performance as the Sinatra kin he is being hailed as one of Hollywood's brightest new prospects.

His next appearance will be in Soldier in the Rain, in which Jackie Gleason and Steve McQueen are co-starred.

Bill's romantic interest will be Hollywood problem child Tuesday Weld in the Gleason movie.

Toni recalls with amusement that just one year ago he and his fiancee were visiting a professor and discussing how a young couple could live on $400 a month after graduation.

"Just six months later we were married," he said.

Her name? Toni — Toni Grey.

So now it's Tony and Toni Bill. Their first child, he says, will be named either Anthony or Antoinette.

Jackie Scares 'Em With Diet Splurge

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Jackie Gleason has settled his copious frame in a fancy bungalow on the Paramount lot to make Soldier in the Rain—and at once has thrown a scare into the film's producers.

He's gone on another of his sporadic dieting campaigns, threatening to curb the food intake and quit liquor entirely.

Cameramen don't like this at all. They worry about those matching shots. If suddenly Jackie throws in the sponge and again goes all out for the meatballs and the Scotch, half the negative might go down the drain. But they don't look for him to set any marathon records this trip.

His "form sheet" shows these forays are brief, and Jackie himself adds fuel to the fire.

"No matter what anyone tells you," Jackie said, you only gain weight from putting stuff into your mouth. I'm waiting for that great invention of tasteless food. Unfortunately, it would put too many restaurants out of business. Yes, I like to eat and I'm not one to leave the table hungry. I've got no diet I can recommend, I only suffer when I have to lose pounds.

"One thing I know—I won't give up booze or smoking—just temporarily, maybe, but never for good.

"My charm is ingrained. I think I'm beautiful, talented, lovely, sweet, and just great as I am," he said, adding, "being on the chubby side is an advantage. If any normal-sized man had said that you'd have felt he was an egomaniac."

Space Stuff Vanishes On British Railways

LONDON (AP)—Britain's state-owned railway system has mislaid research equipment safely retrieved from space.

The Jodrell Bank Observatory said the equipment was in a rocket fired in Australia June 5, recovered, flown to London and handed to the state railway system for the 160-mile journey to Jodrell Bank. It vanished June 12.

Pakistani Hills

Buffalo Girls Boastful

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (Reuters)—The women in the hills here boast about whether they are two-buffalo or three-buffalo girls.

The going price in districts of Pakistan's northwest frontier for an average sort of bride is two buffalos, or three cows.

But prices vary widely in these tribal regions from about $40 to $10,000, depending on the girl's physical charm, capacity to work and the status of her family.

A recent survey by Peshawar University unearthed these and other facts about tribal marriages in the Kurram Valley, North Waziristan, Malakhand, Kalam and the state of Swat.

In most cases, a tribesman must pay for his bride in addition to the expenses of the dowry and traditional ceremonies.

Payments are usually in cash. In some families in Swat, Kalam and Malakhand, however, cattle are legal tender for brides.

The survey said the respect a married woman generally commands in tribal society is often directly proportionate to the "bride - money" paid for her. The bride and her in-laws often boast about it in village society.

VICTORIA'S MOST LISTENED TO STATION

Saanich Building

Only Whisker Away

With almost six months to go in 1963, the value of building permits issued in Saanich is within a whisker of last year's 12-month total of $10,680,000.

Building department spokesmen confidently expect to surpass the all-time record of $11,019,837, set in 1958.

The building boom is strikingly illustrated by the fact 11 house building permits were issued in the first 11 days of this month.

Saanich's figures have jumped fast with permits for just three projects — the $1,220,000 library building on the Gordon Head campus, a $100,000 house and a $1,330,000 garden apartment development.

SCHOOL ADDITIONS

The permits for the first two projects were issued in June and the garden apartment scheme was started last week.

Permits also issued this month include a $25,821 addition to Frank Hobbs school. Also near are three further school additions with a total value of $200,000 — McKenzie, Durrance and Cloverdale.

SEVERAL OTHERS

Developers are known to be preparing several other, less valuable apartment developments and building permits for these will likely be issued this month.

"All in all," one spokesman said, "we could beat our all-time record by the end of July. We will set a new record by Dec. 31."

Garden Block Rising

The company which built Victoria's first two high-rise apartments is building a two-storey, $1,330,000 garden apartment in Saanich, near Richmond Road.

Foundations for the six buildings in the development are being poured on the nine-acre site between Townley and Newton streets, immediately against the Victoria boundary.

LANDSCAPED AREA

The buildings will hold 160 suites — 21 one-bedroom apartments, 63 two-bedroom suites and 76 three-bedroom suites. Off-street parking will be provided for 163 cars in a landscaped area.

Developers are Wescott Apartments Ltd. of West Vancouver, which built the Beacon Towers and Bickerton Court high-rises on Douglas Street, overlooking Beacon Hill Park.

SWIMMING POOL

The facilities will include a swimming pool with changing rooms, sandboxes for children, park-type benches set in the landscaped grounds and garden sculpture.

The six buildings are L-shaped and two storeys high, and include balconies.

Construction began last week on the foundations, as soon as a building permit was issued by Saanich.

Y Drawings Ready Soon

Working drawings for the $1,000,000 YM-YWCA building at Courtney and Quadra are expected to be ready by November. The drawings are being prepared by architects Wade, Stockdill and Armour.

Resting Places

Reconnoitring for landing space amid forest of stakes laying out foundations for Saanich's $1,330,000 garden apartment centre is one of seagulls dispossessed last week when laborers started work. Nine-acre site between Townley and Newton, west of Richmond, was vacant land for many years. — (Ted Shackleford)

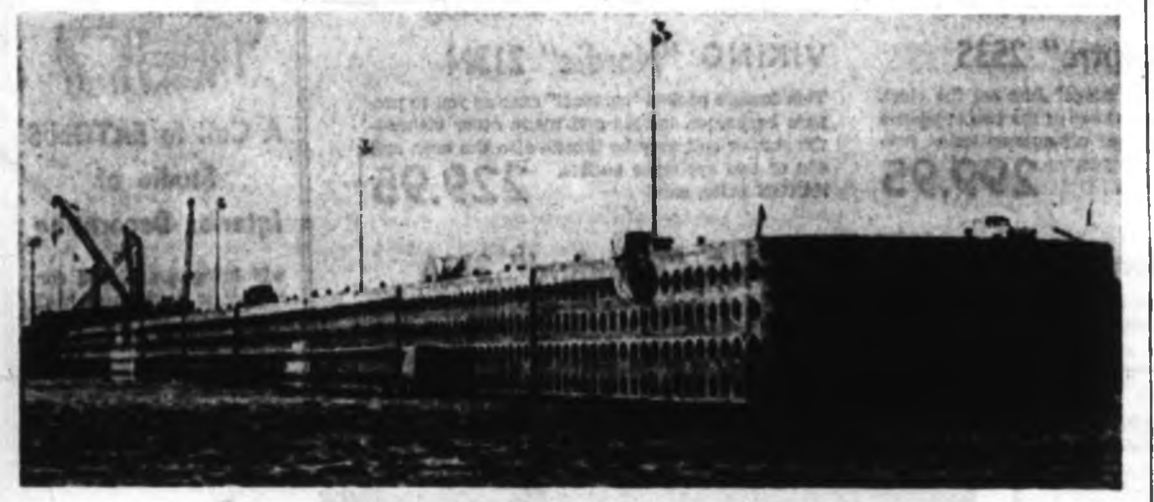
Storms Don't Bother New Quebec Pier

* * * * * *



Baie Comeau's unique perforated breakwater and wharf

* * * * * *

OTTAWA — The world's first perforated caisson breakwater and wharf at Baie Comeau, Que., has been proven successful under storm conditions and already is being called the Swiss cheese wharf.

Built by the federal department of public works at a cost of close to $2,000,000 this unique structure has weathered storms and heavy wave attacks to such a degree engineers in Canada and other countries are observing it with keen interest.

The existing pierhead, built along traditional lines, protects a newsprint loading berth at Baie Comeau, but heavy seas once overturned a railway freight car and derailed a boxcar as well as causing general disorder on the wharf deck.

The new perforated structure was being built at that time to the same elevation as the existing wharf, 25 feet above low water where the tide range is approximately 16 feet.

There was a lot of construction equipment, lumber piles and material on its deck, but these remained intact. There were no breakers on the new wharf by the waves due to the unique design.

The new wharf, designed by the department of public works and the National Research Council, is on the north shore of the lower St. Lawrence River about 250 miles east of Quebec City, and brings a puzzling reaction to those who have seen it.

It is little wonder, because the idea of building a breakwater honeycombed with holes does not fit in with the ordinary conception of massive concrete and rock structures required to withstand storm waves.

A new way to dissipate wave energy was accomplished by a perforated wall on the outer side of the structure which allows the waves to pour through the openings into a chamber where their energy is reduced by friction and turbulence.

Water spilling back out of the holes creates a counter wave which meets the next oncoming wave and reduces its force. Thus the constant filling and emptying of the chamber reduces the wave action and in so doing creates a quiet harbor for ships berthed on the opposite side of the structure.

On a solid-faced breakwater, wave action results in a vertical run up almost twice the wave height.

It has been estimated the perforated wall—much like a Swiss cheese—reduces this run up by as much as 80 per cent. It also eliminates "overtopping" sufficiently to permit cargo handling on the deck of the structure in all but the most severe storms.

A patent on the design is held by the Canadian Patents and Development Ltd., a subsidiary of the research council.

McNamara Corp. of Toronto was granted a licence to produce the breakwater for the department of public works and other licences are available. Patents have been granted in Great Britain and France and are pending in various other countries.

Because of its relatively rugged topography, Baie Comeau is almost entirely dependent on water transportation for both its imports and exports, including freight traffic for everyday use of the town as well as bulk cargo to and from the local industries.

Building Questions —And Answers

Q. Can soft wood floors be resanded and varnished the same as hardwood?—Mrs. L.L.H.

A. They can be sanded and varnished but the finish will not hold up as well as on hardwood. Soft wood also will not stand too many resandings.

Most builders recommend soft wood be cleaned and repainted or covered with linoleum or carpeting if the wood is pitted or splintered. A good grade of floor paint will usually hold up better on a soft wood floor than varnish.

Q. Our cabinets, natural knotty cedar, need refinishing. The putty we used to fill small holes in the wood is a lighter color than the wood. Is there any way we can make the putty match the wood? We want to keep the natural grain of the wood. —R.A.B.

A. You cannot stain the old putty, but you can match the color in a refinishing job by using a new filler. First remove the present finish down to the bare wood, using a commercial paint remover. Then sand thoroughly.

After removing the old putty, use a new filler matching whatever stain you decide to use in refinishing the cabinets. Consult your paint dealer for instructions on how to make the wood filler match the stain.

Q. About a year ago we bought a duplex that had been vacant several months and we checked the floors for squeaks and firmness. De did not, unfortunately, check to see if they were level. We found later the floors seem to be high in the centre. We would like to put down carpeting, but want to make the floors as level as possible before we do this. Can the centre portion be nailed down again? These are not tongue-and-groove floors. —C.D.M.

A. Buckling floor boards can be caused either by dampness or because when installed, not enough room was allowed for possible expansion. If caused by moisture, heat applied under or to the surface of the boards will sometimes cause them to settle back. If not, rip the buckled boards down the middle with a circular electric portable saw, thereby removing some of the wood substance so the boards can be face-nailed down to the joists.

Topics: Safety To Snow

Annual meeting of the Public Works Association will be held in the Empress Hotel Sept. 25-27.

Formerly known as the Municipal Engineers' Association of B.C., the association comprises engineers and municipal superintendents from all over the province.

The agenda will include such subjects as waterworks design, snow removal, underground wiring, land registry practice, safety in trench excavation, culvert and drainage design and municipal liability insurance.

Coast-Long Strike Starts

Full Fish Industry Closure Expected Here Wednesday

The Victoria fishing industry is anticipating a virtually complete shutdown in the wake of a B.C. coast-long fishermen's strike which began Saturday.

B.C.'s 5,000 salmon net fishermen tied up their boats after voting 81.7 per cent in a government-supervised ballot to strike to back demands for better fish prices and fringe benefits. About 250 to 300 of the fishermen live in the Victoria-Sidney area.

Shoreworkers voted 54.1 per cent for strike action in another government-supervised ballot and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers has set 11 a.m. Wednesday as deadline for their strike, to allow for processing of fish caught before the strike deadline.

CITY HANDFUL

This will involve the handful of union workers at the B.C. Packers plant at Ogden Point.

W. H. Hilborn of Oakland Industries Ltd. says he expects other Victoria fish processors to close down Wednesday "until we see what's going to happen, anyway."

NON-UNION

C. A. Torraville, a Victoria fish wholesaler, said he expects all fishing boats to tie up, including non-union vessels.

The "sports" fishermen, who fish for a bit of extra money in addition to their regular jobs, will probably also tie up, he said. After all, he said, most of them belong to some union in their regular jobs.

Mr. Torraville says he is icing fish and plans to supply his customers until his supply runs out.

HOPE VOICED

"I hope the dispute will be settled by then," he added.

Tendermen, who operate ships carrying fish from fishing boats to processors, rejected the strike call by two votes in a third government-supervised poll.

But the union said they will not handle any fish declared "hot" by net fishermen and shore workers.

Thief Takes Change Purse

A thief escaped with $35 in cash when he stole a change purse from Mrs. James Swindell, 431 Grange on Saturday. The small purse was inside her purse at a coin laundry at the Burnside shopping centre.

Six East Indian Boys Boost Funds for Hall

Six young East Indian boys did their bit yesterday towards a proposed community hall, by collecting $25 worth of bottles in the city.

The Victoria East Indian Society has raised about $1,100 in a community hall fund since the group was formed three months ago, said a spokesman.

The boys who picked up bottles yesterday were brothers Millyn and Gurdave Sundher, their cousins Ajmare and Kabir Sundher, and Jaspaul Johal and Gurdial Singh.

Two Factions Different Goals

Neighbors at Odds

Neighbor was pitted against neighbor at Prospect Lake yesterday over a dispute about undrinkable lake water.

The Prospect Lake and District Community Association apparently has broken into two opposing camps—each claiming it has support of most residents of the area.

The furore erupted some time after a report from the metropolitan board of health that water from the lake should be boiled before it is used for human consumption.

Lake Water Sparks Controversy

One group, headed by community association president Brian Hoole, hopes that contamination in Prospect Lake can be reduced by a crackdown on septic tank operation.

The other group, headed by Ian Stewart, chairman of the group's pollution control committee, wants a new source of domestic water supply in addition to septic tank regulations.

Meanwhile, Saanich council seems to be caught in the middle, and public works committee chairman Coun. Hugh Curtis suggested yesterday that the Prospect Lake ratepayers "get their own house in order before they start complaining about the council."

Council has listened to representations from the ratepayer association's pollution control committee and offered to conduct a water supply cost survey if more than 50 per cent of the residents of the area petition for the survey to be held.

REPORT ASKED

Council has also asked David W. R. Smith, chief inspector of services, to prepare a report on septic tank operation around the lake. This report is expected to be ready for council early this fall.

Mr. Hoole charged that a petition now being circulated among lakeside residents calling for the municipal water cost survey "is not under the auspices of our association."

He was backed up by Mrs. Sybil McCulloch, 5021 Prospect Lake Road, who said that only "four or five people" are pushing for installation of water mains.

PREFER TO WAIT

Majority of the residents would prefer to wait a few years until population growth in Saanich makes it feasible for water to be supplied at a cheaper rate, she said.

"The majority group is with me . . . I would say we have 80 per cent of the people with us," said Mr. Stewart. "We want both the lake to be pure and a domestic water supply."

Loggers Thrill Tourists

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Ten thousand tourists from as close as Victoria and as far away as Glenview, Illinois, crowded onto Sooke River flats yesterday to see a uniquely Canadian celebration they can't see anywhere else—All-Sooke Day.

Still basically a loggers' sports meeting, visitors were thrilled and intrigued by the axe throwing, log birling, the tree chopping and the high rigging.

But the real story of yesterday's All-Sooke Day lay below the surface.

Like the tree-chopping contests. Allan Woodrow won the men's contest again—he won it last year—and his son Danny who he trained took the novice title.

And long-time world's champion axe thrower Hugh McKenzie of Victoria lost out this year to his son, Harold, whom he trained. Last year Hugh lost to another man he trained—his son-in-law Neil Crockett.

Mrs. A. S. Fleming, 5118 Patricia Bay Highway, again won the women's nail-driving contest, putting her level with her long-time rival and neighbor, Mrs. James Turner, with six wins each. Mrs. Turner didn't compete this year because of sickness in her family.

And Ardiel Wickheim won the championship log birling contest from brother, Jubiel, who took the cup last year. Ardiel, who donated a cup for log jousting a few years ago again won his own trophy this year.

The All-Sooke Day celebration is a community celebration with well-known members of the community competing time and time again.

There was more than logging sports to keep the visitors interested, though.

A real touch of olde England was a coconut shy which did a roaring business and a test-your-strength-and-ring-the-bell stand where for 25 cents you could win a 10-cent cigar.

Operating the hole-in-one stand, Howie Garnett just about broke even when Larry Gordon from Illinois dropped a ball into the cup and won the $25 prize.

Most harrassed man on the river flats was Jack Zelenko who was in charge of the food—the famous barbecued salmon and beef, the clam chowder and the shrimp.

"One of our best years for people coming through, nice and steady," he commented on his way back to check the sizzling salmon.

On his way back he added that more than 500 pounds of salmon and some 350 pounds of prime beef was needed to feed the thousands of hungry tourists—how many thousands he didn't know for sure.

But facts and figures and words don't tell the whole story of All-Sooke Day.

Mixing in with all the activity and the excitement was the sweet blue haze of alder wood smoke, the odor of broiling salmon with the juices collecting underneath, the steaming beef being dug up from the underground oven pit, the whisper of perfume as a group of brightly-dressed teen-age girls rushed by, coffee, hot dogs, cigar smoke, the smell of freshly chopped wood.

At All-Sooke Day yesterday, the nose had it.

Winner of the men's tree chopping contest at All-Sooke Day yesterday was Allan Woodrow of Courtenay. Photo shows the top of his "tree" toppling.

Sidney Surging Ahead

Construction is surging ahead in the fast-growing village of Sidney, where plans were announced Saturday for a $350,000 motor hotel, and another big project was rumored.

Activity is heaviest along Beacon Avenue, the main route, and a petition is being circulated for an extension of the village boundary to the north, including the Rest Haven Hospital area.

A new Chevron service station was opened yesterday at the corner of the Patricia Bay Highway and Beacon Avenue.

A. J. Helmcken, manager of the International Duty Free Stores Ltd., 2272 Beacon Avenue, announced a contract had been let to G. H. Wheaton Ltd. for construction of a $350,000 Airport Travel-Lodge, 50-room motor hotel operated by Sidney Airport Facilities Ltd., a private firm.

A bulldozer has been busy grading one to 1½ acres of land on the south side of Beacon Avenue, opposite Craigmyle Motel and Trailer Park, stirring rumors of a large commercial development.

Bids Called by Sidney For Village Centre

Tenders have been called for construction of an administration building and public health centre for the village of Sidney.

The single-storey, wood and stucco building will house municipal offices, a council chamber which will double as magistrate's court, an RCMP office, the Sidney waterworks department and a health centre.

Estimated cost is $66,000. Tenders will be accepted up to noon July 31 at 543 Bastion Street.

The building will be on municipally-owned property on Sidney Avenue between Third and Fourth Street.

Stall Seeking Food For 300 Families

Surplus Food Stall convener Mrs. E. E. Harper appealed last night for people to help rustle up enough food for 300 needy families in the Greater Victoria area.

Parcels are given once a month to families screened by welfare agencies here, and Saturday will be food stall day at 732 Cormorant.

Food pickups can be arranged if donors will call Mrs. Harper at her home, 5695 Patricia Bay Highway, GR 4-1750.

Government Aid Soon?

Y Building Campaign Hits $870,000 Mark

Building fund campaign of the Victoria YM-YWCA has reached $870,000, campaign chairman Hugh Stephen reported Saturday. The goal is $1,138,666.

Mr. Stephen said there still is $35,000 to be turned in by local canvassers.

The national corporations division of the drive has reported collections have surpassed the goal of $150,000 by more than $28,000.

Another $5,000 is expected in the B.C. corporations division, which will bring that total to $110,000.

It is expected an announcement will soon come regarding financial help from the provincial government.

YMCA secretary Vivian Shoemaker said he has received many queries from real estate men interested in the old properties of both the YM and YWCA.

Nanaimo Man

Tourist Tiff Exploded

The chairman of the Nanaimo Tourist Bureau denies having said two Vancouver Island tourist industry bodies have refused to co-operate.

What he said, Hugh Burns stated Saturday, is that the Visitors Services Association should handle collection of the money assessment of the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau on the Nanaimo tourist industry.

The statement said Mr. Burns, in reporting to directors of the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce, said he could not understand "why these two organizations did not work together" since he thinks the association, representing the tourist industry, would be the ideal collection agency for industry contributions.

The bureau has asked Nanaimo for two sums — one from the municipality and the other from industry.

"As the Nanaimo Chamber represents the city in such matters, we would accept the responsibility for the first assessment, but feel the collection of the second assessment should be made by the Visitors Services Association."

Boy Injured While Diving

Gary Price, 13, of 311 Raynor, suffered a severe cut near his right eye when he slipped while diving from the float at Beaver Lake and struck his head on the side of the float.

Word has been received that Miss Rosalind Boyd has been awarded an inter-regional scholarship by the National Federation of Canadian University Students to attend Carleton University, Ottawa, this fall. Miss Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Boyd, Windsor Road, has completed second year arts at the University of Victoria and will continue towards her bachelor of arts degree with majors in English and political science. Since the University of Victoria only recently joined NFCUS, Miss Boyd is the first student here to study on this exchange plan.—(Bud Kinsman)

Jeannine Turner Weds D. M. Clark

Tangerine carnations and white stocks decorated First United Church yesterday afternoon for the wedding of Jeannine Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Turner, 940 Lovat Avenue, and Delmer Marvin Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Clark, 3166 Wascana Street.

Rev. R. J. D. Morris officiated. Organist William McNeil accompanied Miss Sylvia Mobey as she sang, "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white delustred satin which she had made herself. The fitted bodice of French lace over satin was appliqued with pearlized sequins and featured a dropped waistline and lily point sleeves. The full skirt was slightly en train. A pearl coronet held the elbow-length veil of embroidered net. White gardenias centred her bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Joan Turner was maid of honor for her sister and flower girl was Rosemary Baird, the bride's cousin. They wore short gowns of pale blue nylon organza over taffeta, toning petalled headdresses and blue gloves.

Mrs. M. F. Hanlon was bridesmatron in a gown of yellow nylon organza over taffeta, toning headdress and gloves.

All carried cascade bouquets of tangerine carnations.

Best man was Gary Cooper and ushering guests were Mike Hanlon and Terry James.

E. M. Baird proposed the toast to his niece at the reception which followed at Holyrood House.

Three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's mother, was topped and flanked by Talisman roses. Table was covered with a lace-edged cloth, also made by Mrs. Turner.

As her going-away outfit the bride chose an off-white three-piece suit, trimmed in cocoa brown; pale green hat and gloves and corsage of Talisman roses.

On their return from a honeymoon trip to the interior of the province newlyweds will make their home at Garden Park Court.

Miss Gudru Langkilde-Lauesen, daughter of Mrs. K. C. Langkilde-Lauesen, 319 Rutledge Street is attending the Summer School of Theatre at the University of British Columbia, until Aug. 17. She is the recipient of a bursary from the Summer School of Theatre Scholarship Fund and a scholarship from the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival.

PERSONAL MENTION

Dr. and Mrs. W. E. M. Mitchell, Mrs. Mura Robbins, Miss Bonita Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dennison and daughters, have been visitors in San Francisco and have called at British Columbia House in the city.

Return for Holidays

Mrs. David Graves and daughter, Joanna, formerly of Victoria, arrived from Winnipeg last week to stay with Mrs. Graves' mother, Mrs. W. D. Johnson, Esquimalt. The visitors will stay until the middle of August.

Wedding in Edmonton

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley W. Naylor, 1733 Foul Bay Road, wish to announce the engagement of their elder daughter Marlene Edith, to Mr. Dirk Smit, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Smit of Edmonton, Alta. The wedding will take place on Aug. 10 in McDougal United Church, Edmonton, with the Rev. Elton Davidge officiating.

Attend Mainland Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leggett, Humboldt Street, have returned from Vancouver where they attended the wedding of their granddaughter, Miss Diane McBride and Mr. Peter MacLaurin in St. James United Church last Friday. They were accompanied by their daughter-in-law Mrs. William Leggett.

Christmas came in July for elderly Victoria couple, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fowler of 263 Glenairlie Drive, who sailed for U.K. on board the P & O-Orient superliner Oriana Thursday. The trip, which will include visits to Norway, Sweden and Vienna, is a Christmas present from their son, who is an engineer with the Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna. Mr. Fowler and his wife will be away for approximately three months.—(Eric Cable)

Sharon McClure Bride Of Mr. Gordon E. Fraser

Sharon Ruth McClure, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth McClure, Allenby Street, and Mr. Gordon Edward Fraser, son of Capt. and Mrs. Stanley Fraser, Minto Street, exchanged vows yesterday afternoon in St. John's Anglican Church. Rev. Canon George Biddle officated and Mrs. E. R. Murphy was soloist. The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. A. H. Thorpe.

The bridal gown was of white sheer over taffeta, styled with a long bouffant skirt and lily-point sleeves. Mother of pearl sequins and lace trimmed the square neckline and a single rose caught the back bustle.

Her tiered shoulder-length veil was held by a double crown of crystal and seed pearls. White roses, stephanotis and ivy were in her bouquet.

Mrs. Robert Freer, matron of honor, and Mrs. Ivan Varkonja and Miss Patty Noon were in aquamarine dresses styled with belled skirts and scoop necklines. Chantilly lace over taffeta formed the bodices and the skirts were of chiffon over taffeta. Flower girl, Eleanor Coward, was in a similar frock. They carried white carnations and ivy.

Mr. Robert Freer was best man while Mr. Ivan Varkonja and Vernon Coward ushered.

A three-tiered heart-shaped cake centred the bride's table at the reception held in the Duke of Kent Room, Empress Hotel. Sweet peas and white roses surrounded the cake. Mr. Douglas Bull proposed the toast to the bride.

Leaving on a honeymoon to the mainland, the new Mrs. Fraser changed to a semi-fitted beige wool suit with deep fox-fur shawl collar. Her accessories were tawny brown, and Talisman roses were in her corsage.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Fraser will make their home on Haultain Street. Rev. Canon and Mrs P. C. Bays, Mrs. Hazel Rogers of Nanaimo, Mr. and Mrs. W. Easter and family of Seattle, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Paulson of Vancouver were out-of-town guests at the wedding.

Hand Knitting At a Premium

By NORA MARTIN

PARIS (TNS) — If you've got nothing to do and can knit, I've just found a job for you. A Paris knitwear designer is looking for women experts with the knitting or crochet needles to make garments for Brigitte Bardot, Ingrid Bergman and other smart women the world over.

"Today women don't like to knit . . . Not enough time, too much bother or simply lack of patience," Janine Proco told me, when I visited her apartment, where the finest French hand-knit garments are created and finished.

A vivacious, pretty brunette and very quick with needles herself, Madame Proco has just one problem. She can't find enough women to hand-knit the styles she designs and sells to the smartest shops in Paris, as well as in America.

It is considered very chic in Paris to wear hand-knitted or crochetted sweaters, suits or coats. But they must, of course, be impeccably worked and smartly styled.

HOMEMADE LOOK

"The danger in hand-knitted clothes," Madame Proco says, "is that often they are made by loving hands at home and they look it. Then they have sentimental rather than fashion value."

Two stars were the first ones to stock up at Madame Proco in knitwear for fall. I tried on the sweater model of which Brigitte Bardot has ordered six in different colors for $30 each. In pale grey, it has a high turtle-neck and is hand-knitted in soft alpaca wool in a four-plain-four-pearl ribbing to closely fit the figure.

Ingrid Bergman prefers loose styles and has chosen a strictly tailored "tweed" suit in a plain hand-knit of pink, red and purple wool.

VELVET LOOK

Other new Paris knit styles next season will include bulky "Polar Coats" knitted with enormous needles of mohair, and "velvet" shift dresses crochetted in velvety chenille wool.

This expert's advice to knitters is to take greatest care of the assembling of a garment. Seams on sweaters, knitted skirts and coats should always be hand-sewn and buttonholes finished by crocheting around them.

Madame Proco has now about 50 women working for her at home in various parts of France. She sends them the pattern, the wool and a small sample knit after which to work.

For sweaters, she says, raglan sleeves will be a la mode next season.

Themes 'Sordid'

LONDON (CP)—Britain's Public Morality Council says there are too many plays with sordid and unhealthy themes. The society's report calls for "more wholesome" entertainment on television and the stage.

Ripe Apple Seed New Fall Brown

By LILLIAN FOSTER

NEW YORK (TNS)—Put a ripe apple seed in your hand, and you see the shade of brown liked for fall and winter. It comes in wool and velvet, in brocades, lace and chiffon, and is very much a part of the tweed mixture.

Donald Brooks used a lot of brown and Spanish gold in his collection.

His collection featured the Castilian Look. There were references to lively Spanish reds, greens and yellows, sharpened by passementerie.

Models flounced onto the runway in skirts not quite flamenco, but full and deeply pleated; blousy bodices that banded at the hipline; matador-type jackets banded in ball fringes; and dish-brimmed bowler hats like those worn by Spanish friars.

Of course, there were shawls, some large diaper-shaped, bordered black bands or imprinted with dragons, and tied in back.

BIT OF PIRACY

A bit of design piracy Donald Brooks couldn't help but be proud of were his buccaneer shirts with wide stand-way ruffles at the neck and the wrists.

A new fabric called Zefkrom, was shown at luncheon at the New Hilton. It was seen in a beautiful cranberry color and muted tones of blue and greens.

Taking the young and sportive tack was David Kidd, a designing young Scotsman for Arthur Jablow. Kilts would have been too Scottish even for this Kidd, but his models did tromp into the spotlight in swingy, houndstooth check skirts, suede vests, leather caps, heavycable stitch stockings and knee-high boots.

This was the much-touted country cousin look, come to the city slicker.

A camel-colored wool dress with amber velvet sleeves was noted in the Pattulla-Jo Copeland line, which sent out a green two-piece suit (jacket longer), with an ocelot collar; also a bright slip of a dress was in horizontal striped jersey, four bands to the dress in red and green.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: At first I just smoldered when my "friend" pretended to be a little high. Liquor is supposed to excuse all those cute passes at my husband. Now I'm in flames.

This has been going on for quite sometime but I've hated to let anyone know how it infuriates me. After last Saturday night I think perhaps I should tell the bimbo off.

After a few martinis, this so-called register dame jumped on my husband's lap, fell into his arms, and invited him to crawl behind the sofa with her in search of an earring. All this under the guise of being loaded, of course. In the meantime she could drink any truck driver under the table.

I am fed up with the whole disgusting business but I need a more level head than mine to decide what to do about it.—FIRE IN WHITE PLAINS.

Dear Fire: This "Don't blame me, I'm drunk" routine is as old as the grape.

It's always a mistake to tell another woman to leave your husband alone. It usually encourages the wench. She'll figure you are frightfully insecure and decide that maybe she does have a chance, after all.

Wildly aggressive females who throw themselves at men look cheap. If the wife can handle the situation with dignity this kind of character will look even cheaper. Keep your head up and your mouth closed.

Dear Ann Landers: I work in an office where all the girls get along pretty well. Two of these girls told me they did not want to open up charge accounts because they were afraid they'd be tempted to spend more money than they should. So they asked if they could charge on my account. They promised to have the money in my hands by the time the bill came due.

For the first couple of months it worked fine. They paid as promised. But for the past four months I've had nothing but trouble.

One girl "forgets" what she bought and I have to track down sales slips to prove it was her purchase and not mine. The other girl is always broke. Now she owes me for articles she charged in March.

If I tell them they can't use my account any more it will break up our friendship. Please tell me what to do.—SUPER-CHARGED.

Dear Super: Tell both girls you are closing your charge account — and then go ahead.

When you re-open the account it's not necessary to broadcast the information. Should they learn of it and ask again to use your account tell them it would be less complicated if they saved the money and paid cash.

Mrs. Eugenie Gareau, Bellevue, Sask., wishes to announce the engagement of her youngest daughter, Jeannette, to Mr. Maurice Schiller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jean Paul Schiller, 830 McClure Street, Victoria. The marriage will take place Aug. 3 at noon in St. Isidore de Bellevue Church, Bellevue, Sask.

Baxter-McCorkall

Yellow and White Theme At First United Wedding

A double ring ceremony last evening united in marriage Jill Louise McCorkall and Mr. Ralph David Baxter. Rev. Robert J. D. Morris officiated in First United Church which was decorated with white gladiolus and carnations and yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. McCorkall and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baxter are parents of the principals. Mr. Stanley Martin was soloist.

The bride chose a simply styled gown of sheer nylon and lace. The sabrina neckline of the lace bodice was edged with sequins, lace and irridescent pearl applique accented the skirt. The floor-length skirt fell into unpressed folds from a shaped waistline. A sequin encrusted coronet held her misty elbow length veil and she carried yellow and white carnations with stephanotis and ivy.

Dresses of yellow chiffon over satin styled with full skirts and wide cummerbunds were worn by Miss Judy Rushton, Miss Maureen Clark, bridesmaids and Miss Melinda McCorkall, flower girl. Maid of honor, Miss Bonnie Hunt wore a dainty lace jacket over her dress. Their flowers were the same as the brides and they were yellow floral whimsies.

Mr. Robert Baxter was best man for his brother and Mr. Don Carmichael, Mr. Mike Ellis and Mr. Ken McCorkall ushered guests.

Yellow roses and yellow candles decorated the bride's table for the reception at the Sir William Wallace Room, Holyrood House. Mr. Geoff Venables played for dancing and Mr. A. C. Page proposed the toast to the bride.

For the honeymoon the bride donned a pink boucle suit with matching fox fur and bone colored accessories Cymbidium orchids and stephanotis were in her corsage. The newlyweds will make their home at 1298 Dallas Road.

Out of town guests were Mrs. S. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kuyek, Mr. and Mrs. B. Lacky, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. M. Smith, Kelso, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart, Palm Springs, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. D. Durrance, Massett, Queen Charlotte Island; Mr. and Mrs. J. Wherry, Abbotsford and Mrs. A. McDonald, Tacoma, Wash.

Women of the Moose

Mrs. Marsh Senior Regent

Gold, purple and red flowers were used to decorate Moose Home, 512 Fort Street, for the recent ceremony in which officers of Victoria Chapter, No. 25, Women of the Moose, were installed.

They are Mrs. M. Marsh, senior regent; Mrs. M. Jones, junior graduate regent; Mrs. G. Norris, junior regent; Mrs. B. Stevens, chaplain; Miss Dolcina Guelpa, recorder; Mrs. E. Cooper, treasurer; Miss A. Hopley, guide; Mrs. J. Harper, assistant guide; Mrs. M. Martin, sentinel; Mrs. L. Charlesworth, Argus, and Mrs. R. Thompson, pianist.

Installing officers were Mrs. A. Hansen, Mrs. D. Giles, Mrs. C. Lokken, Mrs. M. Ilott and Mrs. M. Kirkwood. They are graduate regents. Escorts were Mrs. M. Bentham, Mrs. A. Bird, Mrs. K. Fullaway, Mrs. E. Vermiere; guard of honor, Messrs. E. Cooper, J. Harper, W. Norris and W. Bentham. Mrs. Hopley was ritual director.

Past governor J. Johnstone and his grandson, Carl Hansen, participated in the 9 o'clock ritual.

Twenty-five-year pins were presented to Mrs. A. Bird and Mrs. E. Cheer and a presentation was made, on behalf of the chapter, to the retiring senior regent, Mrs. Jones, by the new regent, Mrs. Marsh.

Miss Guelpa introduced Mrs. Hopley, Mrs. Ilott and Mrs. Cheer, who spoke on their impressions of a recent visit to Mooseheart.

Pressures Building Up

Canada May Be Split By Centenary Time

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

MONTREAL (CP) — Pressures dividing the English- and French-speaking cultures are building up at such a rate that many wonder whether both founding groups will celebrate Canada's centenary together in 1967.

Nationalistic extremists in predominantly French Quebec want to secede and form an independent state. Some of the more rabid separatists have gone as far as dynamite bombings and death to get their point across.

TREND IRREVERSIBLE

So far, the majority of French - Canada has not responded to the breakaway call. But separatist leaders like Marcel Chaput, head of Quebec's Republican party now on a hunger strike to attract attention and funds, says the trend towards Quebec independence is "irreversible."

However, moderate nationalists, including key figures in the Quebec government of Liberal Premier Jean Lesage, want a new constitutional deal that would give Quebec more autonomy and a greater share of the Canadian tax pie.

'LAST CHANCE'

They are talking in terms of a "last chance" for Confederation and of "a dialogue on an equal basis" between the French minority—about a third of Canada's 18,500,000 people—and the English-speaking majority.

The federal government is expected to announce this week the makeup of a royal commission of inquiry, appointed in co-operation with the 10 provinces, to study the problems and recommend remedies.

Garbage Collectors Sartorial Equals

LONDON (UPI) — The British magazine Tailor and Cutter said Friday that London's garbage collectors at leisure are the sartorial equal of any other proud citizen.

"Certainly a dustman's seems the kind of job where an appreciation of good clothes could be solidly entrenched," the magazine said.

Await Forest Fire Call

Shock Troopers Poised

By JACK FRY

Ten young men specially trained to fight forest fires are waiting around the clock for a fire call, in a small camp nestled among the trees in the dusty back country at Langford.

The husky youths are members of the B.C. Forest Service's Langford fire suppression crew — a shock troop force thrown against any bush or forest fire raging out of control.

STANDBY BASIS

They are college and high school students hired for the summer on a 24-hour standby basis. They eat, sleep and work at their camp off Atkins Road, where they can be summoned at a moment's notice.

Throughout British Columbia there are 16 such camps, each with a 10-man crew. Five of these are on Vancouver Island, at Alberni, Campbell River, Nanaimo, Duncan and Langford.

Forest service officials have found that use of the highly mobile suppression crew striking force keeps most fire losses at a minimum of one-quarter acre or less.

In 1962, these rugged crews managed to keep 122 of 188 fires attended in B.C. to one-quarter acre or less in size.

Only eight of the fires attended by the Forest Service smoke eaters last year burned beyond 50 acres, and seven of these fires had already gotten a good start before the men ever arrived on the scene.

TO CONTAIN IT

The job for the suppression crews is to bring a fire under control and contain it until relieved by a regular fire fighting force.

Foreman at the Langford camp is 22-year-old Ian Frier of Vancouver, a second-year forestry student at the University of B.C., who spent four summers in suppression crew camps before being hired on as camp foreman two years ago.

GOOD BUNCH

Though the men under him are allowed little time away from camp, Mr. Frier says he has no trouble keeping them in line. "They're a good bunch of fellows and they've all got the education to take care of themselves," he said.

Only two men are allowed to leave the camp each evening and they have to be back about midnight. The little camp of white-painted bunkhouses and galley off Atkin Road is their home for the rest of the summer.

At Sidney

UBC Students Answer Need For Charter Boat Service

By BRUCE COLEGRAVE

Two Victoria men, who are UBC students during the winter months, thought there was a need for a fast charter boat service working out of Sidney—and indications are they were right.

The two men, John Stenstrom, 2460 Cardigan Road, and Christopher Scott, 985 St. Patrick Street, have formed a company called Scotstrom Transport Ltd. and they work out of Van Isle Marina at Sidney.

THREE VESSELS

They have three boats, but the one that does most of the service is a 22-footer that cruises at about 32 knots.

This boat, called the Sayonara, fitted with a radio telephone as is their office, provides the speed for emergency service, fast trips and tours of the Gulf Islands, and chartered fishing trips to hard-to-get-to places.

VARIED CHARTERS

All three boats are available for almost any type of service required in Gulf Island waters, including picnics, water skiing for resorts, distress calls to all of the Gulf Islands, and charter by companies and groups requiring service in the area.

Since the start of their company last month, the two students have answered a call to a boat in distress in rough waters that had lost its propeller and another call for a boat that was adrift in Satellite Channel.

FOR GOVERNMENT

They have also done considerable work for the department of highways and the B.C. Toll Authority.

They have regular tours to Sidney Spit for people who wish to go on a picnic for the day, and run tours to Bedwell Harbour and return, with a stop for tea at the harbor.

ALL YEAR ROUND

The charter service, which was to have been for the summer months, has been so popular that indications are they will keep it going in the winter months as well.

"We have great hopes and dreams for this service, said John Stenstrom. We hope to build and add to it in the future."

ON 24-HOUR ALERT

"We are constantly kept on the alert with a 24-hour answering service. People seem to feel the need for our service and folks from the Gulf Islands enjoy the almost door-to-door service we can give to the homes anywhere on the Islands," he said.

Colonist Swim

Sinus Trouble Status Symbol

By MARGIE NAYSMITH

When it comes to learning to breath out with their faces under the water, eight-year-olds seem to have sinus trouble as a status symbol.

During the second week of The Daily Colonist free swim classes, we have been teaching the beginners how to breathe out with their faces in the water.

SPECIAL COURSE

There are a number who find this very difficult and these we will separate and give special instructions.

They have any number of excuses why they can't do it—from being allergic to water to sinus trouble.

Sinus trouble is the main one, though, and my answer is that, if your mother knew you had a troublesome sinus, she wouldn't let you come.

BATHTUB HELP

This usually works, but there is always the smart operator who says mother hasn't been told yet.

The ones who have trouble with breathing out should practice it in the bathub and it would help.

Progress of the classes has been good and this week students will be moving along the water as they learn to breathe properly.

Canadians Join Soon Says Latin

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the Council of the Organization of American States says he is confident Canada will decide "in the near future" to join the hemispheric organization.

Asked to define what he meant by "in the near future," Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica at first replied: "Within the present decade." Under further questioning, he expressed hope the move will take place "maybe in the next year or so."

Mr. Facio is Costa Rican ambassador to Canada and the U.S.

Italy Protects Wine Names

ROME (AP) — The Italian government has approved a bill to protect the names of the country's wines. The bill, to be submitted to Parliament, would ban the sale of wines named for a region of Italy—such as Chianti—but not made from grapes grown in that region.

Rabbits Better Than Cure

Week on the Prairies

Manitoba

Districts of Greater Winnipeg are being plagued by brown Nebraska Cottontail rabbits. They nest under porches and in backyards. They eat the vegetables in the garden. They are a nuisance.

There's a law against shooting them in the city. Authorities don't like the idea of poison.

But nature has taken a hand.

Bobcats, lynx and weasles have followed the rabbits into the city and are destroying them.

Some householders now seem to prefer the rabbits.

J. L. Sekora of Grande Prairie, Alta., won the premier event in the first annual Canadian Owners and Pilots Association aircraft handicap race.

Forty planes started the race from points in Canada and the United States and 27 reached the target, Calgary.

The premier event was for over-all performance — speed, economy and estimated time of arrival. Mr. Sekora won in a Cessna 170. Second was Elsie Childs of Helena, Mont. in a Stinson 108-3 and third was Floyd Glass Jr. of Prince Albert, Sask. in a float-equipped Cessna 180.

Fred Winters of Calgary, piloting a Luscombe 8-3, won the most economical division and the closest estimated time of arrival section.

Betty Wadsworth of Victoria won an award for the oldest aircraft in the race, a 1945-vintage Stinson 108-1.

Saskatchewan

Some officials in Regina city police court—who prefer to remain anonymous—say they get a more accurate barometer of crop prospects than crop index figures.

They count the number of drunk charges in court.

As crop prospects rise, so does the number of drunk charges.

In April there were 107 drunk charges; in May 113 and in June, after good rains, 142.

In early July the crop index figure zoomed to 186, the highest on record.

Sure enough, city police court records show that in the first 10 days of July a whopping 70 drunk charges went on the books.

The court officials sum up the situation with a simple economic rule:

In a poor crop year people get tighter with money. In a good year they just get tight.

Lots of Pills

Pregnancy Possible For Woman in 70s

OXFORD, England (Reuters)—A woman taking oral birth control pills for a long time might possibly be able to become pregnant in her 60s or 70s, a doctor has told the British Medical Association.

Dr. L. Kopelowitz said: "We are assured from time to time these pills are safe and harmless.

"Now evidence has recently been brought before us that they only delay ovulation and there is a possibility that a woman in her 60s or 70s might become pregnant after taking these drugs over a period of years.

"Previously that has only occurred in the Bible."

Dr. Kopelowitz was speaking on a motion that all or none of the contraceptive agents available should be prescribable.

He suggested it would be wiser to withdraw all contraceptives from the prescription form pending further evidence and investigation.

The motion was defeated.

The doctor did not name any specific drug in his talk.

Red Tape

HERTFORD, Eng. (UPI) — The local government's plan to "shame" tenants of public housing projects into paying back rent by mailing them notices on red postcards has run into post office opposition.

"We cannot accept any color likely to strain the eyes of post office workers," an official said.

Grossmith Funeral Wednesday

Frederick William Grossmith, who was associated with the Modern Shoe Store at 1321 Douglas for 44 years, died Friday at 58.

Mr. Grossmith started with the store when he was 14 and in 1936 took over the business. He was well known by thousands of Victoria shoppers.

Born in England, he came to Canada at the age of seven.

He is survived by his widow, his mother and a son Ronald, at home, 2301 Lansdowne, and a daughter Mrs. (Doris) Don Farquhar of Vancouver. Funeral services will be held in McCalls' Chapel Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends, neighbors and relatives who gave their kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during the lengthy illness and death of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Judi Saunders. Special thanks go to the nurses and staff of the St. Joseph's Hospital, Drs. Bank, McKay, Paul and especially Dr. David Vey.
—Mr. Frank Saunders, Mrs. Virginia Sam and brothers.

I wish sincerely to thank my friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and for their beautiful floral offerings in my recent bereavement in losing my dear husband Paul Danis.
Marjorie Danis

WESTERN RED CEDAR
"BEVEL" SIDING

Nature has endowed the giant red cedar of British Columbia with every quality a homeowner could ask for in a versatile construction material with its "built-in" weather resistance, insulation value, working ease and, above all, inherent beauty.

Western Red Cedar is the traditional choice of architects everywhere, for every application. The attractive grain and warm colors of this fine wood blend beautifully with any home style, modern or traditional—in any setting, urban or rural.

Winning Contract

Bridge Quiz:

Most bridge players bid sensibly when the opponents are obliging enough to remain silent. But more often than not, both sides take part in the auction and in such circumstances the textbooks are not as helpful as they might be. There are many situations in which there can be doubt about the nature of a bid. In each of the following cases, see if you can correctly classify the final bid as (a) forcing, or (b) non-forcing, or (c) ambiguous—depending on partnership agreement.

North	East	South	West
1◊	Dbl.	2 N.T.

North	East	South	West
1♠	2♡	3♠

c.

North	East	South	West
1♡	1♠	Pass	Pass

d.

North	East	South	West
1◊	Dbl.	2♠

e.

North	East	South	West
1◊	1 N.T.	2 N.T.

f.

North	East	South	West
1◊	Pass	1♠	2♡
Pass	Pass	3♣

Answers to Bridge Quiz:

a. Forcing. This bid has no normal meaning, because a strong, balanced hand would redouble. Many experts use this to show a near-opening bid with a diamond fit; if North has a minimum he retreats to three diamonds.

b. Ambiguous. This is forcing on traditional methods, but there are strong arguments for treating three spades as simply encouraging after an overcall, and many leading players play it as non-forcing.

c. Non-forcing. South may have a blank hand and North cannot have enough to guarantee a game as he did not open with a forcing bid.

d. Ambiguous. This is sometimes regarded as forcing to game, sometimes as forcing for one round, and sometimes as pre-emptive.

e. Forcing. This must show a strong, unbalanced hand, because South would double with a balanced distribution.

f. Non-forcing. A new suit at the level of three is usually forcing, but in this case South may have to "balance" (reopen when the bidding has died) on a hand of medium strength in order to fight for the partial score.

Robert Sloan
PRINTED PATTERN M360 SIZES 8-18

Shift with a Wandering Waist—Belt It High, Low, Not at All

It's just a matter of a few seams to whip up the most versatile shift on the summer scene. Button the belt high—presto! elegant Empire line. Button it on low for the smart, sophisticated "natural look." If you wish, forget all about the belt, and the double-breasted buttoning will look purely decorative. Printed Pattern M360 is by Sylvia de Gay for Robert Sloan—together, they're a team that keeps coming up with the wittiest, most wonderful ideas in casual fashions. The Original is imported linen in a two-tone combination. Make your version either one or two colors for a lively summer life.

Printed Pattern M360 is available in Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. See pattern for yardages.

Send one dollar for Printed Pattern M360 to The Daily Colonist Pattern Dept., 60 Front Street West, Toronto, Ont. (Add 15c for each pattern for first-class mailing and special handling.) Please print plainly your name, address with zone, style number and size.

LOT THOUGHTS

The reduction in the building materials tax, more generous NHA financing and the $500 winter building bonus have greatly stimulated lot sales. A sound thinker will realize that the time to buy a lot is NOW before the coming shortage will result in increased prices. The LOT MAN still has the best selection in town and highly recommends: Athlone Woods—still a few left from $3450 to $3750

Ten Mile Point—Half acre, secluded at $5350

Uplands—104x160 just lovely and only $8400.

Many more of course in all areas.

Flanders Capital Impresses Every Visitor

BRUGES, Belgium (UPI)—Even the seasoned traveller must be impressed by his first visit to this picturesque capital of Belgium's province of West Flanders.

Only 60 miles northwest of Brussels, Bruges has managed to preserve its medieval charm and beauty.

During the 13th and 14th centuries, Bruges was one of the most important commercial and cultural centres in Northern Europe. But the "Zwin" estuary, which gave it direct access to the sea, became clogged with silt in the 15th century and its power and glory faded.

LONG GUARD

Through the years, however, the proud Flemings guarded the countless art and historical treasures of the city.

Entering the old city, which is surrounded and criss-crossed by canals (Bruges is sometimes called the Venice of Belgium), the visitor feels as if he has stepped back in time to the Middle Ages.

Fronting the old market place—the city's main square—is the 280-foot-high belfry which dates back to the 13th century and is one of the oldest Gothic structures in Belgium.

FAMED CARILLON

Its carillon, made up of 47 bells weighing a total of 27 tons, is world famous.

There are numerous other attractions to delight the visitor. Included are 16 different museums, centuries-old cathedrals and churches, quaint old gabled houses, ancient quays, a nunnery dating back to the 1200s, four turreted town gates which were part of the old walled fortifications, scores of age-old bridges and a stone castle.

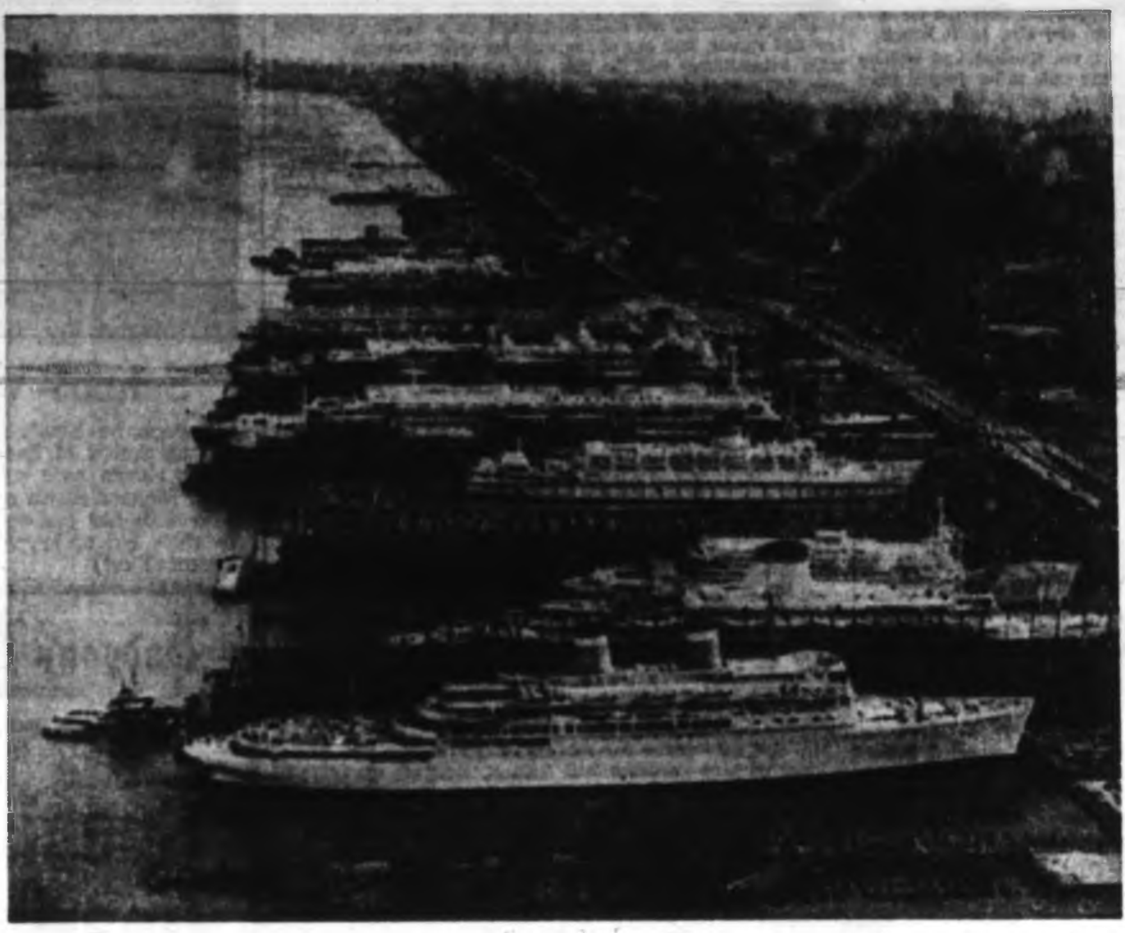
CASTLE SQUARE

A "must" is a visit to the imposing basilica of the Holy Blood and the Church of Our Lady. The basilica on Burg (Castle) Square consists of two superimposed chapels. The upper chapel contains the reliquary which tradition says holds a few drops of the blood of Jesus brought from Palestine in 1150 by a prince who took part in the Crusades.

London Bridge Falling To Thames Tunnel

LONDON (AP) — The City of London is planning to replace Tower Bridge with a tunnel under the Thames. Transport Minister Marples says the bridge's lifting spans are a serious obstacle to traffic and will have to go.

The bridge, with its twin gothic towers, cost £1,000,000 and commemorated the golden and diamond jubilees of Queen Victoria's reign.



Rush Is On

Summer season's big lineup at New York docks for tourist rush shows, from bottom to top, Independence, American Export Lines; Leonardo da Vinci, Italian Lines; Atlantic, American Export; Olympia, Greek Line; France, French Line; Queen Mary, Cunard Line; Hanseatic, Hamburg-American Line, and Argentina, Moore-McCormack Lines. About 30,000 tourists arrive or leave New York in such liners each week.—(AP Photofax)

British Accent Dulled by TV

LONDON (CP) — Television and universal education are playing tricks with the traditional British accent.

In the old days of radio, the national standard of spoken English was the carefully cultured, clearly enunciated voice of the BBC announcers.

Beyond this there was the top people's accent—the slightly nasal drawl of the Oxford and Cambridge graduate.

CONSIDERED SIGN

And on the other side of the standard were the 300-odd regional dialects of Britain, all considered a sign of inferior education and a definite obstacle to progress in a career.

Now a modern generation of children, all educated at least to the age of 16, is welding dialect into a new and nationally intelligible brand of spoken English.

TV RESPONSIBLE

At the same time, dialects still thrive in rural areas and thanks to television have been elevated to positions of pride and importance.

A BBC spokesman says that a formal mode of speech was acceptable for a disembodied voice coming from a radio speaker but when TV came along something less stilted was needed.

CHARMING BURR

Thus dialects began to creep along the wave-lengths. Commentators were left free to speak in their natural voices, as long as they could be understood. Today a pretty Scottish lass announces programs in a charming burr over the national network.

The BBC's top cops-and-robbers series, Z Cars, is conducted almost entirely in a Manchester-Irish accent called scouse that now is being imitated all over the country.

INTO PAT BOONE

Both the West Indian and American influences are strong too. All British pop songs have a mid-Atlantic touch; ask the purest Cockney to hold a microphone and sing and he immediately transforms himself into Pat Boone.

Prof. Harold Orton of Leeds University, who has been studying dialects for the last 11 years, says the modern standard speech in the Midlands is a compound of American slang, BBC English and the old dialects.

Commercial Builders Are Mutilating Rome

By RAY MOSELEY

ROME (UPI) — This great and beautiful city, with treasures of art and history that are unique in the world, is slowly being mutilated.

Some of its palaces and parks are being sold to foreign interests. Some of its ancient ruins are being encroached upon by modern buildings. Much of its landscape is being defaced by commercial projects.

The process has been going on since the barbarians sacked Rome as long as 16 centuries ago, carrying away many of its treasures and destroying others.

Medieval popes and princes continued it, stripping the Colosseum of its marble and stone and tearing down great pagan buildings to erect churches ad palaces in their place.

In the 20th century, dictator Benito Mussolini ruthlessly tore down old buildings and sealed over ancient ruins to build broad avenues.

The park of the Villa Abamelek cannot be visited because it is part of the Russian Embassy grounds.

New buildings are gradually defacing two of the most famous roads in the world, the ancient Appian and Aurelian Ways.

Recently a real estate firm advertised the Poli Palace, against which the famed Trevi Fountain is built, for sale as an embassy, hotel, or other commercial building, leading one Rome newspaper to ask: "When are they going to sell the Colosseum?"

City Dancer Rests

Russia 'Frightening'

. . . big factory

Young ballet dancer Virginia Wakelyn is resting in Victoria after an arduous junket through the U.S. as a member of London's Royal Ballet.

Virginia, 22, is entering her sixth year as a professional dancer.

During the recent U.S. tour she performed in the Foxtrot in Facade and in Pas de Trois from Act One of Swan Lake, and as the white cat in Sleeping Beauty.

MOST LOVELY

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wakelyn of 3976 Blenkinsop Road, she says Victoria "is the most lovely place, from what I've seen so far."

Virginia, as the white cat, also toured Russia, and her impressions are lucid and interesting.

FRIGHTENING

Of Russia generally: "I found it a bit frightening."

Of Leningrad: "A beautiful city."

Of Moscow: "Like a big factory: work, produce, drive!"

Of the Kirov (formerly Maryinskii) Theatre in Leningrad: "The most beautiful theatre I've ever been in."

SEASON SOON

After three years with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Miss Wakelyn joined the Royal Ballet in London, formerly the Sadler's Wells. Her third season starts in about four weeks.

Meanwhile, she is relaxing here and enjoying every moment of it.

Powerful Current Discovered

PARIS (UPI) — A seven-nation project to study biological conditions in the mid-Atlantic for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has determined a powerful underseas current runs east to west in the region of the equator.

The current was first discovered by a Soviet ship in 1959. A UNESCO spokesman said it was studied from January to March of this year by a fleet of 14 scientific vessels.

Keep Quiet About Nerja

Town with Everything

MALAGA, Spain (CP) — There's a small fishing town up the coast from here that the tourist agencies apparently haven't discovered yet.

The town has everything; good drinking water, cheap apartments, six or seven sun-kissed beaches, a friendly local population and 60 bars. It's called Nerja; but keep it quiet.

So far Nerja has been missed by the estimated 8,000,000 tourists—half the country's population—sweeping up and down the Spanish Mediterranean coast this year.

And a small group of expatriate writers who live in the town all year pray things will remain this way. Otherwise they won't be able to continue living like kings on little more than $1 a day.

Tourism is transforming the troubled, often tragic face of Spain. Dollars, pounds, deutschmarks and bright new French francs are pouring into areas where a few hard-earned pesetas kept a Spanish family for weeks.

One of the newest areas to be exploited is the Costa del Sol between Malaga and Gibraltar. Until recently it was rugged and difficult to reach—a string of villages nestling in the bays between rocky headlands.

All this has been changed by cheap air flights between London and Gibraltar backed up by a modern coastal coach service. The round trip can cost as little as $100.

New hotels, restaurants and resorts are beginning to litter the coastal highway like neon-lit billboards. Some are quiet and exclusive; others are cheap and spectacular, huge concrete pagodas bearing names like "Miami in Europe."

All have contributed a change to the Spanish way of life. Prices have tripled for the foreign visitor, unctuously welcomed but privately despised. Beaches are crowded with commercial stalls. Village streets abound with beggars and hawkers.

The traditionally proud and austere Spanish peasant now thinks nothing of demanding tips and adding a few unexplained extras to the bill. The 20th century is moving into Spain but perhaps at the expense of her soul.

Yet towns like Nerja remain—isolated outposts of tranquil honesty. Tourists are rare and transient and when they come they are charged no more than the locals—about 50 cents for a good meal, 10 cents for a quart of wine.

Spit Way To Health

BOSTON (UPI) — Officials at a children's hospital have discovered a curious way of determining whether a patient is getting better: counting the "spitballs" on the walls and ceiling.

Lawrence Levinson, manager of housekeeping, says there is a direct relationship between the number of "spitballs" and the health of the patients in the room.

"The more 'spitballs,' the better the patient is progressing," he says.

NATO Plans Latin Help

PARIS (AP) — A group of legislators from NATO countries have created a new body to promote economic development in Latin America on the basis of trade and investment. The body, called the Atlantic Community Development Group for Latin America, will include businessmen and officials from Canada, the U.S. and other NATO countries.

Brave Trip Ending

Mrs. Annette Carey, 48, who arrived in Nanaimo Friday after rowing hundreds of miles down the coast from Prince Rupert in her dugout canoe, Saturday was on her way to the San Juan islands.

The adventurous woman, a resident of Oxnard Beach, Calif., was hoping to spend the night from Friday to Saturday at Thetis Island.

She made the trip in the opposite direction in 1937. Her travelling time so far was three weeks at an average three to four knots.

The canoe was carved at the Indian settlement of Clo-Oose on Vancouver Island's west coast.

Mrs. Carey has and is taking pictures along her trip and said she would use them to illustrate a book she plans to write on her re-enacted adventure.

She is accompanied by her white husky, Ivan.

She said she has found a spot on the Queen Charlotte Islands where she will retire with her husband.

Boy Builds Rare Boat

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Richard Bevan, 15, of Maple Bay and his brother Bruce, 19, hope to enter their home-built Hornet sailing boat in the Labor Day regatta here in September. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Bevan.

Not yet finished and waiting for the sails to be shipped from England, the 16-foot craft already bears the features of a fast performer.

It will be the first Hornet in Maple Bay. Richard says two other craft of the same class are in Victoria and Vancouver, and there are only 20 in Canada.

His father, a high school teacher, said the Hornet world registration from all countries is about 772. The brothers started to build their Hornet just after Christmas, and so far Richard has spent $75 of his earnings as a paper carrier on the project.

He says the two main boat building components are mahogany and spruce, and one of the main expenditures will be the sails, 121 square feet.

Eventually the two young boatbuilders will call their boat the Cowichan Indian equivalent to the word hornet. The Maple Bay boat is already registered with the Royal Yacht Association, National Hornet Class Federation in England. Richard estimates the value of the finished craft at about $600.

He built three eight-foot Sabot sailing dinghies 2½ years ago when his enthusiasm was sparked on a sailing excursion with his older brother.

He plans to continue to build boats as a hobby. One of his Sabots is being sailed by his younger brother, Neil, 13, and perhaps one day the youngest member of the family, two-year-old Sally, will follow in the footsteps of her big brothers.

Centre-Left

Italian Parties Squabble

ROME (UPI) — Bitter infighting was reported Saturday in each of the four centre-left parties on whose support caretaker Premier Leone depends to carry on his government.

The parties unenthusiastically agreed in parliament only two days ago on the stop-gap government, with many deputies abstaining. They are Leone's own Christian Democrats, Pietro Nenni's partly pro-Communist Socialists, the Social Democrats and the Republicans.

PATCH UP COALITION

Observers said the approval of Leone's caretaker government gave the parties a few months time to patch up the wrecked centre-left coalition which was headed by former Premier Amintore Fanfani until the April 28 general elections.

HUGE GAINS

The elections saw huge gains for the opposition Communists and Liberals. A powerful moderate wing in the Christian Democratic party blamed the setback on Fanfani and forced his resignation.

Insistent reports said the Fanfani men were now planning an offensive against the moderates in the Christian Democrat's national council, which meets in about 10 days' time.

Third City Carpark Announced As Second Opened

Plans for a third downtown parking facility were announced by Victoria parking commission chairman Ira Hill after the official opening Saturday of parking facilities on Yates Street.

Mr. Hill said plans for additional parking facilities will be made this fall.

Former alderman Michael Griffin, who played an active role in establishment of the present downtown parking garages, officiated at the ceremony opening the Yates Street facilities.

Victoria International Film Festival will visit exotic parts of the world next week, beginning at 8:30 on three nights.

Monday night's program includes featurettes on British Guiana, Portrait of Trinidad, Let's Look at Barbados, The Rock, Jamaica and Southward with Prince Philip.

Tuesday night the program will be devoted to West Africa with Ghana Greets the Queen, Independent Nigeria, Sierra Leone Story and Twilight Forest.

Wales will be featured Wednesday with Heart of a Nation, North to Wales, Pembrokeshire My Country, and River of Life.

Condition Fair

Still in only fair condition at St. Joseph's Hospital is Sandy William Sands, 1026 Fairfield, who has been in hospital since being critically injured in an accident on the Island Highway near Thetis Lake June 30.

Also in fair condition but still unconscious at St. Joseph's Hospital is Gordon Rasmussen, 7, who fell from his bicycle May 12, striking his head on the concrete abutment of a carport near his home in Nanaimo.

In good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital is Benito Olivotto, 1842 Brighton, who underwent brain surgery following a car accident at Fernwood and Pandora July 4.

Released from Royal Jubilee Hospital Saturday was Donna Lee, 17, of 718 Queens, struck by a car near Douglas and Pembroke Friday while crossing Douglas Street on foot.

Next on the list of extra-curricular events arranged for the summer session of the University of Victoria is a chamber music concert in the auditorium at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Other events include a lecture on programmed learning in the auditorium July 19, Tokyo's Kyogen Theatre Company at 8:30 p.m. July 20, a violin and piano recital in the auditorium at 12:30 p.m. July 23 and a reading of his own works by Irish poet Thomas Kinsella in the auditorium at 8 p.m. July 23.

Global War Obsolete Says Political Study

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—Global war is obsolete, says the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions in an analysis that concludes that demilitarized world politics no longer is utopian but entirely practicable.

Published in book form as the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union prepare to begin crucial Moscow negotiations on a partial nuclear test-ban treaty, the analysis maintains that the war system as a foundation for international politics has collapsed and the only thing keeping it alive is the "mindless force of technological development."

Grim Advance

Students of politics and social and physical sciences somehow had to find ways of arresting the grim advance of increasingly huge nuclear schemes or sooner or later these schemes would destroy humanity, says the study, financed in part by the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace.

Prepared by military analyst Walter Millis and by industrial consultant James Real, the centre's report is published by the Macmillan Company as The Abolition of War.

It estimates that at current rates, the U.S. will have the equivalent of 105,000,000,000 tons of TNT in nuclear-weapon power by 1968, roughly about 35 tons for every human being.

"If one doubles this number to account for the nuclear holdings then projected for the non-U.S. orbit," the report says, "each of us then on earth will be honored by the existence of more explosive dedicated to our personal containment than was used to excavate for Hoover dam."

Global war no longer is feasible as a means of settling world differences, the writers contend. Power is accumulating in four or five great centres—the U.S., Western Europe, the Soviet Union and Red China—but these countries or regions now would have to test their power in ways other than war, the writers say.

Not by Struggle

"The really basic interests of none can be furthered by military struggle—certainly not by a struggle waged with megaton bombs."

At another point, the report says:

"War, even of the peripheral variety, is becoming less practicable and its threats less politically useful or credible in the international order as it already exists. The terrible mass-destruction weapons are stalemated and conventional armed forces, where they are used at all, are used more and more in much the way that national and proposed international police forces of a demilitarized world would be employed."

Practicable

Considering the degree of social and economic organization to which the modern world has arrived, "a demilitarized world politics is entirely practicable."

"Perhaps the greatest bar to its attainment is the deeply held belief that it is impossible and utopian . . . in the Twentieth (century) such a system of international relations has become possible; as time goes on it will grow more possible still. We already have a world power structure that encourages it. The greatest problem today is to convince men of this fact."

Without War

For the first time in history it was possible to think about a world without war. These were the lines on which human thinking must proceed.

"If it does, the warless world will be realized. If it doesn't, we shall probably all be cremated in thermonuclear war. Of the two alternatives, it would seem, strictly in a predictive sense, that the first is the more probable."

Murder-Suicide?

Couple Found Shot

ALBERNI—An Alberni woman and an Everett, Wash., man were found dead Saturday in a cabin near here in what police believe was a murder-suicide.

RCMP said Saturday night they believed Ralph Ingram Wylie, 41, shot and killed Mrs. Eve Johnson, 35, with a .30-30 rifle, then killed himself. Both died of gunshot wounds in the head.

Death was instant in both cases, police added.

Coroner Dr. Chelsey Pitts called an inquest where the bodies were viewed. It was adjourned indefinitely.

The deaths occurred in one of several self-contained log cabins near the junction of Alberni and Port Alberni highways.

Police were called after a neighbor heard shots early Saturday morning.

Crash Kills 10

HAVANA (CP)—A gasoline truck and a passenger bus collided just outside Havana and 10 persons were killed. Forty-seven were injured, some seriously burned in flames fed by the gasoline.

Two Students Deny Subversion Charge

VANCOUVER (CP)—University students Andrew Pickard and Bernard Papke Saturday denied they were accused of subversion during a visit to Karachi University in Pakistan.

In a telegram to the Sun, Vancouver's afternoon newspaper, the two said no charges, attacks or accusations were ever made against their party of 35 Canadians visiting the university.

NON-POLITICAL TOUR

The tour, led by Alex Wainman, associate professor of Slavonic languages at the University of British Columbia, is sponsored by the non-political World University Service.

Reports from Karachi last week said a group of Karachi students were circulating pamphlets describing the Canadians as agents in the garb of students.

BEGAN WITH LETTER

Papke and Pickard said however that the group's attacks were aimed at other Pakistanis and not Canadians. They said a controversy started when the student group wrote an open letter about the activities of the Pakistan committee of the WUS.

The letter was addressed to the Canadian visitors who immediately referred the matter to Dr. I. H. Qureshi, vice-chancellor of Karachi University but the accusations concerned only Pakistani students.

The UBC students said that Arthur Hicks, acting Canadian high commissioner in Pakistan, had cabled External Affairs Minister Martin in Ottawa that the Canadian party was not involved in the charges.

Plane Wreck Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wreckage of a California plane that disappeared Tuesday night on a flight from Princeton to Vancouver was found Saturday 6,200 feet up the side of a mountain west of Princeton.

With it were the bodies of George Menary, 48, his wife Joan, 45, and David Willamont, 23, a family friend. All were from Reseda, a suburb of Los Angeles.

TORONTO FAMILY

The Menarys had lived in Toronto.

The RCAF here said a spotter aboard an auxiliary squadron plane first saw the wreckage on the side of Mount Tulameen, 17 miles west of Princeton.

CHECKED BY COPTER

A helicopter flew to the spot and confirmed the plane was the missing craft and that all aboard were dead — possibly killed in the crash.

Officials said the pilot apparently hit Tulameen as he climbed through heavy rain or cloud. It has been wet all week in the area, about 175 miles east of here, the rain and low cloud hampering search efforts.

TAKEN TO HOPE

The RCAF said the bodies would be brought out one at a time and taken to Hope.

There was an earlier suggestion Saturday the plane had gone down in the Harrison Lake area, 75 miles east of here.

HEARD WHINE

Mrs. Fred Miller told the RCAF she had heard a loud clear whine of an aircraft engine over her house for 15 minutes early Wednesday morning, then the sound stopped.

Negroes to Defy Ban on Marches

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP)—Negro leaders, defying the national guard's ban on demonstrations, served notice Saturday night they will resume street marches Monday in an effort to break down racial barriers.

"Our people are restless. They want their freedom and they are determined to acquire those legitimate rights which have been too long denied them," said a statement issued by the Cambridge Nonviolent Action Committee.

The committee is headed by Mrs. Gloria Richardson, militant integrationist leader.

What will happen when the national guard confronts the demonstrators remains to be seen. Friday night about 250 marchers dispersed when Brig. Gen. George M. Gelson quietly notified them they would be violating militia law.

Monday's demonstration might be a repeat performance of this, but that the integrationists would later press their drive in such a way that the guard officers might feel impelled to arrest them.

RESERVED PRAISE

Their statement Saturday night praised the guard for its "impartial" handling of the tense situation, but accused Gov. Mollard Tawes of "inaction and lack of positive leadership."

"We strongly urge," the statement said, "that he call a special session of the general assembly or issue an executive order to ban racial discrimination in places of public accommodation or come himself to Cambridge to re-establish negotiations."

Two Fugitives Elude Police Dragnet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two armed fugitives from the provincial jail in Brandon still were eluding police dragnets at mid-afternoon Saturday as Manitoba's most intensive manhunt in recent years continued after more than 40 hours.

RCMP and city police in Winnipeg, where the search was concentrated, appeared to be virtually without clues in their search for Bruce Kaiser, 17, and Robert McKenny, 23, who have been loose from Brandon jail since 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

TO APARTMENT BLOCK

Teams of detectives converged on the mid-town bridge area before daylight Saturday when a taxi driver reported he had taken the men to a plush apartment block near the river bank.

A police launch began skirting the banks of the river at 2 a.m., while city detectives and RCMP were carrying shotguns and .38 calibre revolvers in a futile effort to locate the men in the river area.

POSSE GROWS

The posse grew to 75 RCMP officers and some 30 Winnipeg detectives after it was learned the fugitives fled to Winnipeg early Friday, taking with them in different laps three persons as hostages.

All three—first a mother and her eight-year-old son, and then a 15-year-old youth—later were released unharmed.

The pair climbed over a 12-foot fence to make good their escape from the Brandon jail. Later, in their getaway car abandoned in Winnipeg, police found firearms and ammunition and said the fugitives still may have pistols.

Breaking into the Brandon home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Solomon near the jail, the pair took Mrs. Solomon, 35, and her son Darryl with them in the Solomon's car and drove off.

Reaching Firdale, a tiny community 35 miles east of Brandon, the fugitives abandoned the stolen car and their captives.

Vital Talks in Moscow

WILL RUSSIA TURN WEST?

China Berated

Soviet Party Stops Short Of Big Break

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party, declaring that Russian and Chinese views on war and peace remain diametrically opposed, Saturday accused Chinese representatives of aggravating Soviet-Chinese differences at current talks in Moscow.

In a sweeping indictment of Red China's policies in Communist and world affairs, the Soviet party also accused Peking of trying to worsen U.S.-Soviet relations and heat up the cold war.

. . . trouble-shooting

The Russians stopped short, however, of an open break with the Chinese, indicating the Kremlin would wait for Red China to make any such move.

"The immediate future," the Soviet statement declared, "will show if the Chinese comrades agree to build our relations on the basis of what unites and not disunites us."

DON'T WANT BREAK

Red China declared Saturday it did not want a break with Moscow, and held open the door for a resumption of talks if the present ones fail.

The Soviet party central committee berated the Communist Chinese leadership in a 35,000-word open letter addressed to "all the Communist parties" of the world. It was published in Sunday's issue of Pravda.

MIKOYAN PRESENT

The statement was issued a few hours after deputy premier Anastas I. Mikoyan, often the Kremlin's chief troubleshooter, took a hand in the faltering talks.

Mikoyan's role in Saturday's session was not known, but there was speculation he might have been seeking a face-saving way to break off the talks with the Chinese before the Russians sit down Monday with U.S. and British representatives to discuss a nuclear test-ban treaty.

U.S. ACCUSED

Red China meanwhile accused the United States of making every effort to disrupt the Soviet-Chinese talks and said Washington is counting on a Moscow-Peking split.

The Soviet party statement laid bare its power struggle with Communist China, revealing for the first time the extent of its cutback in aid to Peking, and accused the Chinese of trying to split the Soviet bloc and subvert the world Communist movement.

NAMED OPENLY

Also for the first time, the Russians openly named the Chinese in the ideological dispute and directly rebutted their arguments.

The Soviet letter vigorously rejected Chinese criticisms of Premier Khrushchev's major policies—peaceful co-existence, disarmament, and destalinization.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

The situation now developing is potentially one of the most important to arise in the cold war in several years. It could lead into a complete and final split between Moscow and Peking. And it could begin a new period of easier relations between Russia and the West.

NOT BETTING

Western experts are not yet betting firmly on this outcome. Russia might break with Red China without becoming particularly friendly with the United States. The present Moscow-Peking quarrel could conceivably be patched up, although the best informed Westerners think it has already passed the point of no return.

MAY CHANGE

But the possibilities of change are considered great. (See also Page 5.)

At the same time, the United States and Britain were holding preliminary strategy talks in London in preparation for the conference, officially on a nuclear test ban treaty.

The London talks were conducted by Undersecretary of State Averell Harriman, and by Lord Hailsham, Britain's science minister.

CO-ORDINATE APPROACH

Harriman flew to London early in order to co-ordinate the U.S.-British approach to the negotiations. The three-power meeting is expected to last 10 days or two weeks. Harriman and Hailsham are due here today.

Moscow insisted that the talks be secret and the United States and Britain bowed to the pressure. How long the secrecy cloak will hold is a guess.

Heavy Vote Likely

VANCOUVER (CP)—The advance poll indicates there is going to be a heavy turnout in the Columbia by-election Monday. (See Capital Report, Page 5.)

Thirty votes have been cast in the first two days of the advance poll, 26 in Golden and four in Invermere. No figures were available for Saturday's advance polling.

Returning Officer Thomas Purdie said past advance poll statistics weren't readily available but they are "away up" this time.

"This indicates a heavy turnout," he said.

Planes Seek Climbers

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Search efforts were stepped up Saturday for seven members of the Harvard University Mountaineering Club last seen Tuesday making their way up Mount McKinley's Wickersham Wall.

Four members of the Alaska Rescue group flew to Talkeetna to join bush pilot Don Sheldon in an aerial search of the northern face of the 20,320-foot mountain.

Three Boys Located 2,000 Feet in Mine

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three teen-aged boys, crawling some 2,000 feet to safety, were rescued from an old abandoned coal mine Saturday. They hadn't been seen since Thursday.

The boys were rushed to St. Clair memorial hospital where the father of one said:

"They all looked bad—drawn, worn out and dirty. But they're in good shape."

Robert Abbott, 15; Danny O'Kan, 13, and Billy Burke, 13, were led out of the mine within 2 ½ hours after they were discovered.

UNDER OBSERVATION

A hospital spokesman said Abbott and O'Kan were in good condition while Burke was satisfactory. All were admitted for observation. The spokesman said Burke's chest would be X rayed to determine if he was sick or injured.

CHANCE FIND

Inspector Everett Turner of the U.S. bureau of mines credited the discovery of a firecracker with leading rescuers to the boys in the mine containing lethal black damp gas.

"About two hours before we found them," Turner told a reporter "we had indications they were in the mine. Jennings Breedon and Jim Hutchens found a firecracker. They reported to me and I went on in."

BREATHING APPARATUS

The inspectors crawled and dragged themselves some 2,000 feet to the boys, then had breathing apparatus brought to the trio.

Asked what had happened, Abbott said:

"We made the wrong turn. We got lost."

Turner and Hutchens reached the boys after three days of exhaustive searching in the mine in suburban Castle Shannon.

Streamlining Sought

Garbage Under Scrutiny Of Electronic Computer

VANCOUVER (CP)—This may be distasteful, but electronic computers are to be employed here to streamline the city's garbage collection system.

Engineers will tell city council Tuesday that it isn't enough to count cans and divide by the number of man-hours. It requires a half-year study by the B.C. Research Council at a cost of $6,000.

Included in the electronic brain's answers will be data on how often garbage trucks show up in what lanes.

Coast-Long Strike Starts

Full Fish Industry Closure Expected Here Wednesday

The Victoria fishing industry is anticipating a virtually complete shutdown in the wake of a B.C. coast-long fishermen's strike which began Saturday.

B.C.'s 5,000 salmon net fishermen tied up their boats after voting 81.7 per cent in a government-supervised ballot to strike to back demands for better fish prices and fringe benefits. About 250 to 300 of the fishermen live in the Victoria-Sidney area.

Shoreworkers voted 54.1 per cent for strike action in another government-supervised ballot and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers has set 11 a.m. Wednesday as deadline for their strike, to allow for processing of fish caught before the strike deadline.

CITY HANDFUL

This will involve the handful of union workers at the B.C. Packers plant at Ogden Point.

W. H. Hilborn of Oakland Industries Ltd. says he expects other Victoria fish processors to close down Wednesday "until we see what's going to happen, anyway."

NON-UNION

C. A. Torraville, a Victoria fish wholesaler, said he expects all fishing boats to tie up, including non-union vessels.

The "sports" fishermen, who fish for a bit of extra money in addition to their regular jobs, will probably also tie up, he said. After all, he said, most of them belong to some union in their regular jobs.

Mr. Torraville says he is icing fish and plans to supply his customers until his supply runs out.

HOPE VOICED

"I hope the dispute will be settled by then," he added.

Tendermen, who operate ships carrying fish from fishing boats to processors, rejected the strike call by two votes in a third government-supervised poll.

But the union said they will not handle any fish declared "hot" by net fishermen and shore workers.

Six East Indian Boys Boost Funds for Hall

Six young East Indian boys did their bit yesterday towards a proposed community hall, by collecting $35 worth of bottles in the city.

The Victoria East Indian Society has raised about $1,100 in a community hall fund since the group was formed three months ago, said a spokesman.

The boys who picked up bottles yesterday were brothers Millya and Gurdave Sundher, their cousins Ajmare and Kabir Sundher, and Jaspaul Johal and Gurdial Singh.

Neighbors at Odds

Lake Water Sparks Controversy

Neighbor was pitted against neighbor at Prospect Lake yesterday over a dispute about undrinkable lake water.

The Prospect Lake and District Community Association apparently has broken into two opposing camps—each claiming it has support of most residents of the area.

The furore erupted some time time after a report from the metropolitan board of health that water from the lake should be boiled before it is used for human consumption.

One group, headed by community association president Brian Hoole, hopes that contamination in Prospect Lake can be reduced by a crackdown on septic tank operation.

The other group, headed by Ian Stewart, chairman of the group's pollution control committee, wants a new source of domestic water supply in addition to septic tank regulations.

Meanwhile, Saanich council seems to be caught in the middle, and public works committee chairman Coun. Hugh Curtis suggested yesterday that the Prospect Lake ratepayers "get their own house in order before they start complaining about the council."

Council has listened to representations from the ratepayer association's pollution control committee and offered to conduct a water supply cost survey if more than 50 per cent of the residents of the area petition for the survey to be held.

REPORT ASKED

Council has also asked David W. R. Smith, chief inspector of services, to prepare a report on septic tank operation around the lake. This report is expected to be ready for council early this fall.

Mr. Hoole charged that a petition now being circulated among lakeside residents calling for the municipal water cost survey "is not under the auspices of our association."

He was backed up by Mrs. Sybil McCulloch, 5021 Prospect Lake Road, who said that only "four or five people" are pushing for installation of water mains.

PREFER TO WAIT

Majority of the residents would prefer to wait a few years until population growth in Saanich makes it feasible for water to be supplied at a cheaper rate, she said.

"The majority group is with me . . . I would say we have 80 per cent of the people with us," said Mr. Stewart. "We want both the lake to be pure and a domestic water supply."

10,000 Feast at Sooke

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Ten thousand tourists from as close as Victoria and as far away as Glenview, Illinois, crowded onto Sooke River flats yesterday to see a uniquely Canadian celebration they can't see anywhere else—All-Sooke Day.

Still basically a loggers' sports meeting, visitors were thrilled and intrigued by the axe throwing, log birling, the tree chopping and the high rigging.

But the real story of yesterday's All-Sooke Day lay below the surface.

Like the tree-chopping contests, Allan Woodrow won the men's contest again—he won it last year—and his son Danny who he trained took the novice title.

And long-time world's champion axe thrower Hugh McKenzie of Victoria lost out this year to his son, Harold, who he trained. Last year Hugh lost to another man he trained—his son-in-law Neil Crockett.

Mrs. A. S. Fleming, 5118 Patricia Bay Highway, again won the women's nail-driving contest, putting her level with her long-time rival and neighbor, Mrs. James Turner, with six wins each. Mrs. Turner didn't compete this year because of sickness in her family.

And Ardiel Wickheim won the championship log birling contest from brother, Jubiel, who took the cup last year. Ardiel, who donated a cup for log jousting a few years ago again won his own trophy this year.

The All-Sooke Day celebration is a community celebration with well-known members of the community competing time and time again.

There was more than logging sports to keep the visitors interested, though.

A real touch of olde England was a coconut shy which did a roaring business and a test-your-strength-and-ring-the-bell stand where for 25 cents you could win a 10-cent cigar.

Operating the hole-in-one stand, Howie Garnett just about broke even when Larry Gordon from Illinois dropped a ball into the cup and won the $25 prize.

Most harrassed man on the river flats was Jack Zelenko who was in charge of the food—the famous barbecued salmon and beef, the clam chowder and the shrimp.

"One of our best years for people coming through, nice and steady," he commented on his way back to check the sizzling salmon.

On his way back he added that more than 500 pounds of salmon and some 350 pounds of prime beef was needed to feed the thousands of hungry tourists—how many thousands he didn't know for sure.

But facts and figures and words don't tell the whole story of All-Sooke Day.

Mixing in with all the activity and the excitement was the sweet blue haze of alder wood smoke, the odor of broiling salmon with the juices collecting underneath, the steaming beef being dug up from the underground oven pit, the whisper of perfume as a group of brightly-dressed teen-age girls rushed by, coffee, hot dogs, cigar smoke, the smell of freshly chopped wood.

At All-Sooke Day yesterday, the nose had it.

Winner of the men's tree chopping contest at All-Sooke Day yesterday was Allan Woodrow of Courtenay. Photo shows the top of his "tree" toppling.

Meanwhile, Danny Woodrow, son of men's chopping champion, doubled family's honors by winning novice title.—(Ryan Bros.)

Upper Island Highland Games

Dancers Invade Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Caledonian grounds became a huge patchwork of bright costumes and distinctive tartans Saturday for the sixth annual gathering of the Upper Island Highland games.

The meet is always held on the second Saturday in July and for the sixth year in succession the games enjoyed brilliant sunshine.

Julie Rydderch claimed four first prizes in dancing. She won the Irish jig, Highland fling, sword dance and Sean Truibhas in under-13 class.

In the under-16 class Heather McBryde came first in the Highland fling, Donna Allan won the sword dance and the Sean Truibhas. The under-16 hornpipe was also won by Heather McBryde.

The over-16 Highland fling was won by Ian MacDonald, who also won the Sean Truibhas. Lyn Keenana won the sword dance and hornpipe.

The Nootka memorial trophy went to Gail Bamford. Linda Holmes won the Nanaimo and District Caledonian Society trophy and the Pete Gilchrist trophy went to Sandra Campbell.

Heather MacDonald won the Real MacKay trophy for piping and dancing.

In the piping events Sandra Campbell came first in the novices march contest. Heather MacDonald won the strathspeys and reels contest for novices.

Barb McArthur topped the juvenile field for marches and the strathspeys and reels in this class went to Fred Whyte.

The junior marches was won by Bruce McRae and the strathspeys and reels by John MacLeod. Alex Young won the amateur marches and piobaireachd. The amateur strathspeys and reels went to Gordon Ross.

Professional marches and strathspeys and reels were won by John McKenzie. David Wilson came first in the professional piobaireachd.

The B class band winner was the Vancouver Island Ladies Pipe Band. Vancouver Kiwanis won the C class with Vancouver Highland Laddies second.

Murder-Suicide?

Alberni Woman, American Found Dead in Cabin

ALBERNI — An Alberni woman and an Everett, Wash., man were found dead Saturday in a cabin near here in what police believe was a murder-suicide.

RCMP said Saturday night they believed Ralph Ingram Wylie, 41, shot and killed Mrs. Eve Johnson, 35, with a .30-30 rifle, then killed himself. Both died of gunshot wounds in the head.

Death was instant in both cases, police added.

Coroner Dr. Chelsey Pitts called an inquest where the bodies were viewed. It was adjourned indefinitely.

The deaths occurred in one of several self-contained log cabins near the junction of Alberni and Port Alberni highways.

Police were called after a neighbor heard shots early Saturday morning.

Boy Injured While Diving

Gary Price, 13, of 311 Raynor, suffered a severe cut near his right eye when he slipped while diving from the float at Beaver Lake and struck his head on the side of the float.

Nanaimo Man

Tourist Tiff Exploded

The chairman of the Nanaimo Tourist Bureau denies having said two Vancouver Island tourist industry bodies have refused to co-operate.

What he said, Haig Burns stated Saturday, is that the Visitors Services Association should handle collection of the money assessment of the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau on the Nanaimo tourist industry.

The statement said Mr. Burns, in reporting to directors of the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce, said he could not understand "why these two organizations did not work together" since he thinks the association, representing the tourist industry, would be the ideal collection agency for industry contributions.

FOR TWO SUMS

The bureau has asked Nanaimo for two sums — one from the municipality and the other from industry.

"As the Nanaimo Chamber represents the city in such matters, we would accept the responsibility for the first assessment, but feel the collection of the second assessment should be made by the Visitors Services Association."

Boy Builds Rare Boat

By KLAUS MUENTER

DUNCAN — Richard Bevan, 15, of Maple Bay and his brother Bruce, 19, hope to enter their home-built Hornet sailing boat in the Labor Day regatta here in September. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Bevan.

Not yet finished and waiting for the sails to be shipped from England, the 16-foot craft already bears the features of a fast performer.

It will be the first Hornet in Maple Bay. Richard says two other craft of the same class are in Victoria and Vancouver, and there are only 20 in Canada.

His father, a high school teacher, said the Hornet world registration from all countries is about 772. The brothers started to build their Hornet just after Christmas, and so far Richard has spent $75 of his earnings as a paper carrier on the project.

He says the two main boat building components are mahogany and spruce, and one of the main expenditures will be the sails, 121 square feet.

Eventually the two young boatbuilders will call their boat the Cowichan Indian equivalent to the word hornet. The Maple Bay boat is already registered with the Royal Yacht Association, National Hornet Class Federation in England. Richard estimates the value of the finished craft at about $800.

He built three eight-foot Sabot sailing dinghies 2½ years ago when his enthusiasm was sparked on a sailing excursion with his older brother.

He plans to continue to build boats as a hobby. One of his Sabots is being sailed by his younger brother, Neil, 12, and perhaps one day the youngest member of the family, two-year-old Sally, will follow in the footsteps of her big brothers.

Brave Trip Ending

Mrs. Annette Carey, 48, who arrived in Nanaimo Friday after rowing hundreds of miles down the coast from Prince Rupert in her dugout canoe, Saturday was on her way to the San Juan islands.

The adventurous woman, a resident of Oxnard Beach, Calif., was hoping to spend the night from Friday to Saturday at Thetis Island.

She made the trip in the opposite direction in 1937. Her travelling time so far was three weeks at an average three to four knots.

The canoe was carved at the Indian settlement of Clo-Oose on Vancouver Island's west coast.

Mrs. Carey has and is taking pictures along her trip and said she would use them to illustrate a book she plans to write on her re-enacted adventure.

She is accompanied by her white husky, Ivan.

She said she has found a spot on the Queen Charlotte Islands where she will retire with her husband.

School—What's That?

Although he hasn't attended school since 1937, Marcus Smith, 14, has recently completed Grade 9. He is shown here with his teacher and mother, Mrs. Richard Smith of Port Holmes, near Comox, who with her husband in 1937 won a court case in their bid of keeping Marcus out of school.—(Agnes Flett)

Driver Hurt In Car Crash

DUNCAN — Peter Colyn of Duncan yesterday escaped with shock, cuts and bruises when his car went out of control seven miles south of Duncan on the Trans-Canada Highway, careened into a ditch and crashed through a fence. He was taken to King's Daughters Hospital where he was reported in good condition.

Indian Opera Export?

DUNCAN (CP) — Charles Beadnell, who learned Indian dances from the Cowichan tribe, says he will take an all-Indian opera to London, England, if he can get the tribe's approval.

Beadnell said London promoters agreed when he visited England recently the Cowichan Indian opera Tzinquaw would make a financial killing in the old country.

Large Boiler

Harmac Gets 'Giant'

One of the world's largest recovery boiler units—an eight-storey-high giant which burns waste liquor and recovers chemicals for re-use—has now been put into operation at the Harmac pulp mill of MacMillan Bloedel and Powell River Limited near Nanaimo.

The unit is part of the $40,000,000 expansion program now in progress at the mill, which is being pushed toward a January 1, 1964, completion date.

WAS LARGEST

At the time of its manufacture, the recovery boiler was the largest in the world, the company said. It has the capacity to handle 2,400,000 pounds of solids a day. The unit's function is to burn waste liquor, the residue removed after the cooking process is completed.

It produces in the burning process two byproducts—chemical smelt and steam. The smelt is re-used in manufacturing pulp, and the steam is used in the processing and drying of pulp products.

PEAK PROGRAM

The Harmac expansion program is continuing at its peak, with about 1,000 workmen employed on the site. The present mill, Nanaimo's largest industry, employs about 500 permanent employees.

Red Cross Trains Swim Instructors

DUNCAN—The call for more swimming instructors here has been answered by the Cowichan Red Cross branch, sponsoring a special six-day course with Bruce Wallace of Vancouver and Barbara Fudge of Summerland instructing.

Both teachers are university students and are two of four assisting directors in the B.C. Red Cross water safety services.

The class here, conducted at the swimming pool of the South End volunteer fire brigade, consists of nine people from Chemainus, Ladysmith, Crofton, Thetis Island, Cobble Hill and Duncan.

The students are instructed in how to teach swimming, life saving, artificial respiration and general water safety, and all subjects are carried out in theory and practice.

Mr. Wallace said, "The facilities here, with a modern lecture room practically beside the swimming pool, are excellent." The special course will end Tuesday with rigid tests.

Successful students will receive certifications and bronze medals of the Canadian Life Saving Association.

Around the Island

Hovercraft Fare $5?

NANAIMO — The fare from Nanaimo to Vancouver by Hovercraft would probably be about $5.

This is pointed out in a special report drawn up for Frank Ney of Nanaimo who plans to start a hovercraft service here.

Mr. Ney said when he first rode in the Hovercraft in Montreal he would form a company to start the service here. A syndicate of 30 local businessmen has since been organized.

The report on operating cost was ordered by Mr. Ney and he now intends to discuss the report further with Hovercraft representatives.

He said if the syndicate decides to order a Hovercraft it could be in service here within a year. The Hovercraft could make the Vancouver-Nanaimo trip in about 20 minutes, Mr. Ney said.

NANAIMO (CP) — Walter Charles (Mike) Hamilton, 74, a former mayor of Port Alberni, died in hospital here Thursday. A native of Ireland, he came to B.C. in 1913 and resided in Port Alberni from 1924 to 1960, moving then to Parksville. Funeral will be held in Parksville Monday.

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Foreman, 34, of Port Alberni, escaped injury Saturday when fire destroyed his truck on the city's waterfront.

Foreman was unloading the vehicle when he spotted flames under the hood. Seconds later the fuel tank exploded and flames enveloped the truck.

DUNCAN — Passing a car when unsafe cost Ronald Evans of Duncan $10 in police court. Patrick Clements of Duncan was fined $12 for disobeying a stop sign.

NANAIMO (CP) — A Nanaimo man who broke into a billiard hall here has been sentenced to a year in jail. Nelson George Vaughan, 20, was on probation at the time of the offence and was sentenced Friday for breach of probation.

Big-Game Hunting More Expensive

NANAIMO (CP) — Big-game hunting in British Columbia is going to be more expensive, especially for non-residents.

Dr. James Hatter, director of the provincial recreation department's fish and game branch, said more revenue is needed to provide a needed increase in services.

"We propose to tap resident hunters a bit, and non-residents a lot," he told Nanaimo Fish and Game club Friday night.

Dr. Hatter said the basic $4 firearm licence is to remain unchanged but $4 tags for grizzly bears and $5 tags for moose will be introduced.

"The changes will not affect the large majority of hunters," Dr. Hatter said. Deer and bird hunters would be largely exempt from the increases.

He said the proposed changes will bring the branch $52,000 additional revenue, of which only $4,000 will come from B.C. residents.

Colonist Swim Classes

2,000 Children Trained

'Patience Will Bring Success'

DUNCAN — Under the motto Patience and Repetition Will Bring Success two Victoria women, Mrs. Margie Naysmith and her daughter, Mrs. Marilyn Cann, recently tackled their 11th year of free Colonist swim classes here.

During the past decade 2,000 children have gone through the training at the tree-girded swimming pool of Queen Margaret's School, and Mrs. Naysmith said, "I could write a book about my experiences here."

Both instructors say they enjoy coming to Duncan. Here they encounter different problems than in the Victoria area where similar classes are held every summer.

One of them is the persistence of some dogs to follow their young masters to the poolside. Mrs. Naysmith rules children must leave their dogs home.

"We just cannot babysit for the dogs," she says.

Another problem is the transportation for some of the children who come from the various rural districts from as far as Mill Bay and Shawnigan Lake.

Every Friday—with six half-hour lessons starting at 10 a.m. until 12.30 p.m.—200 youngsters, swimmers and non-swimmers, splash through the pool on Gibbins Road.

Mrs. Naysmith says students should do a certain amount of homework in the bathtub or in safe water. She emphasizes they should practise one of the essentials in swimming — the breathing technique.

Although it is impossible to set a time limit as to when non-swimmers will emerge as competent swimmers, it normally takes two years of continuous instruction. It depends entirely on the water ability of the child, she says.

For some youngsters water is something natural and others have to overcome water shyness.

"I never force a child to go into the water," says Mrs. Naysmith. "It fascinates me to see the attitude of some of the parents toward swimming instruction.

"They don't hesitate to have their children instructed in dancing or music for years, but when it comes to swimming lessons they expect their child to swim in eight weeks."

Swimmers to Be

For Vancouver Island Adventure Follow the Fabulous Road of

The RIO del ORO

By

GEORGE NICHOLSON

The long-delayed opening to public travel of the 60-mile road between Campbell River, on Vancouver Island's east coast, and Gold River, at the head of Muchalat Inlet, Nootka Sound, on the west coast, will be welcomed by residents of British Columbia and tourists alike.

Nootka Sound, where the recorded history of British Columbia begins, was the main site of activity in the first period of discovery, exploration and colonization of the western coast of Canada.

Here are a few of the more noteworthy events which occured there:

1774 Juan Perez, a Spanish naval officer who sailed in the corvette Santiago from Monteray, Mexico, on a voyage of discovery to the northwest coast of America, made contact with the natives near Nootka. The Indians came out in their canoes to meet him and a little trading took place, but the wind suddenly sprang up and the Santiago had to leave hurriedly without Perez or any of his crew going ashore. The Santiago was the first ship our Indians had ever seen.

1778 Captain James Cook, RN, landed at at Friendly Cove, Nootka, and thus became the first European to set foot on these shores. His ships were HMS Resolution and HMS Discovery.

Resolution Cove, named after Resolution and where Cook obtained spars for his ships, is on Bligh Island, the largest of a group which stands in the entrance to the sound. The island was named after Vice Admiral William Bligh, who, as captain, was master of the Resolution with Cook. Bligh was later known as "Breadfruit Bligh," owing to the earlier notoriety he gained in the mutiny of the Bounty. Point Discovery, about three miles away, at the eastern entrance to the sound, was named after Discovery.

1788 First fur traders, both British and American, arrived at Nootka in search of sea otter skins. At that time and for many years afterwards, Nootka was the busiest seaport north of Mexico. Photos of old drawings in the Provincial Archives show as many as 10 ships anchored there at one time.

1788 The schooner Northwest America, first ship built (by John Meares) on this coast north of Mexico, was launched at Friendly Cove.

1789 Don Estevan Jose Martinez, a Spanish naval officer, under orders from the Viceroy of Mexico, occupied Nootka. One of the first things he did was to seize three British ships, an incident that nearly led to war between Great Britain and Spain.

1792 Captain George Vancouver, RN, after circumnavigating Vancouver Island (then un-named), was at Nootka with his ships Discovery (not to be confused with Cook's ship of the same name) and Chatham. Vancouver had previously been on this coast as a midshipman with Cook.

Vancouver, representing Great Britain, and Juan de la Bodega y Quadra, Spain, met at Nootka for the purpose of arranging for the withdrawal of the Spanish garrison there, under terms of the "Nootka Convention."

Vancouver, while at Nootka, named Vancouver Island—as a compliment to to Quadra—"The Island of Quadra and Vancouver."

Galiano and Valdes, with the schooners Sutil and Mexicana, were at Nootka in 1792, as were many other Spanish explorers. In fact, Nootka was the base of operations for all the Spanish expeditions of exploration conducted on this coast, including those to Juan de Fuca Strait and the Gulf of Georgia. It was during this period that Esquimalt Harbor, Puget Sound and Burrard Inlet were discovered.

1795 The Spanish garrison was withdrawn from Nootka, the British flag again raised over Friendly Cove and the seized British ships were returned to their rightful owners.

1803 Trading ship Boston captured by Nootka Indians and afterwards sunk. Captain Salter and all but two of his crew, Jewett and Thompson, were murdered.

1805 Jewett and Thompson gained their freedom when the brig Lydia arrived at Nootka.

Nootka Cairns

Near Nootka Lighthouse, which stands on a rocky headland at the entrance to Friendly Cove, are two stone monuments. The inscription on one reads: "Vancouver and Quadra met here in 1792, under the treaty between Spain and Great Britain of October, 1790. Erected by the Washington University State Historical Society, 1903."

The other, a cairn of uncut stone, 11 feet tall, was erected by the Historical Sites and Monuments Board of Canada. Its tablet, which was unveiled on August 13, 1924, by Walter Cameron Nicol, lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, bears the following inscription:

"Nootka Sound, discovered by Cook in March, 1778. In June, 1789 Spain took possession and established and maintained a settlement until 1795. The capture of British vessels in 1789 almost led to war, which was avoided by the Nootka Convention in 1790. Vancouver and Quadra met here in August, 1792, to determine the land to be restored under the convention."

A third monument in the form of a cement block, with crude lettering which bears evidence of being the handiwork of the men who erected it, bears this inscription: "A.D. 1788. Meares built the North West America on this Spot." It is now used as a cornerstone for the Roman Catholic Church, which stands on the site of one built by the Spaniards.

Home of Nootkas

Friendly Cove is the traditional home of the Nootka Indians, once the second (to the Haidas of the Queen Charlotte Islands) most powerful tribe on the coast. The proper name of the tribe is Mow-ach-ahts, "people of the deer," because deer (mowach) were plentiful in their domain. All the Indians on the west coast of Vancouver Island are sub-tribes of the Nootkas.

Maquinna was their chief. The name "Maquinna" has been passed down through several generations of direct descendants to the present-day Nootka chief.

Cook found Maquinna very friendly. So did Vancouver and the Spaniards. And the same can be said of most of the early traders. All spoke highly of him in their journals. It was from this fact that Friendly Cove was so named, in 1786, by Mr. Strange, supercargo of one of the trading expeditions.

Nootka proper, the site of one of the first salmon canneries on the west coast, is two miles from Friendly Cove. Both are on the south coast of Nootka Sound.

Valley of the Elk

The first 20 miles, to Upper Campbell Lake, of the Campbell River-Gold River road has been in use for two decades. The remaining 40 miles, though built five years ago, was made available to the travelling public for the first time last June 21.

This section crosses Upper Campbell Lake, which with the building of Strathcona Dam is now joined to Buttle forming one 45-mile-long lake, via a man-made causeway. It then follows the lake shoreline for ten miles, approximately the same distance along the banks of Elk River until it reaches the eastern boundary of Strathcona Park. Roaming the Elk River valley, but closely watched and counted periodically by provincial game biologists, is a herd of up to 100 elk. The animals are frequently seen browsing in the willow bottoms on either side of the road.

The scenery in Strathcona Park is breathtaking. Seen from the roadside are some of the Island's highest mountains. Permanent snowfields, glaciers and spectacular waterfalls punctuate virgin stands of Douglas fir. Drum Lakes and Crest Lake drain into Elk River. The road passes close by all three.

At the summit, 1,140 feet above sea level, is the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's Heber River diversion system, where a regulated portion of water from this river is made to flow

HUANCAYO: City in the Sky

A focal point for earthy gossip among the leading citizenry of Huancayo, nearly 11,000 feet up in the Peruvian Andes, is the open guest-registry of the clean and comfortable "turista" hotel maintained by the Peruvian government. Therein, by law, is recorded the full name, nationality, passport number, age, marital status (single, married or divorced) and for good measure, sex, of every guest.

PART XIII

The last-mentioned item of biological information seemed unnecessarily redundant to this writer until his blushing ears endured the running commentary of the local population as he edged his way through the teeming streets and open-air markets with little Rory papoose-basketed on his back. The language was mainly Quechua, the tongue of the mountain Indian tribes and, perhaps mercifully, beyond his comprehension. It was the highly friendly but very frank gestures, plus ever-increasing crowding by happy Rory's admirers, that forced us in the end temporarily to abandon my—in their eyes—female role in providing this most convenient form of baby transport.

Huancayo's Sunday Indian market, the biggest, best and most colorful in Peru, was getting off to a good Saturday evening start as we commenced our explorations. With the swift and sudden dusk, the tribal folk from the hills were already pouring in, the vividly patterned dress and peculiar high-crowned hats identifying the women with the various villages from whence they came — and colorful "llicllas," a form of serape in which the huge bundles, plus babies, carried on their backs. Some had travelled many miles on foot, and barefoot, over the goat-track trails, the women bowed with the weight of the wares they hoped to sell—vegetables, fruit, pottery, basketware, llicllas, warm golden-brown-and-white hand-woven alpaca shawls and lengths of cloth — the men walking burden-free as befitted their sex. Some disgorged from incredibly crammed, battered buses of ancient vintage. Laden burros and llamas jostled among the families already squatted for the night in the narrow back-streets, their hooves grazing past the heads of tousled brown children sleeping or playing in the gutters.

By dawn the stalls were up in their hundreds, edging all wheeled traffic from the half-mile "Calle Real"—the principal street of the town — and from the main plaza and the streets and open courtyards centering on it. Huancayo's heart had become a shifting pattern of kaleidoscopic color, its background the golden, autumn-tinted hills rising to the blue-white surge of the highest Andes beyond. The bitter cold of the high-altitude night gave way to warming sun, the scents of meals cooking in the open streets blending with the smell of cattle, ripening fruits, humanity and dust. Whole pigs roasted on spits above glowing charcoal fires. Basket-makers, shoemakers, weavers, squatted on the sidewalks plying their trades. Weirdly costumed dancers and mimers marched through the streets bearing banners followed by a black "devil" leading a "bear" on a long rope and masked women and men, to the accompaniment of slow, monotonous music from violins and flutes, while other masked men pretended to beat back the crowds with whips.

Wandering perhaps too far down a narrow lane towards the hills, we met a witch-doctor from the jungle peddling his charms before uneasy Indian eyes. Naked to the waist, save for a necklace of teeth and bits of bone, medicine pouch slung from shoulder, eyes glaring, he approached Jane with a queer, lurching dance, grabbed her hand, muttering sing-song words in an unknown tongue. One could sense a sudden tension among the watching crowd. An Indian woman scolded him shrilly. Jane managed to disengage her hand with tact and a smile. We got out of there. He may have meant no harm, but with Rory still on my back at the time, I confess to sudden apprehension, coupled with realization of how incapable I was, with such a burden, to take any effective steps to defend my family.

Silent Bargaining

Back in the main markets, the morning reached its crescendo. Yet even the most vigorous buying, selling and bargaining is almost in silence. No gesticulation, no hawkers shouting their wares. There was noise, though, strident, interminable, grating on our ears. The national election for Peru's president and congress was due in two weeks' time and, from dawn to late evening, all through our time in Huancayo, the four contending parties broadcast their marching or rally songs from loud-speakers set up along the Calle Real, interspersed with recorded political harangues. One had appropriated France's "La Marseillaise" and, much as we love France, we could hardly bear to hear that mighty anthem again!

By early afternoon the market was over. Stalls came down. The fume-belching buses roared away, top-heavy with loads and people. The llama and burro trains and patient, plodding women headed back for their little villages in the hills, the heads of tired babies drooping from the still huge bundles on their backs. Huancayo became, for another week, a quiet Andean town.

We were able to explore more widely, made good friends among its kindly people. A generous Peruvian family took us under its wing, showed us much of the countryside around and how its people lived . . . The tile-makers, shaping and baking their clay in pits and kilns amid fields where women cut grain with hand-sickles, to be threshed by the hooves of horses driven endlessly round and round across the sheaves—in one case, by a startlingly modern tractor used to the same purpose! We visited neighboring villages with their own markets as interesting as Huancayo's, though on a smaller scale; were fascinated by the curious littled thatched watchtowers on stilts which dotted the ripened acres, "Chosas," where men crouch with guns at dawn and evening to watch for marauding crows; watched patient women endlessly spinning and weaving intricate patterns of alpaca and llama cloth by hand. We tried, and liked, Huancayo's special foods—"cuye" (the Quechua name for guinea-pig), very good; Papa a la Huancaya (potatoes seasoned in a very special way), drank "Alga Robina"—a cocktail looking like whipped chocolate topped with cinnamon, most potent and good.

Merry Drunks

One evening, on the road outside the town, we came on Indians dancing by the roadside, a little group all merrily drunk, their music provided by two men blowing great animal horns in a strange rising and falling tune, a third beating his hands on a primitive drum.

There were other things in Huancayo itself: its university, modest and very small by our standards, where, as in most Latin-American countries, the students reign supreme to the point where they can force the dismissal of the rector or professors of whom they do not approve. Its staff included a Hungarian-Canadian who had fled Hungary in the 1956 uprising, had attended UBC and married a Vancouver girl. There were three newly-arrived young Peace Corps Americans at the hotel, a married couple from California, and a single girl from Florida, eager to commence their two-year term of hard and tactful work in this far-off land. Of these and others of their kind we'll have more to tell, in admiration, later.

Throughout our stay, too, there were many religious processions, for it was the "Month of the Cross." Chief among these was the procession of Lac Cruces, chanting women with banners and lighted candles, floats with images of the Holy Virgin and the Christ, showered with rose-petals as it moved slowly through the streets, while rockets soared at intervals against the intense blue of the skies.

To love Huancayo is easy. To really know Huancayo and its lovely valley would take many, many months. It was with sadness that we rose in an icy dawn to leave, dismantled the bed we had contrived for Rory behind the wardrobe in our small room, folded the sleeping bag on which Mandy slept in her private quarters (the cupboard), said goodbye to the chickens which lived on the balcony of the rather ambitiously-named "Hotel de Paris" at spitting distance across the street, and watched the frost-rimmed railroad track receding as we headed west, up and over the now snow-clogged passes on our way back to Lima.

WHEN MOUNTAINS OF ICE

Two important settlements on this giant among the waterways of the world—the Mackenzie system—were flooded by ice-borne waters this spring and largely destroyed.

HAY RIVER, on Great Slave Lake was the most important harbor where freight, transported by land, reached water transportation by the lake and down the Mackenzie River to the Arctic.

FORT SIMPSON on the Lower Mackenzie, was the headquarters of the "Northern Department" of the fur trade and had been proposed as the capital of the District of Mackenzie, which may become a province.

The flood brought tragedy to many people who lost most or all of their possessions—1,800 at Hay River, and 700 at Fort Simpson.

Of importance are problems of the future in which both localities are destined to play an important part.

THE FLOODS DROWNED

By GUY BLANCHET

The Mackenzie River with its tributaries takes its rise in the mountains, crosses the plateau of Northern Alberta, passes through two great lakes, Athabaska and Great Slave, from which (as Mackenzie River) it is navigable to the Arctic, 3,000 miles from its source. It passes through a variety of climatic conditions as affecting winter accumulation of snow and ice and those of spring when melting snow causes floods which lift and disrupt the ice on large rivers. The flood-borne ice masses tear their way northward. If an obstruction is encountered, jams form and the water piles up behind them. These conditions are unpredictable from year to year—what causes the flood, how the ice will go out, where jams may form.

Most northern settlements grew up about the forts of the fur traders which, for convenience, were usually located on low benches. There are records of flood disasters in the past which forced the people of a settlement to move to higher ground. Usually, few people were affected; but the hazard caused anxious times to the people of the little settlements who knew the irrestible force of the ice-borne flood. Fortunately, the jams usually formed at remote places and no damage was done. A sense of security was created when there was no record of a flood or in memory of the oldest inhabitants. When it caused extensive damage, the people might move to higher ground as at Fort Good Hope on the Lower Mackenzie which was moved three times. At other places, as at Fort McMurray on the Athabaska, the people rebuilt and clung to their homeland, which they loved. It might be a century before conditions causing flood were repeated.

Disasters of this spring at Hay River, where the river enters Great Slave Lake, and at Fort Simpson on the Lower Mackenzie where its principal tributary, the Liard River, joins it, were both due to early melting of snow causing break-up of the ice on the upper waters. In both cases, the wall of ice and water met an obstruction where there was an important settlement.

Hay River town is at the mouth of the river, an important harbour, at which supplies from railhead are brought by truck. (A railway extension is proposed). Fish, ore and other freight are sent south. The river, 350 miles long, flows across the "Alberta plateau" where spring comes early. There are no large lakes on its course to check flood conditions. The river tumbles off the plateau in two spectacular falls, dropping 160 feet, and for 25 miles it flows across low, prehistoric lake-bottom land with few elevations. It built up a delta at its mouth, Vale Island, and beyond shoals extending into Great Slave Lake. The island and the restricted channel through the shoals, with heavy lake ice beyond which would not clear for another month, dammed the flood and caused the ice-borne water to back up and drown the town.

On May 1 the flood reached disaster level. It was not till a week later that the water subsided, and revealed the extent of the damage. The homes of 1,800 people were for the most part in ruins. The problem of rebuilding or removal was faced, for the future of this important distributing point was at stake.

In 1921 I surveyed the river and its harbour and the difficult entrance to the lake. At that time, only an occasional steamer used it. There was a small settlement on the east bank, a mission school, cabins for a few Indian trappers and fishermen. The records went back to 1893 at the Mission and beyond that in Indian traditions. No floods were recorded, or remembered by the oldest natives. The survey of the river revealed it as the drainage of an extensive area, flowing across the plateau to its discharge at the falls and from the canyon to the lake.

Since then industrial developments in the north and transportation facilities from the south have given this harbour increasing importance.

While attention is directed to the damage to the port of Hay River, a reference to the falls where the river plunges from the plateau to the valley of the Mackenzie adds interest and colour to the situation. This is a Niagara in miniature. Alexandra Falls makes a sheer drop of 110 feet into a canyon. A mile below, Louise Falls makes a further drop of 50 feet over broken ledges.

The field notes of the survey of Hay River are interrupted by an unconventional entry—an impression received by the view of these falls after the survey of many miles of placid river.

"Alexandra Falls, the most beautiful sight I have ever seen, a coffee-coloured river, pouring over a ledge of limestone, dropping into a gorge 100 feet below. It rushes between vertical walls of rock for a mile when it plunges over broken ledges at Louise Falls, dropping another 50 feet. The scene was one of fairyland beauty with the sun shining on the mounting spray."

What a different picture the falls must have presented this spring with the muddy flood and ice masses plunging into the canyon, carrying destruction in its course to the great lake! The flood has subsided, the river now flows quietly past the ruined settlement. The damage has been assessed. The problems of individuals, of business and of government remain to be solved. I like to remember Hay River of nearly 50 years ago . . . a welcome harbour from the stormy lake . . . a peaceful settlement of missions, traders and Indians . . . the beauty of the fall from the plateau . . . and a peaceful river.

Far to the north where Mackenzie River has gathered the waters of many streams, Liard River, its principal tributary, joins it from the west without a delta, except that an island chinooks start early melting. The flood gathers force like a tidal wave. It has been known to rise 25 feet during a night. It crashes into heavy ice of the Mackenzie north of the island on which settlement of Fort Simpson is located. It sweeps past Fort Simpson, carving a channel. The Mackenzie may be able to absorb the flood and an outlet may be opened up below . . . or it may not!

In 1921 when I made the survey of the Mackenzie and the Liard and the island, I gathered information of the fort the Hudson's Bay Company had established. Fort Simpson, near the ruins of the Fork Fort of the Northwest Company. This had been an important establishment. The Northern Council met there. Records kept year by year mention the spring discharge of the Liard, the freeing of the Mackenzie from its winter ice . . . but although there had been threats of flood, none had occurred. Beyond the Liard flood danger, there was built up below where the great Mackenzie forced its flood against the west bank. The island, two miles long, was built up over the centuries. It rises about 40 feet above normal river level, is flat-topped and divided from the west bank by a backwater, normally a shallow stream.

There is a safe location, across the river, east of Fort Simpson, where there is no danger of flood and with unlimited land for expansion to meet any future needs.

The problem at Hay River is different. The harbour is essential for northern transportation. There is no high land and the restricted discharge into Great Slave Lake can only be improved artificially by dredging. Dykes might assist at danger points. A dam at Louise Falls at the foot of the canyon might check spring floods and also produce power.

The disasters focused attention on the danger of flooding at these important points. It is no longer good enough to say, "It never happened before." Towns, harbours, roads and railways must be located and protected where it will never happen again.

Liard River rises in the mountains where was that of the Mackenzie itself: If the ice went out below Fort Simpson, all was well . . . but if ice disrupted the river above the Liard with the danger of jams in the restricted passage through "the line," that would be bad . . . dangerous.

This year, Liard ice formed a jam ten miles below Fort Simpson. The island was flooded for the first time on record. The 700 people there had to be evacuated.

Will the place be rebuilt on a new location? It remains to be seen. But the problem requires sober thought.

east into Elk River, instead of west into Gold River. This is to augment Upper Campbell Lake's supply in the dry season.

The road then follows down Heber River, crossing it in several places by bridge, until it reaches Gold River, then through the Gold River gorge to Muchalat, a modern township of about 300 inhabitants, at the mouth of the river.

Masterpiece

Construction of the road through the Gold River gorge might well be described as an engineering masterpiece. It is carved out of solid rock, with the cliffs overhanging in places, and there is nothing else on the Island like it. Matching this is the scenery. Hundreds of feet below, in places almost straight down, is the river itself, a succession of white-water rapids, back eddies, crystal-clear pools and long gravel bars, a fisherman's paradise.

So steep are the sides of the gorge that the scenery can never be despoiled by logging. It is at its best when the wild flowers are out. Nowhere on the Island do dogwoods grow in such profusion. In the month of May their flowers might well be mistaken for snow, with the flowering wild currant adding a tinge of pink.

Rio del Oro was the name given the river by the Spaniards, but there is no evidence that they found any gold in it. The river's Indian name is Muchalee, hence the name Muchalat. Aaminkis, meaning "mouth of the river," is the name of the Indian village, or what's left of it (a few shacks), at the river mouth.

Muchalat is headquarters for the Tahsis Company's logging operations on the west coast. The geographical features of the coast prevent the road being extended any farther.

Communication between Tahsis, Zeballos and other points on the sound is provided by the Barkley Sound Transportation Co. Ltd.'s Uchuck fleet, which is based at Gold River.

During the summer months, in conjunction with Vancouver Island Coach Lines, the company operates a special one-day tourist cruise every Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday. On these days the bus leaves Campbell River at 10 a.m. and arrives at Gold River wharf at noon.

From there, the Uchuck III (capacity 100 passengers) takes you down scenic Muchalat Inlet, thence across Nootka Sound to Friendly Cove. Lunch is served on board. The cruise lasts five hours, during which time all the aforesaid historical places of interest are visited. Passengers are back at Campbell River by 7:30 p.m.

As two-thirds of the road was built by the Elk River Timber Co. Ltd. and the Tahsis Company Ltd. for their own logging operations, it is only open for public travel during non-operating hours: during the week, from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.; weekends, 6 p.m. Friday to 6 a.m. Monday, and on long holiday weekends, to 6 a.m. Tuesday. By special arrangement, V.I. Coach Lines operates a regular daily service timed to connect with arrival and departure of the Uchuck vessels.

Motorists planning a trip over the road are advised to take gas and food sufficient for the round trip, for there are no service stations, eating places or sleeping accommodation at Gold River, or anywhere along the road once you pass the Forbes Landing Resort on Upper Campbell Lake.

There was no Doubt Who Pulled the Trigger

On Christmas morning in the year 1890, Lawrence Whelan awoke not only to the sound of distant church bells, but also to the realization that he was lying on a strap iron cell bunk in Victoria's city police station. As he flinched momentarily at the slamming of a nearby cell door, came also the painful recognition that he had a king-sized hangover. As he tried to bring his thoughts into sharper focus he had a haunting memory of a little toy trumpet suspended by a tinselled cord, and a couple of men in black top hats wearing white uniforms bespangled with red braid. As he conjured up these figures there came with chilling suddenness one dreadful recollection. He had killed one of these men!

JOAN SMITH

At this point we'll leave Mr. Whelan to his gloomy reflections, while we check into the cause of his predicament. Twenty-nine years old, born in Dublin and orphaned as a child, Larry Whelan had little or no education by the time he came to the United States, and acquired citizenship. Working his way westward, it was in Seattle in the summer of 1890 that he teamed up with a bunch of fellow Irishmen heading for Victoria to help construct a new Catholic church at the corner of Blanshard and View streets.

The new edifice would supercede an older one a little way down View toward Douglas. Near it were three or four small frame dwellings, one of them soon occupied bachelor style by five of the labor gang, which included one, Joe Silk. Whelan got himself a room in Steve Jones' old Dominion Hotel where, from his rear-view window, he could look down on the church being constructed. The hotel, in inevitable Victorian style, had a bar, competing no doubt with Mr. Wriglesworth's saloon on the corner where the Capitol Theatre now stands.

Far removed from the local scene, but having bearing on Whelan's troubles, was the fact that this was the year of more than unusual tumult in Ireland over the eternal Home Rule question. Charles Stewart Parnell's affair with Mrs. O'Shea had just ended in O'Shea divorcing his wife, which so tarnished the image of the "Uncrowned King of Ireland" that priests and English Liberals had turned against him. Which split the disillusioned Home Rulers into rival camps, causing riots and street battles.

Touch of Green

IT WAS IN THIS SORT of political atmosphere when the new Blanshard Street church cornerstone was laid that someone in the throng of Irish-born laborers suggested "a touch of green" to mark the occasion. It wasn't Whelan, because he wasn't there. Anyway, some sort of flag was hoisted, part Stars and Stripes, part green, a sort of Fenian emblem if you like. It fluttered for a day or so atop the boom of a stone-lifting derrick, noticed by Whelan from his bedroom window.

One morning as he passed the church he noticed it lying, rain sodden, on the ground, and, asking his pal Silk who took it down, he was told that Tom Deasy had ordered a workman, a Frenchman called Lepine, to remove it. Later there fluttered from the derrick three flags, the Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes, and a green, Irish flag adorned with a harp.

It was this flag incident that later created suspicion that Larry Whelan had vowed to kill than man who ordered removal of the original bit of bunting.

Tom Deasy, by the way, was also an Irish Catholic, a man of repute, who'd seen the gold rush here as a child, and had been a link boy when volunteer firemen dragged hand-drawn hose carts to fires. The link boy ran ahead with a torch to show the way. In later years Tom had been a conscientious volunteer fireman, and was now chief of the fire department.

Watchman Needed

IT WAS TOWARD December that for some reason or another Whelan's services were no longer required on the job, but on the 17th of that month a couple of marble pillars arrived from Ottawa and sub-contractor Aeneas MacDonald needed a watchman to see they came to no harm as they lay inside the partly-built church. There had been a watchman, another Irishman, who hit his foreman over the head with his lantern one night and got fired.

This was about the time Charlie McLaughlin, still another church sub-contractor, after exploring the delights of wine, women and song at Victoria Gardens on the Gorge Road, essayed to return to town at dead of night with a large-sized jag and a very small skiff. As there happened to be a rip-roaring ebb through the gap, he first lost his oars, then his life. Whelan, by the way, was one of the men who helped search for his body for the best part of a week. It was the day before Christmas, 2:30 in the afternoon, to be exact, when Aeneas hired Larry, and you can gauge Whelan as he describes the incident:

"Mr. Macdonald the contractor comes up to me and Dan Macdonald with him, and Macdonald says 'Larry, will you stand watch at the church tonight?' I will that, I says, and Dan says 'Have you got a gun?' I haven't, I says. 'Shall I get you one?' says he. No, says I, if I want one I can get one. 'Well,' says Dan, 'mind the ghosts.'

" 'Larry's not afraid of ghosts,' says Macdonald and they walked away."

Larry Was Absent

FOUR TIMES during that pre-Christmas afternoon and evening Macdonald checked the building but saw no sign of his "playboy of the Western World" because, unfortunately, every time he put in an appearance, Larry was either holding forth in the Dominion Hotel bar, or over at Wriglesworth's, or down at the View Street cabin drinking with Joe Silk and the gang. As he rotated between these spots, he did however give an occasional look at the roofless building and once, feeling a little tired, he sat down in a corner and went sound asleep, despite the rain that poured in on him.

Apparently Larry's fellow drinkers had been kidding him about his job, and a barroom character even suggested that he had better look out for things being dropped on him from aloft. One, Jack Crawford, set his glass down long enough at the Dominion to slip round the corner into the gloom of the church and play ghost in an effort to scare Whelan. There were witnesses to this.

As night deepened and the rain continued, it was around 10:30 that Christmas Eve when the pot-valiant Larry decided he should have a gun for protection, so borrowed a double-barrel shotgun from Wriglesworth who, never expecting it would be fired, stuffed a bit of rag down the muzzle to keep the rain out. Whelan's appearance in the Dominion bar with his gun was the occasion for more jocularity, but of course he had to put it down to attend to his drinking. Finally he gave a demonstration of the manual of arms for the benefit of Crawford, and when Jack protested that Larry was doing it the American way, he demonstrated the British style.

Ammunition at Hand

IT WAS SOMEWHERE in Larry's peregrinations that someone remarked "No good having a gun that isn't loaded," so off lurched Larry to Joe Silk's quarters on View Street where Joe produced a bag containing about a hundred shells, most of them blanks. Which meant they were primed cases with a powder charge wadded down, leaving the hunter the option of putting in his own grade or quantity of shot. Silk, by the way, favored No. 4. Diving his hand in the bag, Joe produced a couple of blanks.

"Take these," he remarked. "They'll do no harm; just make a noise."

The gun, like its owner, now was loaded. Whelan departed toward Blanshard Street with the occasional misstepping but purposeful gait of a man with a mission, gun in one hand, an umbrella in the other.

But Did Tom Whelan Really Mean to Murder?

Ended in Disaster

There happened to be a fancy dress dance at the Philharmonic Hall on Fort Street that night and just towards midnight two of the revelers broke away to attend midnight Mass at the Old View Street church. One was Frank Partridge, compositor in the government printing bureau, the other David Fee, an East Wellington bachelor store-owner down to spend Christmas with his parents who ran a grocery store at Quadra and North Park. Both men were ex-St. Louis College boys.

It was exactly eight minutes to twelve when Whelan, for some reason off his beat, accosted the pair at the southwest corner of Blanshard and View and, holding the gun at hip level, the muzzle pointing slightly upward and only four and a half feet from Fee, said something that sounded like "I challenge you" or "I have to challenge you."

The two young men, each in a black top hat and wearing long, white frock coats decorated with red braid, turned in puzzlement to see who had spoken when suddenly the gun went off. Fee, who had a toy trumpet slung around his neck, collapsed on the pavement. Shot clean through the heart, he was dead in a minute. The horror-stricken Partridge dropped to his knees beside his companion as Whelan, leaving his umbrella on the pavement, walked on down View Street.

Some of the men were asleep when he arrived at the cabin, where he told Silk he had shot a man. Silk couldn't understand it, and ran up the street to verify the story. When he came back Whelan decided to surrender to the police.

No sooner had he departed than Chief of Police Harry Sheppard — who'd been at the church service and heard the shot — was so quickly on the scene that he arrived at the cabin in time to pick up Whelan's shotgun while one barrel was still warm. Breaking it open, he found one un-fired shell and one recently fired. Both were of the same make, and the unfired shell was a blank!

When he heard Silk's story, Sheppard took possession of the bag of shell. Meantime Whelan had arrived at the police station, where he was detained.

Most curious part of the affair, revealed by the autopsy, was that Fee had been struck by a single pellet. It was typed as buckshot by Churchill, the local gun expert, who said it weighed a 16th of an ounce, and 15 of them were considered an ordinary charge. How one stray pellet could have got into that shotgun barrel remains one of B.C.'s prime ballistic curiosities, for it's inconceivable it was accidentally in the rag that Wrigglesworth stuffed in the barrel.

There was, of course, widespread sympathy for the Fee family in their bereavement, and after the inquest and funeral Whelan was charged with murder and Silk as an accessory. The latter charge was subsequently withdrawn.

Six weeks after the shooting, at a special assize, the Whelan case saw two of the province's legal luminaries opposing each other before Chief Justice Matthew Begbie. For the prosecution was Attorney-General Theodore Davie (soon to be premier) and D. M. Eberts for the defence.

On the supposition that Whelan had mistaken Fee for Tom Deasy, because the fire chief occasionally wore a white raincoat and Fee's fancy dress garb might have caused the fatal illusion, the Crown went on to hint of a Fenian plot to kill Deasy, and of course brought up the flag incident. Here, in those days as in Britain, the accused couldn't take the stand, so nothing was heard from Whelan or any defence witness; Eberts had to make his points out of those the Crown called.

The 71-year-old, bewigged Chief Justice, held in awe by both criminals and jurors, was in his usual form, something akin to a minor league Jeffries or Braxfield. His corrosive remarks can be imagined when the jury announced their off-beat verdit, "Guilty of murder without premeditation!"

Banished to the jury room to think it over, it was exactly eight minutes to midnight (the parallel moment when Fee was killed) that the 12 good men and true returned to announce that Whelan was guilty of manslaughter. Cheated out of a hanging, His Lordship, in addressing the prisoner, said:

"Your counsel argued that you were entitled to credit for having gone to the police. You were like a wolf who, after destroying a sheep, goes to the farmer's door saying 'I didn't know it was your sheep, I never saw him before.' What is the farmer to do? Would that save the wolf from death? Would not the farmer say 'Certainly I will save you from the dogs, but I will hang you for stealing my sheep. I will prevent you from destroying my sheep in the future.' Just as, if the jury had taken proper care of the lives of their fellow citizens they would have found a verdict against you.

"If the farmer was as weak he might say to the wolf 'I will save your life, I will send you to a menagerie.' But how long would he send him for? A week, a month, a year? So that the wolf might come back and kill his sheep? No, certainly not! He would place the wolf where he would do no more harm. So I must deal with you.

"Never again will you be allowed to call yourself a free man; never again will you be allowed to go on your drunken brawls; never again will you carry your flag over your shoulder and challenge a fight; never again will you shoot down like a dog an estimable young man. I have not, in 32 years upon this bench, been called upon to pronounce the sentence which in this case I must. Believing you guilty of wilful murder, I will protect you from the dogs. You shall not be torn to pieces by your indignant fellow citizens. You shall go from here to be made miserable, to be a slave for the rest of your life. You are not going to a home, an asylum, a refuge, but to prison where you shall work, without hope of freedom or reward, for all the days of your life. The sentence of this court is that you be sent to penal servitude for the rest of your natural life."

Begbie's hint of saving the accused from mob violence was, if I may be permitted to say so, a palpable bit of hogwash, thrown in perhaps to justify his own choler. As history has shown, Victorians have always had a better than average regard for the due processes of law, except for one lapse in May, 1915.

As he listened to his sentence, the red-haired Whelan—who'd lost 30 pounds in his 40 days of suspense—presented a figure of bleak resignation. Like a Hibernian Pagliacci, gone were the wisecracks, along with his one-time friends who, like that quickest deserter of all, John Barleycorn, had somehow tiptoed to cover.

A drunken fool perhaps, but not a murderer. At least that's what Ottawa's Minister of Justice must have thought, when he signed an order for Whelan's release 10 years later.

FOR SUMMERTIME REFRESHMENT

Today we are going to talk about tall, frosty thirst-quenchers.

Some businesses are seasonal . . . in summer a certain pint-size undertaking flourishes. This is the time of year when small-fry business men set up shop on lawns across the country. their signs read "Lemonade 5c." It is not guaranteed "ice cold" and sometimes when stock runs low, the product gets mysteriously watered down. In spite of this the front lawn lemonade business continues to thrive.

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT FOR FOOD

Actually there is little else as cooling and thirst-quenching on a warm day as a beverage made with citrus fruit. Stir up a tall citrus cooler, find a spot under a shady tree, relax and be refreshed. Although ice-cold lemonade is so wonderfully satisfying and refreshing, there are many other heat-beating drinks that I am sure you will want to try during these summer months.

Although fresh fruit is usually available, it is handy to have some time-saving ingredients on hand . . . bottled and tinned juices, frozen fruit concentrates, instant tea (for iced tea) and fruit-flavored crystals.

Let's start our recipes with Pronto Lemonade . . . a ready-to-use lemon syrup.

PRONTO LEMONADE . . . 2 cups lemon juice, 4 tsp. grated lemon peel, 1 to 2 cups of sugar (more or less, to taste).

You can use part bottled or tinned lemon juice and just one fresh lemon for the peel. Combine all in a jar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved. Cover and refrigerate. For each serving pour ¼ cup of syrup into a tall glass, add ice cubes and water to fill.

MINTY ORANGE-LEMON COOLER . . . 2 cups sugar, 2½ cups water, several sprigs crushed mint, 1 cup fresh orange juice, 1 cup fresh lemon juice, 1 tbsp. grated lemon peel.

Simmer the sugar and water for five minutes. Pour over the crushed mint leaves. Add the orange and lemon juice and let steep for half an hour. Strain into a jar. Cover and refrigerate until ready to use. To serve . . . use ⅓ glass of mixture for each drink, add ice cubes and water to fill.

Here are some lemon-based drinks especially designed for the younger set. Some are made with simple syrup which can be made and kept on hand in the refrigerator. Just combine one cup sugar and one cup water. Simmer for five minutes and refrigerate. I'm sure adults would enjoy these drinks too . . . if they get by the lemonade stand.

LEMON BLOSSOM SODA . . . ¼ cup lemon juice (bottled or tinned), ¼ cup simple syrup (see above), vanilla ice cream, 1 7-oz. bottle lemon-lime carbonated beverage, chilled.

Combine lemon juice and syrup. Pour into two tall glasses. Add one scoop ice cream to each glass. Fill with carbonated beverage. Top with another scoop of ice cream. Yield two servings.

PINK PUNCH . . . 1 cup lemon juice, 1 10-oz. package frozen strawberries, ⅓ cup simple syrup, 3 7-oz. bottles ginger ale chilled.

Combine first three ingredients partly thawed in blender or press berries through a chilled sieve. When ready to serve, place in a punch bowl and add carbonated beverage.

KIDDY KOCKTAIL . . . 2 bananas, ½ cup lemon juice, ¼ cup confectioner's sugar, 2 7-oz. bottles lemon-lime carbonated beverage.

Combine first three ingredients in blender or press bananas, chilled through a sieve. Add carbonated beverage. Serve over ice cubes. Yield four servings.

PURPLE RAZZLE DAZZLE . . . 1 pint pure grape juice (Welch's), 1 48-oz. tin grapefruit juice, 1 quart ginger ale, ice cubes.

Combine the grape and grapefruit juices, add ginger ale. Pour over ice cubes. Makes 24 4-oz. servings. (This is a goldmine of vitamin C).

For a summer party punch bowl why not use a watermelon? It is a conversation piece and it does look pretty. First choose a nicely shaped and well-colored melon, get a nice dark green one. Cut a good sized oval-shaped piece from the side. With a sharp-edged spoon scoop out the pink meat. Use this for fruit cups, appetizers and salads . . . or it can be disposed of by small boys and girls. It may be necessary to slice a thin piece off the bottom so that it will stand steady. Be careful not to cut too thick a piece or your punch bowl will leak. A medium-sized melon will hold about a gallon of punch.

WATERMELON LEMONADE . . . 2 cups lemon juice, 2 cups watermelon juice, lemon slices, 3 cups white corn syrup, 3 quarts ginger ale, ice cubes.

Drain the juice from the pink watermelon meat. If necessary, squeeze the pink meat in a cheesecloth to make up the amount. If you want to use the watermelon meat for something else, use some cranberry or raspberry juice to make up the amount. Combine the ingredients at party time and pour over ice cubes in melon shell. Float lemon slices on top for garnish. Yield 16 large or 32 small glasses.

Iced tea is always a delicious hot-weather drink. If you are watching calories it is about the lowest-calorie bevarage you can drink. Iced tea with sugar and lemon is only 20 calories per glass. If you use a sugar substitute to sweeten, then there are practically no calories. Granulated sugar substitute dissolves instantly in hot or cold beverages.

The best way to make iced tea . . . fill the glasses with ice cubes. Make double-strength tea, brew for five minutes. Pour over ice cubes.

How to make a two-quart pitcher of iced tea . . . measure one quart freshly-drawn water, bring to full rolling boil. Measure 12 teaspoons loose tea or six tea bags or 12 teaspoons instant tea. Pour on boiling water and let steep for five minutes.

pitcher holding an a drawn cold water. Serv

BRIDE'S CORNER

TO GLAMORIZE GLASSES . . . frost the rims of glasses by dipping in fresh lemon juice. Sift powdered sugar on a piece of wax paper. Dip the rim first in the juice then in the sugar. Shake off the surplus sugar. Chill right side up until sugar is set.

OR . . . you can dip the rims of glasses in slightly beaten egg white then in granulated sugar. Allow to dry thoroughly.

In order to get the most flavor of lemon with ice tea and to prevent watering down, make ice cubes of frozen lemon juice. Use one or two of these in each glass along with the plain ice cubes.

Finish off all summer drinks with a scoop of refreshing lemon or orange sherbet.

Golden ice cubes for party punch . . . combine one cup each of fresh orange and lemon juice, one cup white corn syrup and one cup cold water. Freeze.

DEAR HELOISE:

Most people don't mind painting the walls of a room; it's the ceilings that cause a problem. I used to wrap a cloth around the handle of my paint brush. Now I take a small paper plate, punch a hole in it, and insert the handle of the brush through the hole.

I use the smallest paper plate I can find so that I can see what I am painting! All the spatters and drips land in the paper plate!

Then I take another paper plate and fasten it to the bottom of the can of paint with glue or cement. This not only catches paint that runs down the side of the can, but makes a handy place to put the brush.

I use a pastry brush for putting icing on cutout cookies such as rabbits, trees, stars, etc. It is easy to use and gives a "fur-like" appearance to animals, goes on faster, and you can make swirls with it!

I have found that I can hold the curtain in my right hand and use a plain fork (a salad fork is great) and "mash" the curtain over the sharp nails without pricking my finger in the least!

The tines of the fork "mash" the curtain down onto the wooden stretcher neatly, immediately, and it's an excellent substitute for my poor fingers.

Tea is the perfect base for cold summer punches. No other beverage blends as well with fruit juices or other flavorings, hot or cold.

Now here is a bonus for the men who read this column. (Some do, you know). Naturally they should be rewarded. This punch is a specialty of the house at the Moana Hotel in Honolulu. It is served in tall glasses at tables under the giant banyan tree at the back of the hotel.

MOANA BANYAN RUM PUNCH . . . Into a tall glass pour 1⅓ ozs. light rum, 1¼ ozs. unsweetened pineapple juice, ½ oz. lemon juice, ⅛ oz. guava juice and one teaspoon grenadine. Dear Ethel:

Any time you find anything slick on your hands, pick up your bottle of vinegar and pour a little bit of it over your hands . . . it will remove this slick feeling. Try it, you don't have to buy vinegar (as I am sure it is already in your cabinet).

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a great time-saver if . . . you have a nervous window shade!

I live in an old house with very high windows, and every now and then the shade "snaps up" to the top. Instead of getting my stepping-stool to reach the ring in the bottom of the cord . . . I keep a wire coat hanger handy (pulled out of shape so that the hook is at the top of the coat hanger). This is a long enough device to reach the ring of the shade and to pull it down when inserted in the hook of the shade pull.

It takes just a few seconds to get the whole job done.

CUT-GLASS CHIPS

DEAR HELOISE:

For those women who have good table glassware, a cherished vase, or a plate-glass table top that is chipped, I wonder if they know that they can rub the chipped place with an emery stick, emery board, or a piece of black emery sandpaper?

If the chip is small it can be entirely eliminated; if larger, it can be smoothed out so as not to be too noticeable. Prevents many cut lips too.

If a glass table top is chipped on the edge, one can eliminate any danger of cutting oneself by sanding it, and the chip is not unsightly.

This works on all glass, crystal, pressed glass, cut glass, regular glass and plate glass.

The antique dealers always do it.

FISH ODORS

DEAR HELOISE:

When cooking fish . . . to remove the odor from dishes, pots or pans, put a little vinegar in the dishwasher. I don't know how many dishes you will be washing but I normally use one-half cup of vinegar to a load of dishes.

Decatur

The hint about the vinegar is really terrific but I have one little note to add . . . For those of us who do not have dishwashers we can use it in our sinks or dishpan. Just add one-half cup of vinegar to your rinse water.

FOAM RUBBER

To make a smooth cut in foam rubber I dip my scissors in warm water frequently and then cut it. This works beautifully.

WHEN BABY'S GROWN

DEAR HELOISE:

After baby has outgrown his bassinet, if it is on a stand, it makes a wonderful hamper for your ironing. You can just roll it into your ironing room and no heavy lifting is necessary.

Under Kathleen Sims' Tutelage

CAKES become CLASSICS

Guests see it as the symbol of a happy wedding, an anniversary or special occasion. Others consider it an elegant touch to dining, a cake fit for a queen. But Mrs. Kathleen Sims, an expert in icing, calls it simply the art of decorating cakes

by
G. B. FISHER

Whatever it might be called it is gaining in popularity in Victoria. Modern tools have made it easier. At a recent exhibition in a downtown store there were 208 cakes on display by Victoria housewives, with decorating ranging all the way from birds and bunnies to Dunsmuir Castle and the Legislative Buildings, with an eye-catching centennial piece in the centre.

Mrs. Sims, a Victoria housewife, instructs at a Victoria night school class.

"There are cakes for hundreds of special occasions now," she states. "People are eating more sweet stuff than ever.

"Some people have no trouble learning; others encounter a little difficulty. The hardest thing is to get the knack. There's not too much in print that can help. It's a visual art. You have to watch the instructor."

The course attracted scores of housewives. This past autumn four classes spent six weeks on the elementary techniques. At this point the ladies felt they didn't want to stop; they wished to progress to the advanced stuff. So the course was extended to 10 weeks.

A graudate of the class, Mrs. Victor Smith, of 1630 Broadmead Avenue, says:

"I had never done fancy icing. I enjoyed it very much. We all did wedding cakes. My daughter got married this summer and I wanted to decorate her cake. It's lots of fun!"

The course has been held at the home of Mrs. Sims at 3428 Davidson, because for the time being, it is better adapted than any other spot.

"You should see this place after a class of 18 has been going strong," she smiles. Her good nature is infectious.

Kathleen was born at Stoke-on-Kent, England, but came to Canada as a small child.

"I can virtually say that I am a Vancouver Island product."

She attended public schools and Victoria High. At 17 she went to work, during the depression, selling at the counter of a bakery. Towards the end of the week she helped in the kitchens by putting icing on small layer and cup cakes.

"As a child I enjoyed trimming dishes by placing artistic pieces of vegetable alongside the meat. I began to like decorating cakes, especially after a friend showed me how to make roses," she recalls.

This flair might be partly inherited. Her mother was very artistic, with an interest in good living. The family table was beautifully set each day. Everything was dainty.

Kathleen was still at the bakery when the war broke out and the boys were called up. She spent most of the time decorating.

The basic equipment now is a decorating bag with coupler and nozzle. The bag is squeezed by hand and the icing forced through the nozzle onto the cake. There are five basic nozzles, each with a different pattern. They include a border, leaf, and shell tube, a writing and wide line tube. There are a hundred or so variations of these, each tip having its own unique function.

Butter cream icing is for fancy and layer cakes; royal icing, which is hard and white, for anniversary and wedding cakes. Almost any color in the book can be made for the cream icings.

All cakes must be level and even. The pupils first learn to cover a small cake with almond icing. The next two lessons are spent covering the top, the following couple the sides. The advance course includes pop-up flowers, star flowers, sweet peas, pansies, dolls, pie plates and further floral designs. One of the hardest flowers to execute is the orchid.

Pupils are pleased with thir new skills. Mrs. Margaret Blackstaffe of 1076 Colville, says:

"All I had ever done was a small cake. Just slapped on the icing. I found out when I got to the class I wasn't even making the icing properly. It has to be just right. If it's too soft the flowers won't stand up; and if it's too hard it makes a ragged edge. You can let your imagination run wild. I can send a really nice-looking cake to the church now!"

Mrs. Sims points out that designs and creations are infinite in variety.

Someone asks you for a cake for a special occasion. You think about it and come up with a pattern. Something you see suggests a new design. A pupil remarked as she passed a milliner's shop, 'Look at that hat! Wouldn't it make a nice pattern for a cake'?"

Other cakes at the recent display included Victoria's flower baskets and cluster lights, City Hall, the Bastion at Nanaimo, a large Bible cake, dolls, bonnets and baby slippers.

A chocolate beauty showed a pipe with a thin line of smoke in icing spelling out the words "Happy Father's Day." The sides were well executed, the top a gem of supportive art.

Dad must have been given quite a lift by that masterpiece.

CAPT. HARRY KINGSLEY, RCN (Ret.) knows from Experience

Little Minesweepers Did Man-Sized Jobs

A number of smaller vessels have operated on this west coast during most of the period of naval activity here, some under the White Ensign, others in varying capacities. And most of their names are recorded locally in one way or another. One particular group was known for its wartime function as the minesweepers.

In the last year of the First World War five ships were built on the Great Lakes, after the style of the North Sea trawlers, which the British Admiralty had found suitable for clearing minefields. These were named Arieux, Arras, Armentieres, Thiepval and Givenchy. They were only 136 feet in length, had a maximum speed of 10 knots, and mounted one 12-pounder quick-firing gun on a raised platform on the forecastle. Their crew consisted of one officer and 18 men, but there was accommodation for another two officers and 15 men. At full draught they drew 15½ feet aft, but only eight feet forward.

Of these five ships Armentieres, which, commissioned in June, 1919, and Thiepval, commissioned in November, 1919, were allocated to the West Coast for use by the Naval Service. Givenchy became a fisheries patrol craft and wore the Blue Ensign.

On September, 26, 1938, a minesweeper especially built for the RCN and named Nootka, was launched at Yarrows in Esquimalt harbor. She was the first vessel built for the Canadian Navy on this coast, and I had the honor to be her first captain. Two months later, on Nov. 23, her sister ship, Comox, was commissioned in North Vancouver, her first captain being Lt. Cdr. H. W. S. Soulsby, who had many years of experience behind him of these waters from his service in Armentiers.

On August 27, 1939, Comox went to the ammunition depot (then at Cole Island in Esquimalt harbor) and picked up some 20 tons of six-inch ammunition for the battery being established in Stanley Park, Vancouver. After that she proceeded to York Island, which is in Johnstone Straits, with an army detachment and was to remain there on examination duties.

In March of 1940 both Comox and Nootka sailed for Halifax, and when mines were laid off the entrance to that harbor by a German submarine later in the war, they played their part in clearing a swept channel.

To return to the earlier minesweepers. Both Armentieres and Thiepval, together with their sister ship, the Givenchy, were employed enforcing the Pelagic Sealing Treaty that had been entered into by Japan, Russia, Canada and the United States. Under this treaty the fur seals were only to be hunted by natives without firearms or power boats. Such a law was impossible to enforce, as the usual practice was to cut out the bullet marks or to drive a spear through them afterwards.

Because of the age of their boilers, both Armentieres and Thiepval were limited by now to a maximum speed of 9½ knots, but nevertheless they were employed during the winter months as rescue vessels on what was to become known as the "Bamfield Patrol."

Graveyard

In the days of sailing ships Barclay Sound had become known as "The Graveyard of the Pacific," because ships attempting to enter the Straits of Juan de Fuca often found themselves being driven on to a lee shore that was lined with savage rocks, reefs and unseen dangers. The transition to steam power and the installation of powerful lighthouses had practically done away with this hazard, but every so often a casualty occurred. Since there was no Canadian Coast Guard, the Navy had to provide what assistance it could — which, truthfully speaking, was not a great deal.

One vessel that had every reason to remember the little minesweepers, however, was a large, Mexican schooner, Chapultepec. One day in Februrary, 1926, Thiepval was at Bamfield, taking shelter at the head of the creek, when a message was received (by messenger from Pachena lighthouse) that a ship showing distress signals was in danger of drifting on to Sea Lion Rocks, a most dangerous reef off Carmanah Point. Lieutenant V. S. Godfrey was in command at this time, with myself along as an additional officer.

A full gale was blowing at the time, and I recall that the seas were actually breaking right across the 14-fathom entrance to the Eastern Channel when Thiepval emerged into the open Pacific, but she fought valiantly on, sometimes vanishing in the great sheets of spray thrown up by her passage. When finally the schooner was sighted, her sails were seen to be in shreds that stood out horizontally in the gale, and she was wallowing helplessly in the enormous south-so'west swells.

Taken in Tow

As we arrived on the scene so did the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Snohomish, who finding the Thiepval already preparing to take action, retired to her own station.

It was no easy matter to place a line aboard, and the first attempt met with failure when it was thrown back by an excitable member of the crew. Godfrey then closed the schooner (an operation which called for cool nerves and good timing under those conditions) and eventually hawsers were passed and the tow commenced.

After 20 minutes the line parted. Once more the risky business had to be gone through, but this time we managed to persuade them to pay out some of their anchor cable at the end of the line to help weigh it down. All of this had taken some time, and before it was completed both ships were so close inshore that you could actually hear the roar of the breakers.

By now it was getting dark, and Godfrey decided to try to make as much offing as possible in case the tow again refused to stand the strain. All went well until approximately 9 p.m. when course had to be altered to enter the Straits, and the line parted again. However, someone had at last been found on the schooner that could speak a modicum of English, so we floated down a lifebuoy to them on the end of a grass line and they picked it up and Thiepval hove in their tow. From then on all went well, and the disabled schooner was finally turned over to the Salvage Queen, in the vicinity of Race Rocks.

Salvage money was not applicable to the Navy, and all that Godfrey had to show for his efforts was a nice letter of thanks from the Mexican Consul.

Thiepval Lost

It is sad to relate that in these still imperfectly charted waters, of 30 years ago, the naval vessels themselves sometimes came to grief, and Thiepval ended her career on a reef in Satellite Channel of Barclay Sound, a few years later and became a total loss. I was not myself present on that particular occasion, but I had been present, again as the additional officer, when Armentieres struck an uncharted rock lying in Pipestem Inlet (Barclay Sound again) on September 2, 1925: Lieut. C. D. Donald was in command at that time and we were searching for rumrunners under the directive of the Customs Department. We went on doing our normal speed, and the fact that these vessels drew so much more aft than forward, caused her to ride up on to the rock and fall forward, leaving her propellor out of water. No amount of trying could get her off, and as the tide fell Armentieres listed over. When water began pouring over the bulwarks Donald gave the order to abandon ship, and the crew made their way down to the lifeboat station at Bamfield where, Mr. Brady, the coxswain, made us distressed mariners welcome.

After 52 days at the bottom of the sea Armentieres was raised, refitted, and again put into service.

On a Christmas Day 10 years later Lt. Cdr. Soulsby had a somewhat different experience in his old ship. Once more she was acting as rescue vessel on the Bamfield Patrol, when word was received that the motor vessel Beulah was apparently in trouble three miles to the southward of Carmanah Light. It had been snowing all day and the wind, which had been northerly, shifted first to south, then southwest and finally set from the west at about 35 to 40 knots.

Vessel in Trouble

Beulah's lights were picked up about 11 p.m., seen through squalls of mixed rain and snow, and she was seen to be close inshore, with one anchor down. She was not apparently in actual distress, so Armentieres stood by until daylight. On approaching she noted that the wind was now parallel to the shore, and the anchor appeared to be holding, but for some reason the Beulah's engines were going astern. Her deck cargo had shifted, and some of it was being washed away. One of her boats was missing, and members of the

CUCKOO IN THE THEATRE NEST?

Movie Temples Toppling

BERT BINNY reports

On Feb. 16 last, many of the citizens of San Francisco eagerly paid $12.50 apiece for the privilege of sitting in on what amounted to the obsequies attendant upon the passing of the Fox Theatre.

The building was to be demolished and a bleak, tall, uninteresting office block was to occupy the site.

The Fox, in San Francisco, like other "Foxes" in Atlanta, Philadelphia, Detroit or St. Louis, was emblematic of an era and a form. With its disappearance as, for instance, with the similar disappearance in 1960 of the Roxy Theatre in New York, another link in the chain of theatrical history was snapped forever. One may not agree with the tenor of the times represented but one cannot deny that they existed and that they exerted enormous influence on the entertainment industry.

It was an era of spectacular ostentation: ephemeral, perhaps, simply because, running so fast, it ran itself out of breath.

It was the era of sumptuous movie palaces which had started with the opening in 1914 of the Mark Strand Theatre on Broadway and arrived at its peak with the opening of the Roxy in 1927. Thus this storming of the peacock heights took only 13 years. But it began itself just 18 years after the first projection of Edison films on a rudimentary theatre screen at Koster and Bials' Music Hall—that epochal event of April 23, 1896. Edison and George Eastman had perfected their celluloid film strip by 1889. In 1892 Penny Arcades or Peepshows, later known as Kinetoscope Parlors, were in business. Thus, actually, only 35 years passed between the time of the earliest Peepshow and the grand opening of Roxy's "Cathedral of the Motion Picture." It was a meteoric career.

In a couple of ways the advent of the palatial cinema was a contradictory development. Firstly, these magnificent and ornate theatres drew within their doors not the aristocracy and the higher echelons of society but the teeming tens of thousands from the middle classes. Secondly, they attained a peak of architectural and decorative perfection at a time when the films they showed were still even soundless.

They were glorious packaging for the presentation of rather indifferent goods. Just as science today seems to be streets ahead of morality, the movie palaces of the 1920s were a mile ahead of the movies themselves.

But they drew the crowds as a honeypot draws bees. They offered everybody the opportunity to relax—even though it was only briefly—amid such majestic surroundings that they could all feel like emperors, maharajahs or sultans for the modest outlay of a dollar or so. Particularly after the market collapse of 1929, it was as if a fairy godmother occupied each and every grandiose box-office and, by virtue of a ticket rather than a wand, conferred riches, beauty, elegance and dreams-come-true on any votary who would accept them.

Then, when the warmer days arrived with every pot bursting with chickens and every garage choked up with cars, when prosperity became real and tangible, the make-believe world created by the movie palaces lost much of its Olympian exclusiveness. Dreams were coming true at home; riches, beauty and elegance were obtainable just about everywhere for a small down payment. Why seek abroad for the exotic when it could be installed in your own backyard for cash or, better still, on an extended credit plan?

Thus, and for other causes, the movie temples, like the Roman Empire, declined. And some, like the Roxy two years ago, or the Fox in San Francisco, just six months back, fell.

Naturally, the guiding geniuses behind the completition of every gigantic and sumptuous movie palace were the architect and the decorator. The era produced several of each and very notable specimens they were. In the case of the San Francisco Fox the architect was Thomas Lamb and the decorator—believe it or not—was Eve Leo, wife of the owner of the whole Fox chain, William Fox.

Eve Leo was like Oliver Cromwell in that she was "thorough." She was also like Ruth Chatterton in the film, "Female," in the matter of business sense. And, finally, she was like Inigo Jones, Grinling Gibbons and "Capability" Brown all rolled into one in the matter of her highly developed flair for decoration.

However, in the matter of embellishing her husband's theatre in San Francisco, she proceeded far beyond her usual field of activity wherein she maintained constant vigilance over all expenses, supervised installations and worried away about every detail of processing and manufacture. Now she took off to Europe and returned triumphantly with a boatload of Continental artistic treasures which excited goggle-eyed wonderment on the part of the public and cries of anguish on the part of some Fox executives who loudly bewailed Eve Leo's "extravagances."

Nevertheless she had her masterpiece—her Mona Lisa among all movie palaces. The Picture Gallery on the mezzanine promenade was her pride and joy. But now it is all gone and one may pray devoutedly that a similar fate is not in store for Eve Leo's Fox in Atlanta wherein she furnished the retiring rooms with Egyptian, Turkish and Moorish effects, personally gathered together and, no doubt, personally haggled over by her and a series of swarthy merchants in a series of Levantine bazaars.

The Wurlitzer organ at the San Francisco Fox cost $100,000 in 1929; it was sold to an American senator for $35,000 when the Fox came to an end. It was a Jesse Crawford special and similar pretentious models, designed by organist Crawford himself, remain today at Fox theatres in Detroit, St. Louis and Brooklyn, as well as at the Paramount in New York.

Lights Go Out

A lonely stage hand walked across the vast stage of the San Francisco Fox and turned off the janitor's cleaning light, watched curiously by all the occupants of the $12.50 seats. Whether they applauded or laughed or struggled with an unusual tightness of the throat, I have not been told, but, surely, this signalling that the career of the Fox was now at an end must have generated mixed feelings; probably just the same feelings as marked the final gladiatorial combat in Rome or the last of the classical Olympic Games on the banks of the Alpheus River.

History repeats itself.

Naturalists, and ornithologists in particular, will be happy to tell you that there is a bird known as the Cuckoo—cuculus canorus to you, Professor—that has the peculiar habit of laying its eggs in another bird's nest. This, naturally, relieves Mother and Father Cuckoo of all family responsibilities. They can pursue the careers of idle, social dilettantes with hardly a care in the world and, least of all, the care of parenthood. The other bird, meanwhile, goes ahead and hatches the strange egg; perhaps even proudly since it is two or three times the size of anything she could possibly lay herself. Thereafter, the young cuckoo eventually pushes all the legitimate fledglings out of the nest and, ministered to by its utterly dumb but untiring foster-parents, grows and flourishes until it can fly safely away. And no one knows for sure whether, after such an exhausting spring, the elected Mama and Papa face summer with a sense of huge relief or one of vast achievement.

This is a strange and, it would seem eminently unjust situation. Nevertheless, while it occurs annually and invariably in cuckoodom, it has a parallel in human affairs.

Close to the turn of the century the movies laid their egg in the nest of vaudeville. Tidbits of doctored newsreels, faked adventure and censored shimmies from the Chicago World's Fair were screened at the conclusion of vaudeville shows. The idea was that these movies were so unutterably bad that the patrons would scurry out of the theatre and thus empty it in plenty of time for the second house. This, in fact, worked according to plan and the movies were known as "chasers"—a term and title later discarded by the theatre and adopted in the bar-room.

But, actually, the theatrical nest was harboring a fledgling every bit as obstreperous as the young cuckoo. Movies grew and grew on a high calorie diet which included the peculiar genius of such pioneers as Georges Melies in Paris and Edwin Porter in America. They failed to fulfill the future predicted for them by the vaudeville industry—that of an outmoded novelty. Instead they dumped vaudeville out of the nest and it has never been the same since.

In America the eras of Tony Pastor, Albee, Keith, Pantages and Loew came to an end and vaudevillians transferred their activities to radio and then TV, to night club and Borscht circuits and, indeed, to commercial enterprises sponsored by captains of industry. The Palace on Mondays and the Winter Garden on Sunday evenings have long since ceased to be the meccas of all New York as the populace turned out to approve or disapprove the latest vaudeville acts.

Much the same thing happened in Britain where the Empires of Moss with headquarters at the London Hippodrome and of Stoll at the London Coliseum also faded away. There are only occasional survivors of the literally hundreds of music halls that once not only existed but positively flourished all over Great Britain.

It was, perhaps, a sad passing. The music halls and the vaudeville palaces did a wondrous job. It is worth a thought that the eminent home of ballet, Sadler's Wells, started life as a health spa and then a music hall and provided acts such a performing dogs, "aquatic drama," prize fights and even a dance item performed by the immortal Joe Grimaldi who was just over two years old at the time.

Sic transit! Just a month or two ago the Metropolitan, a London variety theatre for 99 years, folded up.

But, with the disappearance of the San Francisco Fox, it looks as if the movies which supplanted vaudeville are themselves being supplanted by something else.

By what?

Don't ask me!

Sailors Godfathers To Orphanage Pals

By

JIM BRAHAN

The Esquimalt-based destroyer escort HMCS Ottawa, now undergoing extensive refit in Victoria, will long be remembered by the children at the Protestant Orphanage on Cook Street.

PO FRED HAIRE referees a hockey game played by twins David and Deanna in the hobby and games room of the Protestant Orphanage.

The hobby room at the orphanage was completely built by the crew members of the Ottawa. The men spent many hours of their shore leave in renovating a third-floor room in the building so the youngsters could enjoy themselves there during inclement weather.

"The room was badly in need of repair and had been vacant for many years," said Mrs. Ada Barner, former matron at the orphanage. "The sailors remodelled it completely. They panelled the walls, tiled the floor and built lockers in which the children keep their hobbycrafts.

Some 25 boys and girls over the age of eight make continual use of the pace. Not only do they use it for hobbies, but many games are available there, such as ping-pong, miniature hockey, bowling and checkers. The age of eight has been set as a requisite of membership in this select company.

This ruling, set by authorities at the orphanage, eliminates the chances of having the room's equipment destroyed by a child too young to understand the value of either the games or the amount of work it takes to construct a model airplane.

The building project originally came about as a Christmastime venture.

Each year, as the festive season approaches, it is customary for ships' funds and welfare committees throughout the Royal Canadian Navy to meet and plan their activities and allocation of funds to help less fortunate. The needs of underprivileged children are always given top priority by the navy men.

At a welfare meeting prior to Christmas of 1961 HMCS Ottawa decided not only to make a financial donation but as an added venture they would also donate their own time and talents.

Lieutenant L. M. Gilliland, PO Larry Black and LS John Pegg were selected to search out a project in the Greater Victoria Area where their fellow crewmen could use their combined knowledge to the greatest advantage.

After much deliberation over a wide range of proposed projects the three decided to act upon the suggestion of turning the long-vacant room at the Orphanage into a combination hobby and games section.

A number of contractors' supply firms co-operated with the sailors and made donations of much of the building materials needed in the renovations.

Although it began as a Christmas project, it extended far into the following year before it was completed. The men could only work during the evenings and on week-ends when their ship was in port. Due to a heavy training schedule slated for the ships of the Pacific Command, Ottawa had a very limited time in Victoria throughout the whole of 1962.

Material for the floor of the room had to be purchased and this posed a problem to the crew. However funds were raised by having bingo games and raffles while at sea during off-duty hours.

Practically every man of the Ottawa ship" company contributed in some way towards the hobby room construction. If he did not actually work on the project itself, he either contributed a share in cash or helped out in running the fund-raising games and raffles.

PO Fred Haire, who piloted the building of the lockers and was in charge of the wall panelling job, calculated he spent more than 60 hours working on the room. PO Don Gunderson took charge of tiling the floors. PO Jim Beech, AB Murray Carruthers, LS Rod Gorsline and LS Joe White did the painting. CPO Bill Hewitt was in charge of all the electrical work. The removal and replacement of radiators was carried out under the supervision of PO William MacKay.

Although the renovation at the Orphanage was a sizeable task for the comparatively small crew it was actually only a portion of the work done for charitable purposes by this ship's company.

When Ottawa paid off on last May 24 for an extended refit and modernization program, some 20 local, national and international agencies benefited financially.

A total of more than $3,200 the profit of canteens and other organizations within the ship, was distributed at the direction of the crew members following a meeting of the vessel's welfare committee.

Among the recipients of donations were: Boys' Club of Victoria, Cerebral Palsy Clinic, Armed Services' Leave Centre, Conquer Cancer Campaign, Salvation Army, Red Cross Society, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, YM-YWCA, Well Baby Clinic (HMCS Naden), Victoria Order of Nurses, Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Canadian Mental Health Association, Maritime Museum of B.C., Queen Alexandra Solarium, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Multiple Sclerosis Society, Muscular Dystrophy Association, Canadian Heart Fund, and RCN Benevolent Fund.

FAITH ANGUS' STAMP PACKET

The Sierra Leone Independence overprints are justifying the prophecies made at the time of their surprise release on April 27 and are, without a doubt, the centre of interest in the world of philately today.

It was reported that 540 of the £1 stamps had been overprinted to replace that number of the spoiled 11s. value and many of these were subsequently used on the larger packets of outgoing mail. The small number of mint stamps remaining are now classed as rarities. Used copies are already bringing as much as £70-75.

As predicted, even the earliest orders to arrive were cut down to 20 per cent.

A new stamp-issuing country joined the ranks late in May when the first issues of Dubai were released. The definitive postage set is of 17 values: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 50 NP; 1, 2, 3, 5, 10, Rup.; and a definitive airmail set 20, 25, 30, 40, 50, 60, 75 NP and IL Rup. The stamps will be perf. 12 but an additional 2,000 imperf. sets of each category will be issued, all printed in bicolors on special American gummed paper. There is a postage due set of 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 15, 25 and 35 NP. The postage and airmail sets show scenes and native shellfish and the portrait of the ruler.

The Dubai government has appointed the Baroody Stamp Co. of Beilrut, Lebanon, as its agent to handle the sale of stamps.

The government of Ceylon has decided not to issue Red Cross commemoratives this year as the symbol used on the stamps would involve the inland revenue department in the unfortunate religious controversy taking place there.

* * *

The beautiful set of definitives depicting native birds and flowers, which was released by Singapore on March 10, is proving to be one of the top favorites of this year's issues. Values are 1c, 8c, 12c, 30c, 50c, $1, $2 and $5.

SO WROTE A POET AND PHILOSOPHER

Once upon a time there was an elderly professor, full of years and honors, who lived in a little cottage by the sea, and though he was known from coast to coast in all the country's halls of learning for his erudite lectures and books on philosophy, his chief delight was to sit in his window with his spaniel beside him and write little poems for children . . .

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

DR. H. T. J. COLEMAN

In fact, Dr. H. T. J. Coleman, over 90 now, and resident at 10980 Setchel Avenue, Deep Cove, for these many years, can't be bothered to discuss his books at all.

His neighbor, Mrs. Laura Baker and I went to visit him and have afternoon tea, and it was a rewarding and a most entertaining hour. He sits tall in the wheel chair to which an accident has confined him, strong-featured and white-haired, and in the fine speaking voice of the trained lecturer to whom English is material for artistry, tells amusing and revealing stories of his past and recites excerpts from the hundreds of poems which he has written over the years.

"If I were to write my reminiscences," he says, "I should call the work 'I Have Lived a Thousand Years'!"

His memory is phenomenal, and always has been. This, combined with a swift and eager brain, sent him through school at a dizzying pace. He was born on a farm in Ontario, and though he remembers hardship which was in sharp contrast to farm life as experienced by the youth of today, he loved it all. He was the eldest of six children, four boys and two girls, and though their father had hoped to raise his sons to follow in his footsteps, it was not to be. All of them had minds that clamored for learning, and, in the end, it was the eldest who saw that they got it! He himself was ready for high school at the age of nine.

He well remembers one of his earliest days in the little rural school which he first attended. Their teacher read them a full page from some work or other, and then asked the class for comments—doubtless in order to find out just how much attention the reading had received. Our young scholar responded by rising to his feet and quoting the entire thing almost verbatim.

When he was 10 his father sold the farm and bought a larger place. This was a blow to the eldest boy, who loved his home. "The gates of paradise clanged behind me then," muses the doctor, remembering that move. But by now he was a voracious reader, starved for books, and because there was almost no reading matter in the home, he went to considerable lengths to acquire it. He joined three Sunday schools — not from any deep yearning toward holiness, but because they all had libraries!

He describes, too, an outstanding Saturday morning in his early years, when his schoolmaster had required the class to return for extra work. Only two obeyed, one of them being the Coleman youngster. But for some reason or other the teacher himself failed to appear. The school was a small building of four rooms, three devoted to classes, the fourth, into which none had ventured, kept always locked. Bored and ripe for mischief, the two boys discovered that a pane in one of the windows of the mystery room was cracked. They encouraged it to crack a little further, pried away the broken glass, and squeezed through.

Dr. Coleman didn't comment on the reaction of his pal, presumably negative, but he himself was enthralled to find himself in a small library with shelves full of books! Lost and enchanted, he prowled and explored, and eventually purloined two which took his fancy—Sir Walter Scott's "Old Mortality," and Jules Verne's "Tigers and Traitors." Departing with his loot, he was immediately faced with the problem of how to keep it concealed. He finally settled, he says, for an old, dry and disused culvert. Here he hid his borrowed treasures, and here he repaired daily to read, alone and transported, in the grassy ditch.

"And that," he smiled, "was my first introduction to literature!"

"And," supplemented Mrs. Baker drily, "to crime!"

He wrote his first verses when he was 12, and won a prize for his first story. The Farmer's Advocate of London, Ont., had offered a prize for a story to go with a picture involving a boy with a wagon, and a large bear in pursuit.

"I knew all about that sort of situation," says the doctor, "so I sent in my story and won $2. An enormous sum in those days!"

Story-Teller

He was adept at spinning stories at home, too, to amuse his brothers and sisters. But parental authority was obliged to put a stop to this. The hired girl was so fascinated that she dropped everything to listen, wherefore the housework languished. Mother was having none of that!

However, his real passion seems to have been poetry, and he went on writing reams of this. Rhyme and rhythm delighted him. He had trouble with his hearing, and so when he was taken to church and couldn't follow the sermon, he amused himself by memorizing all the hymns.

The years rolled along. He was in and out of high school in short order, and ready for university. While there, however, the brilliant scholastic career was temporarily interrupted. Farmers in those earlier times had not the government assistance they now enjoy, and times were hard. Herbert was needed to help at home.

Whatever he may have felt, he responded nobly. He obtained a teaching post—for the handsome salary of $280 a year! "Well, I grew up then," he recalls.

He taught in that first school for two or three years, and then had a chance to go to North Dakota, where he was appointed principal of a small rural school in the Red River Valley, with a student body of Pennsylvania Dutch youngsters. Here he stayed for four years.

He was still very young, but about this time he was induced, rather against his will, to run for office in current elections. But not only was he neither Republican nor Democrat, he wasn't a politician of any kind, so that particular effort, he says, was a dead loss. Doubtless to his own relief, he was not elected.

His next move was to Spokane, where in an amazingly short time he became principal of the high school, and another five years went

The Simplicity of Complexity

A Review by LYNN POOLE, John Hopkins University

Beauty, unity and simplicity of all things in our cosmos comprised a concept realized by ancient philosopher-scientists, artists, poets and astronomers many centuries before the birth of Christ. To them there was no separation, no conflict between science and art, life and religion; instead, they viewed the cosmos as one magnificent, majestic realm in which there was "unity in variety."

Pythagoras of Samos, early 6th century BC mathematician, saw the universe as a state of harmonia: "the orderly adjustment of all parts of a complex fabric." He first applied harmonia to astronomy and mathematics, then "saw the same perfect order in the development of the whole in human beings Aristotle spoke eloquently on the perfect unity of science and art. In the Middle Ages, the astronomer Copernicus swept his eye across the night sky at the University of Cracow and, with emotion born of scientific investigation, exclaimed, "Beauty, born of the simplicity of the universe, is the soul of science, man and the arts."

Newtonian mechanics were discussed, absorbed and integrated by scientists, poets, artists, and philosophers. Newton himelf said, "My greatest contribution is the synthesis of the meaningful life, based on simplicity and beauty." Other Titans of science through the ages have spoken with the same creative understanding of the inevitable marriage of art and science.

Unfortunately, most modern men foraging for facts in an accelerated, swift, stacattoed, mechanistic, materialistic world lost the appreciation of this unity. Artists, poets, philosophers and essayists secluded themelves from the stream of science; lost touch with the reality of our universe. Scientists and artists declaimed the theory of the conflict between their two realms. Through such conflict the world of people was the loser.

Fortunately, today there is a glimmer of a return to the synthesis of science and art; the inevitable marriage may again be made. Recently, this return appeared as a shining star in the form of a new and exciting book, Exploring the Universe (McGraw-Hill Book Co.), written by 53 sensitive, intuitive, eminent scientists, with an introduction by Alan T. Waterman, distinguished head of the National Science Foundation.

Containing writings from Aristotle to Whitehead Exploring the Universe is a provocative, rewarding adventure into the philosophical question of the nature of science, scientific method, the relationships of scientific facts and theories—and their cumulative effect on the nature of man. Lucidly the writers define the term science, explore the basic nature of scientific research and its relation to creativity, artistry and imagination. The best known scientists, living and dead, explore the earth, our solar system, the entire universe; always expressing the alliance of science and life; emphasizing the simplicity of complexity.

I was caught at once by the first piece in the book: Dr. J. Bronowski's stimulating, succinct dissertation on the imaginative and creative processes of science and art. He describes creative imagination; details the explosive effects of ideas and brilliant concepts of great scientists; sketches with broad, understandable strokes the relations of science and art. He concludes by saying that the "creative act is alike in art and science . . . Science is the creation of concepts and their exploration into the facts . . . Discoveries in science, the works of art (of science), are exploration. The discoverer and the artist present two aspects of nature and fuse them into one. This is the act of creation, in which an original thought is born, and it is the same act in original science and orginal art."

Bronowski's introductory piece is followed by an equally stimulating companion piece by Dr. James B. Conant on the basic nature of scientific investigation. He explains to the layman in simple terms the why and how of discovery.

Exploring the Universe is not a book to be skimmed lightly; it is best savored by digesting each section slowly. Time and thought will prove rewarding; profit gained through a fuller understanding of this mis-named "scientific age" in which we live.

So Wrote a Poet and Philosopher

by. He obtained a scholarship for Columbia University, got through the three years' curricula in two, and won his degree.

"I wasn't really any marvel," he hastened to assure me at this point. "Just a bright boy, you know!"

He was that. He has since occupied various chairs in colleges all across the Dominion and below the border. He particularly enjoyed his work at the University of Colorado because he so liked the state itself. When the University of Toronto was establishing a faculty of education, he was persuaded to assist in its organization. He stayed on for some seven years, and then became dean of the faculty of education at Queens, in Kingston.

In 1919 the University of B.C., newly organized, offered him the chair of arts and science, which he accepted. He was in that post for many years, and while there earned the affectionate title of "UBC's Poet Laureate." There came a day, however, when he resigned.

"That is," he remarks, a trifle wryly, "I resigned in the same way as did the Irish maid—following a finger pointed firmly at the door!"

Advanced Ideas

Too many of his ideas and deep-rooted beliefs had proved unwelcome . . . although some 20 years later those same ideas were put into effect.

During the above passage of time the doctor had met and married his wife, Grace, a well-known and much admired singer. He himself was now doing a good deal of summer lecturing, some serious writing, and as always, for his own amusement, weaving his endless poems. He wrote about everything . . . a rose in the garden, a feather falling from some unseen bird, little happenings, and such mundane matters as washing dishes. Everybody enjoyed these.

He remembers a certain lecture on the philosophy of education delivered to a large group of scholars, to whom he said, at the finish, "Any questions?" After a slight pause there came a lifted hand. "Would you," enquired its owner hesitantly, "recite us the poem about dishwashing?"

He never at any time anticipated that his verses would have the slightest commercial value, and is in consequence rather surprised to find himself with a little published volume on the bookstands. This is entitled All About Babies—animal babies, that is—and the verses fell into Sidney publisher Gray Campbell's hands, he says, "largely because of Mrs. Baker's carelessness!" At any rate, they are making something of a hit, especially in families where there are children.

They were born, these "babies," in a car en route from Los Angeles to Vancouver, their progenitor having nothing else to do but admire the scenery . . . a totally insufficient activity for that particular mind. Hence the little book, and the poet was recently gratified to hear from the senior chaplain of the RCAF that " all his grown children had memorized the verses, and his children's children too!"

Fetching Sketches

The illustrations are fetching little creatures in black and white, done by Ted Baker, Mrs. Baker's son . . . who isn't really an illustrator at all, but a very successful architect and one of the designers responsible for the Canada Building in Brussels at the time of the International Exhibition there. Mrs. Baker said that she tried to do the illustrations herself, but her son simply told her they wouldn't do at all—so he did them himself. And this writer rather got the feeling that this was what she had had in mind all along!

Dr. Coleman is a widower now, but he isn't alone. He has countless good friends, a valet and "guardian" named George who looks after him, the friendly black cocker named Smoky, and an adopted daughter, Miss Alice Coleman, whom I didn't meet, but who is well known as a librarian doing a particularly efficient job in the schools of the Saanich peninsula. And who, says the doctor warmly, "is everything to me that a daughter could be!"

Ninety-one years represent a sizeable accumulation of time. Dr. Coleman wears them well. Wheel-chair or no wheel-chair, he is keen-eyed, firm of voice and hand. His life has been his teaching, and now is his letters, his visitors, his verse.

"I think of death," he told us that afternoon, "not as a calamity, but as a promotion to a better way of life."

And then, in lighter vein, he presented me with the following ironic little poem, which he has titled, "To a Younger Poet:"

"My son, if you would gain the critic's ear
And wholly modern be, you should adhere
To certain rules which now I shall set forth.
A strict observance demonstrates your worth.

"Firstly, a ready passport to success
Is, worship at the shrine of ugliness.
Where from its priests the truth is daily heard . . .
Beauty is now a quite discarded word!

"And secondly, a moral is taboo.
Such trivial interests are not for you.
The laurel crown comes only when you learn
With right and wrong you have no least concern.

"These precepts ponder well. And, finally,
At any cost avoid lucidity!
Your verses will be reckoned far from good
If, by some accident, they're understood!"

I meant to ask my host if he felt this way about modern art as well, but I forgot!

crew shouted from the stern that a man had gone overboard.

A run downwind showed no signs of either man or boat, and Soulsby returned to the freighter. Not knowing exactly what was required he sent a message for a salvage tug from Victoria, although two equally confused U.S. Coastguard cutters were now also standing by. About 1 p.m. the Beulah got under way, and started off up the Straits under her own steam. When the salvage tug met her she refused a tow, shortly docked safely at Ogden Point docks, near the outer breakwater.

Once arrived, the crew must have gone ashore in a body, apparently leaving no one aboard at all. Left to her own devices, Beulah quietly subsided beneath the waters of the harbor, thoroughly ashamed of the trouble she had caused, and when certain of her crew eventually returned to the berth all that they were able to see of their ship were the tops of the Christmas trees they had fastened to her mastheads.

It's Time to Plan the Celebration

SOOKE GOLD RUSH

Anniversary

By J. K. NESBITT

There's nothing quite like a 100th birthday party to get the folks in holiday mood.

We had the 100th birthday of British Columbia in 1958 and the 100th birthday of Victoria City last year, and everyone had a fine time. Therefore I'm all for 100th birthday parties.

I think there should be one next year—the 100th anniversary of the finding of gold at Sooke, when there was a rush to the Leech River, a rush which had Victoria standing on its head for several years.

Three great gold rushes fed Victoria—the 1858 rush to the Cariboo, the 1864 rush to the Leech River and the 1898 rush to the Klondike.

Certainly, the Sooke rush of 1864 is worth commemorating. Victoria and Sooke should join hands for a big party.

The adventuresome went to Sooke in various ways—by steamer from Victoria, on horseback through the rough trails and over the mountains.

An account in The Evening Express of Victoria gives us a glimpse of what was taking place:

"Such a whirl of excitement has not been witnessed in Victoria at any previous period in the history of this rising city as that which took place last evening on the arrival of the steamer Alexandra from the new gold mines at Sooke.

"As Capt. Moore's magnificent steamer approached the wharf the sound of 'nugget, nugget' was heard above the din and buzz of the crowd.

"Mr. John Allen made his voice heard distinctly and first gave the assemblage the news that a $70 nugget had been found and was on board.

"A change from grave to gay soon passed over the features of those on shore and loud cheers of rejoicing rent the air.

"In the course of the evening every street corner was occupied by numbers of men discussing the bright prospects of the colony and, what is a little singular, there was not a single unbeliever in the new Eldorado of the north to be found, or a man to express a doubt in the genuine nature of the new discoveries."

There was such a rush to Sooke that Victorians worried for fear their newly incorporated city would soon be entirely deserted: "THE GOLD FEVER—The excitement in consequence of the good news from Sooke is draining off our population rapidly. Even the inmates of the hospital have been affected by it and several have already left for the mines. Mechanics and laborers in the city are now becoming exceedingly scarce and the rate of wages has increased enormously."

Arthur Edward Kennedy was the Governor of the Crown Colony of Vancouver Island at the time and soon he was off to Sooke to see what was going on.

He sailed out of Esquimalt harbor and took the trail from Sooke to the Leech River.

The miners flocked around him and there was "a torchlight procession, a suitable tree having been felled, and each man furnished with a piece of gum wood . . . the procession proceeded to His Excellency's tent and ranged round him and sang 'For he's a jolly good fellow,' and the National Anthem with excellent effect . . . the torches lighting up the forest 'til it was bright as day.

"The governor appeared highly gratified at the demonstration . . . The men then returned to their tents and passed the greater part of the night in conviviality."

There was much complaining at the Leech River about the high price of liquor. Governor Kennedy decided a little lecture on temperance was in order.

He said that "he himself was not a teetotaler and he did not object to persons taking a glass of grog, but drink, when indulged in too much, he would impress upon them, would ruin both body and soul.

"He was sorry to say that he had observed that many of the miners, as the sailor said, 'earned their money like horses and spent it like asses'."

Jumping from rock to rock, His Excellency sprained his ankle, "which, together with the fatigue consequent upon his unwonted exertions, rendered his return to his tent both slow and laborious."

Therefore, said the newspaper account, His Excellency "relished some refreshment in the shape of a glass of good sherry and a biscuit at the tent of Mr. Norris. The gallant old governor then returned to his tent, where some more wine, sent down by the miners, was at hand."

The newspapers told Victorians what was going on at Sooke in the following dispatches:

"ROADSIDE INN — A comfortable hotel for the accommodation of travellers is about to be erected by Mr. C. A. Bayley on the road halfway between Victoria and Leech River."

"BAYLEY'S PACK TRAIN — A large crowd assembled yesterday on Yates Street to witness the departure of Mr. C. A. Bayley's first pack train of horses to the mines. The animals were well loaded and took away a ton-and-a-half weight of goods."

"FOUR-HORSE COACH — Messrs. Bowman and Halsey have put on a daily four-horse coach to the junction of the Sooke trail."

"Log houses have been constructed and several more are in the course of erection, evidencing an intention on the part of many miners to winter on the creek."

ALONG THE TRAIL to Leech River there were refreshments for the miners. The sign announces "wines, liquors and cigars."

"ACCOMMODATION AT LEECH RIVER—We are informed by visitors to Leech River that Johnston's Mount Arrarat Hotel is a most valuable acquisition to the mining community. It contains about a dozen rooms and the whole establishment is admirably fitted up for the comfort and convenience of its patrons . . .

"What will add considerable attraction to the place is the fact that Mr. Rory McDonald has opened an establishment near the junction where the weary traveller can not only rest in comfort, but can enjoy a meal prepared in the unrivalled style which has earned for Mrs. McDonald the reputation of being the best cuisiniere in the country."

Every time a steamer reached Victoria from Sooke there was great excitement: "The steamer Alexandra arrived . . . and was the happy bearer of the most gladsome intelligence to all interested in the future of the country.

" . . . a large crowd collected at Pickett and Company's wharf. No sooner had the steamer hauled alongside than the announcement flew round of a $90 nugget being on board and that good diggings had been struck on the Leech.

"The people were immediately thrown into a feverish state of excitement and the fortunate finder of the nugget was hustled and jostled and besieged with questions until he was glad to make his escape to Wells, Fargo and Co.'s office, where he was followed by a number of people, and directly the nugget was held up to the public gaze three hearty cheers were given for Sooke."

Naturally, with all the goings-on at Sooke, Mayor Thomas Harris was to see at first hand what was happening. He and Mrs. Harris mounted horses and away they went, as described in The Colonist:

"Mayor and Mrs. Harris . . . having left Victoria a cheval at 4 o'clock, reached Kibblewhite and Ashe's about 7. Taking refreshments there, they started again at a quarter past seven, travelling over the mountainous trail and arriving on Kennedy flat at a quarter past nine, thus performing the distance from Victoria to the Leech River in five hours and a quarter, including stoppages.

"His Worship appeared in excellent spirits and after partaking of the good things provided at Rory's Hotel sat enjoying a social glass with his friends till 12 o'clock.

"The hotel has good accommodation for man and horse and all the delicacies of the season, including deer and bear meat . . ."

There was all this, and very much more, to the gold rush to Sooke and I think it an event that should be duly commemorated next summer. Now is the time to start the plans.
